BECK EXPOUNDS LIQUOR LAW

ILLNESS FORCES ADMIRAL JONES TO QUIT PARLEY

Order Big Cruiser Champion Home.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, who with Admiral William V. Pratt heads the commission of expert advisers to the American delegation at the London naval conference, is going home on the first ship available on account of illness, it was announced tonight.

Admiral and Mrs. Jones expect to sail on the Berengaria next Wednesday. Admiral Jones was not feeling well when he arrived at London with the party a month ago. He has been in his office daily, however, until a few days ago when his condition became worse and he was ordered to his bed by Commander M. F. Higgins, a naval surgeon, who is looking after the health of the American delegation.

Suffers Stomach Ulcers.

Higgins called into consultation Dr. J. J. Conybeare, warden of Guys hospital, as X-ray expert, and H. M. Turner, radiologist. After an X-ray examination the physicians diagnosed the admiral's ailment as ulcers of the stomach. They expressed the opinion that his condition is not critical, but ordered him to return to America for rest.

According to the admiral's friends his illness has been aggravated by worry over the course that has been pursued by the American delegation in adhering to Great Britain on the cruiser question. Admiral Jones was the chief champion of big cruisers to maintain national defense and for the protection of American commerce on the high seas.

When the American proposals were made public, showing the repudiation of his position, Admiral Jones was reported to be on the verge of resigning, but all he would say was that he had not made plans to leave.

U. S. Envoys in Open Split.

Despite the discouragement encountered in the American delegation, between the United States and Great Britain, it was learned today, have not given up hope of inducing the United States into an agreement to join European nations in pledging themselves to restrain aggression or other violations of the Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact.

The plan is to make such engagements by America the price of any agreement on navy limitation approaching that degree of reduction for which President Hoover is striving. The American delegation is ignorant of this strategy, but is divided on the attitude to assume toward it.

U. S. Rides at "Entanglement."

It is safe to say, however, that, as a result of the opposition manifested by the senate in the last few days to any proposition even appearing to entangle the United States in European affairs, whatever the American delegation may concede as the price for a naval agreement will specifically declare us not to be bound in advance to any course of action to make a violator of the Kellogg pact and therefore will be meaningless.

The American delegation is split into two major factions on this question. Although all members are a unit in opposition to committing America to the Mediterranean, Atlantic, or other local pacts of even a merely consultative character like the Pacific non-fortification pact, there is one faction, headed by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, that favors undertaking an appeal to the Kellogg anti-war pact.

This plan envisages a consultation pact only on a breach or threatened breach of the Kellogg pact and makes the investigation of a controversy between nations producing such a breach.

Robinson on Other Side.

The other faction of the delegation, which is headed by Senators David A. Reed and Joseph T. Robinson, is opposed to hooking up any implementation of the Kellogg pact with the consultative proposition. Members of this faction regard the consultative proposition as a visionary notion of the practicability of convoking a mass meeting of nations to deal with an infraction of the anti-war pledge.

The war would be over, they contend, before such a mass meeting could agree on a verdict in the trial of the offending nation.

The dominating motive of the French support for a security pact is widely known among Americans as a persistent scheme of European powers, encouraged and abetted by American pacifists and internationalists, to get the United States into the league of nations by the back door.

5 PLANES POISE FOR EIELSON AIR FUNERAL PARADE

MOTORSHIP NANUK, North Cape, Siberia [via Point Barrow, Alaska], Feb. 22.—Five airplanes, two of them Russian Junkers, were ready here today for the aerial funeral procession of nearly 1,000 miles to Fairbanks, Alaska, with the bodies of Carl Ben Eielson, noted arctic flyer, and his mechanic, Earl Borland, who were killed last November on a flight to the Nanuk.

Commander Slipenov, Russian aviator, brought the bodies of Eielson and Borland here yesterday from the spot 90 miles southeast of North Cape, where their plane crashed.

With a companion flyer, Gladyshev, Commander Slipenov will accompany the bodies to Nome, permission for the soviet airmen to land on Alaskan soil having been granted by Washington officials.

RICH MAN BESTS 13 RESCUERS AND KILLS SELF

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Three doctors, two chauffeurs, half a dozen police officers, a nurse, a blood donor and relatives waged a vain battle against death today as Herbert R. Williams died at 5:05 p. m. The police believe he slashed himself on the arms and neck with a razor blade at 8 a. m. He had returned recently to his home from a sanitarium. Three doctors were summoned in rapid succession. They took fifty stitches in Williams' neck and wrists. Later Williams, with his hand, tore out several of the stitches.

Monaco Gets Princess Back; Prince Leaves

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
(Picture on page 9.)

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, Feb. 22.—This was a day of deep surprises for Monaco, which is still seething with gossip over the announcement of Prince Pierre's suit for separation from his wife, the hereditary Princess Charlotte of Monaco. The princess had fled from the tiny country, as a result of a final rupture of relations with her husband, going first to San Remo and then taking a villa at Roquebrune, only 500 yards from the Monaco border. Up to this morning she had turned a deaf ear to the entreaties of her father, Prince Louis, ruler of the principality, to return.

Today's first sensational development in the affair occurred when Princess Charlotte calmly drove up to the royal palace, went in, and stayed.

Then Prince Makes Exit

The second sensation to startle the population was Prince Pierre's sudden departure from the principality with bag and baggage shortly after noon. Where he went is a mystery.

The royal couple's two children, little Prince Rainier, heir to the throne, and his sister, Princess Antoinette, were left by their father in the care of the duchess of Vendome at her villa in Cannes. As has been the case throughout the affair, complete secrecy was maintained in official circles tonight.

An attempt to interview Princess Charlotte yesterday resulted in a doubling of the guard of private detectives and servants which was thrown about her villa at Roquebrune. It had also been reported that a royal agent visited the Villa Pensiola last night in a final effort to persuade the princess to return. Her return today may have been influenced by this visit.

Doctor Linked with Scandal.

Dr. Dalmas, prominent Monegasque physician, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the sudden flight of the princess and who was said to be in San Remo several days ago, was also seen several times yesterday in Monte Carlo.

Although rumors mention incompatibility, other rumors have been rampant for over a year concerning the relations between Prince Pierre and his attractive 35 year old wife. The local press, which has been well muzzled, omits to mention in its accounts the fact that the princely couple have been the subject of public interest for months.

Hurled Royal Bric-à-Brac.

Prince Pierre is reputed to have a fiery temper which is said to have led him at times to throw royal bric-à-brac at his spouse. It is believed that this is one of a number of reasons why Princess Charlotte grew tired of conjugal life in her historic castle overlooking the Mediterranean.

Aristocratic Monegasque families, recalling the origin of the princess, say that "she is not a member of the nobility by birth" and are saying to one another, "I told you so." This refers to the fact that the princess was born from a morganatic marriage.

Coming on top of Monaco's strained political situation, the affair has caused wide agitation in government circles. It has even been suggested that a Red member of the municipal council encouraged Princess Charlotte in her action as an adroit political move to create a royal scandal. It is a well known fact that the minority opposition party would not spare any effort to overthrow the monarchy and establish a republic.

GUARD HOME AFTER THREAT BY EX-MATE

The Wilmette police last night were guarding the home of W. F. Bolinger, 1238 Central avenue, Wilmette, a landscape gardener, to protect him and his wife Helen from a threatened attack by Merle Cox, 31 years old, Mrs. Bollinger's former husband.

The police were told that Cox threatened to kill Bolinger because of his marriage to the former Mrs. Cox. His enmity toward Bolinger first became known on Dec. 30 when he visited Mrs. Otto Stillson of Glenview, a friend of the Bolingers, and demanded Bolinger's address at the point of a gun, according to Mrs. Stillson's story to the police.

Mrs. Stillson refused to give him the address, but on Feb. 12, she said, he returned with five other men, all of them armed with pistols and two of them carry shotguns, and forced her to tell where Bolinger lives. She telephoned Bolinger and he notified the Wilmette police.

CHICAGO CAN'T HAVE WRIGHTS' FIRST AIRPLANE

Inventor Expects to Leave It Abroad.

BY ROBERT WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Dayton, O., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The first flying machine of the Wright brothers is destined to remain in the science museum at South Kensington, England, unless the controversy between the Smithsonian institution and Orville Wright is settled to the satisfaction of the quiet little man who built and flew it.

Your correspondent journeyed to the drab little workshop where the first flyer now spends most of his time to inquire into the possibility of bringing the first airplane to Chicago for exhibition in the new industrial museum when it is completed in 1932.

Manifests Interest in Plans.

The inventor was smiling and gracious. He inquired about the plans for the museum, but held out little hope that the request of the Chicago museum directors could be granted.

"It may be possible to bring the machine to Chicago for temporary exhibition, but it is only a vague possibility and I'd rather not speak of such nebulous things," he said. "If this controversy is settled once and for all in my lifetime—and I don't expect that it will be—I will bring my airplane back to America. If not, it will remain forever abroad. Generations to come will wonder why the first airplane is resting in a foreign museum when it first flew from their native land. They will inquire, and by inquiring, I hope, will find the truth."

To Orville Wright there is less distinction in being the first man to fly than in being the first man to build an airplane capable of flight. That is the crux of the whole controversy, he pointed out today.

Owes It to Brother's Memory.

"There were in 1903 a hundred men daring and skillful enough to fly that first machine," he said, pointing to the half dozen photographs of that queer mechanical bird which provide the only adornment for his office. "But Wilbur and I were the only ones able to build it and I owe it to his memory to see that history is cleared on that point.

"There was no question of the priority of our machine until 10 years after Langley's death. In 1914 the Curtiss people requested permission to take the Langley plane from the institute for the purpose of making tests. At Hammondsport the machine was altered in many particulars for the tests.

"Subsequently a sign was placed over the machine at the institute which read, 'The first heavier than air machine capable of sustained flight.' Later it was admitted that changes were made, but these changes were not listed. In order to clear up all doubt the Smithsonian institution must record all those changes, that aeronautical engineers will be able to see plainly that Langley's machine was never capable of sustained flight."

Engineering Skill Comes First.

"What of the future of aviation?" I asked him. But the question was a mistake, for Orville Wright never talks about the future. Today is a different matter.

"The recent depression of the financial structure of the industry is really a serious matter," he said, "but I think it will prove a healthy thing in the end. There was too much Wall street and too little engineering skill. Overfinancing and overproduction were the troubles. Great companies were formed and then set about to find a reason for their existence. Great numbers of planes were built with no one to fly them. Now that the industry has had its lesson it is ready to go ahead with sound progress."

Mr. Wright does not believe that safety in flying will be found in the construction of huge, high powered planes.

Tri-Motor Plane Designs Faulty.

"The bigger planes require a strong bridge structure and this necessitates more weight, which I do not believe is conducive to safety," he said. "There seems to be something faulty in the design of tri-motored planes. When one motor fails there is a tremendous pull to one side and a great strain upon the controls. Until the center motor of the three is made to be capable of sustaining the plane in air, this design will not be considered safe. This may be worked out some day."

"Will the future airplane be a development of conventional design?" he was asked.

"I do not know; do you, or does any one else?" he countered. "We cannot tell, but I live in hope that some one will develop something better."

Portrays Real Washington: A Human Being

Washington Day

CHICAGO—Judge Henry Horner pictures Washington as a human being.
CHICAGO—Frank J. Loesch uses Washington as text to boys and girls.
ALEXANDRIA, Va.—President and Mrs. Hoover visit tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon.
WASHINGTON, D. C.—Senate and house hold anniversary services.

George Washington the man, as distinguished from George Washington the mythological figure, was pictured by Probate Judge Henry Horner yesterday at the Washington's birthday luncheon of the Irish Fellowship club in the Hotel La Salle.

Under the judge's verbal sketching the first president emerged a different figure than the "pen of the romanticist" has made of him. Instead of the correct fastidious man with immobile countenance which was once the accepted portrayal, Washington appeared as a brawny, physically perfect human being, standing six feet, two inches tall, weighing 210 pounds, and "with the muscles of a blacksmith."

Honest About His Drinking.

"And," added Judge Horner, "after Washington was a grown man he also did a fair amount of polite drinking. He had a still at Mount Vernon—as was the custon among the planters of the day—and his recipe for small beer would do justice to the most expert brewer of our time. He was honest about his drinking, too.

"When he presided over and was the genius and guiding spirit of that great constitutional convention of 1787 which produced the constitution of the United States—he was fair enough about the personal liberties of the citizens of his own and succeeding generations. He did not write into that sacred instrument an 18th amendment, or anything which sounded like it. And he didn't have to invite a federal prohibition agent into his home so he could drink in peace.

Won the Wet Vote.

"Washington ran for the Virginia legislature when he was in his twenties and his campaign expenditures amounted to $195. Almost all of that, according to his carefully kept books of account, went for rum in hogsheads and bottles, and hard cider. And the wet vote was with him."

Cautioning his listeners against regarding the revolutionary patriot as being of the "Little Lord Fauntleroy" type, Judge Horner pictured Washington as an athlete, a fine swimmer, fencer and wrestler, who could also pitch a stone across the Rappahannock river, and aim his musket as though it were a pistol.

A Sample of His Poetry.

"He had human frailties," Judge Horner went on. "He spelled badly—and he wrote abominable poetry to the fair sex." The judge gave the following as a sample of it:

Ah, woe's me, that I should love and conceal;
Long have I wished, but never dare reveal
Even though severely Love's pains I feel.
Xerxes the great wasn't free from Cupid's dart
And all the greatest heroes felt the smart.

"His poetry was about as bad as Lincoln's," said Judge Horner. "Lincoln wrote this in his old school copy book:

Abraham Lincoln
His hand and pen;
He will be good
But God knows when.

"Even Woodrow Wilson responded to the poetic muse, but in more modern style," Judge Horner added. "Here is one of his:

There was a young girl from Missouri
Who took her case to the jury.
She said, "Car ninety-three Ran over my knee,"
But the jury said, "We're from Missouri."

"We don't want a man for a hero

NATION REACTS TO HIS ATTACK ON PROHIBITION

War on Dry Regime Is Acclaimed.

That government will last longest which refrains from making undue demands upon the liberty of the individual.

The patriots who signed the constitution believed that the best way to make men respect man-made laws was to make such laws worthy of respect.

The constitution never uses a word idly.

If our constitution continues to disintegrate in its essential principles as much as during the last twenty-five years it may not survive beyond the experience of children who now are living.

The constitution can not save itself. Only the American people can save it.

And the Republican party can not afford to have the living death of prohibition saddled on its shoulders, a fact which emphasizes the characteristic sagacity of President Coolidge, who managed to keep out of the whole dreadful mess.

James M. Beck.

[Representative from the First Pennsylvania congressional district—population nearly 350,000—and the foremost constitutional lawyer in congress.]

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—James M. Beck, former solicitor general of the United States, made his first public utterance on prohibition two weeks ago in the house of representatives. This dispatch contains his second, and it is not less forthright than the first.

The interview does not recross the ground covered by the speech. It breaks new ground and lets in new light. It unfolds, in Mr. Beck's own words, the prompt reaction of the country to the views of a man who has been thirty-four years in public life, who is today considered the highest authority in congress on the constitution of the United States, who has received honorary degrees from nine universities and colleges, and whom both Volsteadians and anti-Volsteadians take seriously.

To onlookers that reaction is astounding. To Mr. Beck, who is ever wary of resounding words, it is what he prefers to call "illuminating." The fact remains that his mail of comment and congratulation and criticism on the speech is being delivered by the sackful and that he is being acclaimed as the possible Seward ("Higher Law" Seward, who was Lincoln's secretary of state) of the movement for rationalization of the liquor laws.

Want Him for Candidate.

Many of the letters suggest that now it is Mr. Beck's duty to put himself in the running for senator from Pennsylvania or for governor of Pennsylvania, or for President of the United States.

On those suggestions, his comment—coupled with his wise, placid smile and his customary Shakespearean allusion—is:

"I did not make that speech in order to hold my present office or to get another. Like Hamlet, my ambitions could be bound in a nutshell."

"I have naturally," he continued, "been greatly gratified and equally amazed at the reaction to my speech. I have never before spoken on the subject of prohibition, either in congress or elsewhere, although I had had positive convictions about it even before the eighteenth amendment was adopted." It did not require my experience as solicitor general to convince me that the law was unworkable, for I have never had any faith in the efficacy of sumptuary legislation."

Asked Why He Spoke.

"What," I asked, "was the immediate cause impelling you to make the speech at a time when so many public men regard any emphatic utterance against prohibition as perilous to their political future?"

"Possibly," he replied, "I should not have addressed the house at all on the subject had it not been that the speech of Mr. Fort of New Jersey, which was delivered a week previously, contained certain statements which seemed to me to require an answer. I was naturally gratified at the courteous attention of the house, but any member can get the attention of the house if he has something to say and is really sincere in what he says. The house is intolerant of only one thing, and that is "buncombe."

The response of the house to Mr.

Beck on Feb. 7 was, in truth, not the least significant feature of a memorable day. At the close of his hour of close-knit discourse, the house rose en masse—both Republicans and Democrats, both Volsteadians and anti-Volsteadians—and applauded him.

That demonstration marked the difference between the Beck type of anti-prohibition expounder and the La Guardia type of anti-prohibition stormer. La Guardia makes an outcry. Beck defines and clarifies. La Guardia rails and rants, and the house murmurs, "Atta boy," laughs and dismisses speech and speaker from its mind when the clamor has subsided. When Beck finishes, the house says, "There, whether you agree with him or not, was a statesman speaking."

That is the difference.

When Beck speaks he displays courtliness unmixed with blarney, and erudition unencumbered by pomposity, and he is the only man in the house who could quote the "Antigone" of three and twenty centuries ago in support of a constitutional point against Volsteadism and make the house listen with approving nods to the quotation.

Carries 68 Years Easily.

With those hints on the manner and the manners of this veteran constitutionalist, who carries his 68 years easily, you will follow with the more relish his searching analysis of constitutional aspects of Volsteadism to which the greater part of this, his first interview on prohibition, is devoted.

But first, Mr. Beck expressed his views on what is the real state of the real mind of America on the question.

"I have had," he said, "a reaction from the country which, to me at least, is very illuminating. During the fortnight which has passed since the delivery of my speech on 'The Revolt Against Prohibition,' I have received several thousand letters and telegrams, and they are still coming in by the hundreds from all over the country."

"And what is their drift?"

"A hasty reading of them impresses me with three facts.

Men Feel Deeply.

"The first is that less than one per cent of them are critical of my position; the rest are not only intellectually responsive, but show an emotional feeling that clearly indicates how deeply men of all classes in this country now think upon this subject.

"The second fact is that a number of these letters come from clergymen of all denominations—Catholic priests, Jewish rabbis, and Protestant ministers and, with a few exceptions, all of them endorse my position.

"Some of the letters from Baptist and Methodist clergymen said that they had originally believed in the policy of prohibition, but that ten years of experience of enforcement has compelled them to change their opinions.

"The third thing that impresses me is the growing feeling among many Republicans, many of them leaders in their respective districts, that the Republican party can not afford to have the living death of prohibition saddled on its shoulders, a fact which emphasizes the characteristic sagacity of President Coolidge, who managed to keep out of the whole dreadful mess."

Many Editorials Written.

Reaching for bundles of newspaper clippings which lay on his desk alongside presentation copies of recent Shakespearean monographs, Mr. Beck continued:

"In addition to the letters, I have had probably two hundred editorial comments and, while some of these are critical and a few abusive, yet the great majority are distinctly favorable. In these, again, I note the emotional side of the utterances, and it is clear to me that the American people have ceased to regard this question as a mere abstract economic question and, whether they favor the law or not, their emotions are profoundly disturbed by the eighteenth amendment after a trial of ten years."

Letters from manufacturers and comments by economists have especially interested him.

Finds Change in Opinion.

"Undoubtedly," he said, "the eighteenth amendment became a part of the constitution through the joint efforts of many churches, which viewed the question in its moral aspects, and of manufacturers, who believed that it was for the economic benefit of the country. I find in both classes a distinct change of opinion. Many learned and devout clergymen, who once believed in the law, no longer do so."

Industrial plants—some of them among the greatest in the country—are represented in this mass of correspondence, and, in epitomizing the drift of that part of it, Mr. Beck said: "I note a change of mind among many employers of labor as to the real economic value of the eighteenth amendment. For example, a distinguished official of one of the large stock yards companies tells me that the conditions in the stock yards are now much worse because, while fewer men may be intoxicated, yet those that are are much more crazily and dangerously intoxicated by reason of the bad whisky they are able to get.

Industrialist Changes Front.

"I could instance another large industrial magnate, but can not name him without his permission. He, too, was a believer in the eighteenth amendment ten years ago, but he recently sent a questionnaire to the many superintendents of his large industrial enterprise and found, to his surprise, that the answers were almost uniform in stating that the conditions as to the sobriety of employés were worse instead of better.

"My own opinion," he added, "is that if the eighteenth amendment is essential to the economic welfare of the United States, it seems strange that that has not been the experience of Germany. Having regard to the poverty of its natural resources, Germany is, or at least was before the war, the most efficient industrial state in the world and it managed to reach that position without denying the working man the opportunity to get a glass of beer."

Turning from the mounting piles of letters, Mr. Beck swept into a ten minute analysis of certain constitutional fundamentals bearing upon solution of the Volstead problem, fundamentals which he believes have been strangely ignored in discussion of the problem.

Not a "Nullificationist."

"Some of those," he said, "who criticise my attitude denounce me as a 'nullificationist,' but no term could be more unhappy.

"For it is an invaluable attribute of the constitution of the United States that it has vested in congress discretion, and it is precisely this attribute which gives the constitution the flexibility and vitality which make it an instrument not for the dead but for the living.

"Section 2 of the eighteenth amendment clearly lodged in the congress of the United States and the legislatures of the several states 'power' to enact enforcing legislation. It is significant that the eighteenth amendment did not say that they 'shall' do so. It simply give them the power.

"Wisely Discriminated."

"Whenever a political discretion is lodged in congress, the constitution uses the expression 'the congress shall have power' and when no such discretion is vested in the congress, the constitution, with its characteristic precision, says 'congress shall' do a thing, or 'congress shall not' do a thing. It wisely discriminated between matters which required an imperative mandate and matters which were left to the political discretion of congress, as the great council of the republic. The logical order of the constitution clearly indicates, for the first seven sections of article I, consist almost wholly of imperative 'shalls' as to which congress has no discretion whatever. As, for example, the mandate that congress 'shall' enumerate the people by a decennial census for the purpose of apportionment.

"Then by section 9 there is provided a long series of 'shall nots,' as to which congress has no political discretion whatever. For example, the provision that no bill of attainder shall be passed, or any preference given to the port of one state over the port of another state, or that no title of nobility shall be granted by the United States. These imperative 'shall nots' leave no political discretion to congress whatever.

Intent Is Made Plain.

"Section 10 then provides for a number of 'shall nots' with respect to the states. As, for example, the statement that no state shall lay any impost or duty on imports or exports.

"Having thus provided with an emphasis worthy of the ten commandments, what the congress shall or shall not do, and what the states shall not do, section 3 of Article I. is a lengthy statement of matters which are committed to the political discretion of congress, and such grant of power is uniformly in the words, 'the congress shall have power,' etc.

"Throughout the rest of the document the constitution, with its uniform clarity, always uses with precision the words 'shall' and 'may.' As, for example, in Article IV., section 2, which provided that the 'citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states,' but section 3 provides that 'new states may be admitted by the congress into this union' and 'congress SHALL have power to dispose of—the territory or other property belonging to the United States.'"

Recalls Early Experience.

As he warmed to his analysis Mr. Beck recalled a signal instance of the application of the theory of political discretion in the annals of his native commonwealth

"This theory," he said, "created by the constitution itself, was quite familiar to me when I was a young lawyer in Philadelphia.

"In 1874, at the height of the agrarian agitation, which was then sweeping the country, the people of Pennsylvania, by a majority of 175,000, as I recall it adopted a new constitution. One article dealt with railroads and its provisions were very drastic. It left to the legislature the power to enact enforcing legislation and, as to many of these provisions, the legislature did not act and has never acted to this day.

Railroad Situation Cited.

"When attempts were made to enforce these provisions in the court, the court replied that the constitutional provisions could not be enforced without enforcing legislation and, as the constitution went entirely too far in ham-stringing the railroads, the people of Pennsylvania, from 1874 until the present day, have apparently sustained successive legislatures in refusing to pass enforcing statutes for impossible regulations.

"Of course the better illustration is the fugitive slave clause of the constitution of the United States. This section of article IV constituted a peculiar obligation because it was a part of the original compact between the states, which resulted in the constitution. In this case the word 'shall' was used and not the mere expression 'have power,' for the provision was that any slave, who escaped into a free state, 'shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.' Nevertheless, congress for many years exercised a political discretion as to the kind of enforcing statutes and, when finally in 1850 and as a measure of compromise, a most drastic fugitive slave law was passed, the result was an uprising in the north, which culminated in the civil war. Mr. Webster's attempt to put teeth in the fugitive slave law not only killed him politically, but ended the Whig party. Out of the ruins of that party, the Republican party was born."

Discusses Mandatory Section.

Taking up the mandatory section of the eighteenth amendment, Mr. Beck said:

"I quite appreciate that the first section of the eighteenth amendment does contain an express prohibition of the 'manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors.' While this prohibition has no affirmative force in and by itself, without enforcing statutes, it has a negative force and I can best illustrate my meaning by a reference to the commerce clause of the constitution. That clause gave congress the power to regulate foreign and interstate commerce. For one hundred years there was no affirmative exercise of the power, but it was negatively operative to the extent that it prevented any state from passing laws which burdened either interstate or foreign commerce.

"Similarly, the first section of the eighteenth amendment does operate to prevent any affirmative legislation, either by congress or the states, which would legalize what that section expressly prohibits. If, for example, congress or any state legislature should pass a law to permit the sale of ardent liquors, the Supreme court could declare such a statute void, but, if the congress failed to pass any enforcing statute whatever, the prohibition of the first section is unenforceable in the federal courts."

Congress Has Discretion.

Analysis led to solution without nullifications, for Mr. Beck added:

"In other words, congress has a political discretion as to whether it will pass enforcing statutes or not, but if it passes an enforcing statute, it must be in harmony with section 1 of the eighteenth amendment. In exercising this discretion, congress has a right to define what an 'intoxicating liquor' is and, within reasonable limits, the judiciary would accept such definition. In other words, the judiciary would not declare a beverage intoxicating which congress refused to class as an intoxicating beverage, unless the fact of such intoxicating quality was clear beyond reasonable doubt. It was upon this theory of a political discretion in making such definition that the Volstead law drew the deadline at one-half of one percent, although it is common knowledge that it would be very difficult for any one to become intoxicated upon so slight a percentage.

"The political discretion is a continuing one and obviously a new congress can determine that a larger percentage of alcoholic content is not to be classed among 'intoxicating liquors.' If, therefore, congress should exclude from enforcing statutes light wines and beers of a small alcoholic content, it is altogether probable that the Supreme court would accept such definition and hold such a statute valid, because it is the unbroken doctrine of the Supreme court that it will never invalidate a statute unless its repugnancy to the constitution is clear beyond a reasonable doubt, and the court will generally assume any state of facts that congress assumes as the basis of legislation."

Trial By Jury Defended.

On what he believes to be the menacing and devious—he used the word 'pretends" in describing them—proposals of the Wickersham report in the matter of trial by jury or no trial by jury in liquor cases, Mr. Beck was scathing.

"I have been criticized," he said, "for the expression 'fanatical drys,' which I used in my speech. I did not mean that all drys are fanatics. Many estimable men and women sincerely believe in prohibition and it is a question about which men of equal wisdom and candor can differ. I was referring to that class of prohibitionists who would tear up the rest of the constitution to preserve the eighteenth amendment. One evidence of this is the disposition to do away with trial by jury and to penalize any appeal to this ancient right of the English speaking race.

"I am not an unmixed admirer of jury trial in civil cases. Given a superior judiciary, I would rather have the complicated issues, which are triable in a civil action, disposed of by a learned judge than by the haphazard judgment of twelve men, many of whom do not even know what the trial is about. But in a criminal case where the liberty of the citizen is at stake, a jury trial has always been the bulwark of an unhappy individual who finds that the state, with all its resources, is attempting to end his liberty by imprisonment. There I believe in the constitutional right of trial by jury, for, apart from the fact that a jury has often a very shrewd judgment as to the credibility of witnesses, it is often the last bulwark of defense for an individual as against an intolerant prosecutor who has behind him all the resources of the state.

Entitled to Jury Trial.

"It is true that the proposed section of the Wickersham report pretends to give a right to a jury trial, but it does so under conditions that will deter the prisoner from invoking the right. The Supreme court has said, in the case of Callan vs. Wilson, that such an election between remedies does not fulfill the constitutional mandate, which requires a jury trial in criminal cases, and therefore the only open question is whether an offense, which is punishable by imprisonment of six months, can be called 'trivial' in the common law sense. In my judgment, the mere declaration of a statute that a given offense under the Volstead law is 'trivial' cannot deprive the accused of his ancient right of trial by jury."

Mr. Beck, to whom a glass of wine with his dinner, or the lack of it, is a matter of indifference, resents the designation of those to whom the Constitution of the United States is not a matter of indifference as wets.

"Personally," he said, "I deplore the nomenclature which defines those who, like myself, believe that the eighteenth amendment was a stupendous folly, as 'wets.' It implies that with us the question is merely one of physical appetite, whereas, as a matter of fact, we are far more deeply concerned with the welfare and harmony of the Union and the restoration of free institutions under the constitution. Undoubtedly to many it is a question of the right to gratify a personal habit. Even these can say to the few clerical Malvolios who are zealots in this matter, as did Sir Toby Belch, 'Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?'

"However, it is not a question of 'cakes and ale' with millions of Americans. They are beginning to feel as deeply on these drastic laws to regulate private conduct as did the free people of the north and west on the subject of making them involuntary slave catchers."

When I plied the representative from Pennsylvania with questions as to "next step" in the movement to assuage the evils of bogus prohibition the old constitutionalist replied:

"As to the future, it seems to me that the main thing is, in the first place, to impress the American people with the fact that congress may, within reasonable limitations, exercise a political discretion in enforcing the eighteenth amendment without being chargeable with nullification. When the people realize that, they will lose the sense of fatality which has hitherto prevented many from giving serious consideration to the remedy for the problem. When they realize that they will begin to send representatives to congress who will meet this grave problem in a constructive way.

Remedy in People's Hands.

"Hitherto many thoughtful men have dismissed the subject with the consideration that the amendment is in the constitution and that it cannot be repealed and that nothing remains but to accept the yoke. If the American people realize that the remedy lies in their own hands and that congress has a wide, although not an unlimited, political discretion in the matter, they will begin in their usual practical way to solve the problem and I have no doubt will solve it as they have solved many problems before."

In closing the long interview the man who represents in congress seven wards of a city in which—so Assistant District Attorney Vincent Carroll of Philadelphia declared last week—"40 per cent of the crime is due to illicit liquor" said he wished to share with his countrymen two passages from the writings of their foremost philosopher. Though the words were uttered nearly a century ago he thought them extraordinarily timely, saying:

"I recall the wise words of Emerson, our greatest intellect since Franklin, and not second to him as a wise philosopher."

Beck Quotes Emerson.

Then with quiet relish he read out this passage:

Republics abound in civilians who believe that the laws make the city; that grave modifications of the policy and modes of living may be voted in or out, and that any measure, though it were absurd, may be imposed on a people, if only you can get sufficient votes to make it a law. But the wise know that the foolish legislation is a rope of sand, which perishes in the twisting; that the state must follow, and not lead, the character and progress of the citizen.

Turning the pages, he added:

"Mr. Emerson also said this:" and again came the equable, relishing reading:

While I do what is fit for me, and abstain from what is unfit, my neighbor and I shall often agree and work together for one end. But whenever I find my domain over myself not sufficient for me, and undertake the direction of him also I overstep the truth and come into false relations to him. I may have so much more skill or strength than he that he cannot express adequately his sense of wrong but it is a lie and hurts like a lie both him and me. Love and nature cannot maintain the assumption; it must be executed by a practical lie namely, by force. This undertaking for another is the blunder which stands in colossal ugliness in the governments of the world.

Such are the ideals and such the spacious citations of the American legislator who not only has given the best years of his life to the interpretation and defense of the American constitution but who also, under the illustrious auspices of the universities of Oxford, London, and Manchester has expounded that constitution to Englishmen.

ORGANIZE 'WAR OF PRAYERS' ON BOLSHEVIK RULE

Exiled Russians Will Lead Campaign.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—[U.P.]—The Metropolitan Euloge, head of the Russian church in Europe, was en route to Rome tonight to organize a movement of protest against religious "persecution" in Russia. He plans to create protest meetings and special services in the churches throughout the nations.

Euloge ordered, starting tomorrow, that the 12 Russian churches in Paris and the 18 in France add a special prayer to the regular mass service asking God "to deliver the Russian from the bolshevik terror." Before his departure he addressed a message to all Russian exiles denying the statement attributed to the Metropolitan Sergius, acting patriarch of the church in Moscow. Sergius, in an interview, said the soviets are not crusading against religion, murdering priests and dynamiting churches.

Believes Statement Was Forced.

Euloge said the patriarch's statement either was falsified by soviet agents or forcibly obtained under threat of death. Euloge said Russians abroad could not and would not believe that the statement was true.

Animosity bordering on fanaticism will be witnessed tomorrow morning when Russian exiles gather at the cathedral in the Rue Daru to sing a hymn protesting against "religious persecution" in Russia. At the same time prayers will be said for the soul of Czar Alexander Koutepoff, missing White Russian leader, whom many believe to have been murdered.

The Russian colony here is deeply stirred and it is expected thousands will come to the church, some of them almost in rags, and on the verge of misery, sitting side by side with grand dukes. Many of the latter still retain their riches. The Mirsky affair has added fuel to the fire of bitterness over events in Russia. Many exile groups are bombarding the league of nations with letters protesting religious persecution in Russia and asking intervention for the sake of humanity.

Vatican Plans Big Service.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 22.—[U. P.]—March 23, the date chosen by Pope Pius for a day of expiation for Russian anti-religious "atrocities" promises to assume impressive importance both in Rome and to Catholics all over the world, it was said in Vatican circles today.

Solemn religious services will be held in Catholic churches in every part of the world, while the pope himself will say a mass of expiation in St. Peter's before the faithful. Several special pilgrimages have been arranged and the cathedral will be crowded for the occasion.

While the pope says mass in St. Peter's church bells will ring throughout Italy in protest against the Russian antireligious campaign.

1,370 Churches Closed in Year.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Feb. 22.—(AP)—The "society of the godless," the Russian atheist group, today announced that out of Russia's total of 29,000 churches, 1,370 had been closed by the government during 1929. During the previous 11 years, the report said, only 2,000 churches had been closed.

Out of the total of 1,370 closed in 1929, 1,119 were said to be Christian churches, 126 synagogues, 124 mosques, and one a Kalmyk chapel. Most of the closed churches were converted into educational institutions and children's homes. The rest became electric power stations, factories, hospitals, restaurants, fire stations and granaries.

Planned March on Berlin.

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Plans for a march on Berlin from all parts of Germany have been revealed in documents seized by police in Tuesday's raid on the Karl Liebknecht house, communist headquarters. The march, which was planned for March 6, was heralded as a "world demonstration against unemployment," and was supposed to come especially from industrial districts such as Saxony and the Ruhr.

N. Y. DAILY NEWS IN $10,000,000 PLANT TODAY

Celebrates Its Tenth Anniversary.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The New York News, America's first successful tabloid newspaper, ten years old, moved late tonight from its old home on Park place, diagonally across from the Woolworth building, to its new $10,000,000 edifice in East 42d street, diagonally opposite the world's greatest office structure, the nearly completed Chrysler building.

The News' new home is in a nine story plant and thirty-six story office building erected at a cost of $10,000,000, the two structures, connecting, covering 48,000 square feet and the site alone costing $3,000,000.

Established with an editorial force of but 9 employés, the News now has 206 editorial staff members and regularly employs 1,540 persons in all departments to get out its 1,630,675 Sunday and 1,278,636 daily circulation.

Last Word in Modernity.

Its new plant is acknowledged the last word in newspaper equipment, the gravity system being employed, with the editorial offices high up and the press rooms and circulation departments at the bottom of the structure.

Besides the space required for the paper, the annex of the office building, 14 floors of which have been rented to the International Paper company, houses the related activities of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and its syndicate and press service, Liberty Weekly and Pacific & Atlantic Photos, Inc.

The transfer to the new location, a block and a half from Grand Central terminal, was effected without any interruption of the regular process of getting out the Sunday edition.

Moved by Units.

Departments were moved in blocks as they finished their labor for the Sunday issue, and were set up in shape for issuance of Monday's News from the new plant.

The moving job, unprecedented in the history of journalism, the News having the largest daily and Sunday circulation in America, had been planned months in advance and the shifting was accomplished on a clock-like schedule.

SPRING'S VISIT ENDS; COLDER FORECAST TODAY

The premature spring, which arrived in Chicago a week ago, was doomed to come to a sudden end this morning with a drop in temperature to near the freezing point. The return of waning winter was presaged yesterday by a cold rain which fell throughout the afternoon and evening and which was expected to send the temperature down to a minimum of 34 degrees this morning.

Although the mercury was ten degrees off from the reading of the previous three days it was still up in the middle fifties, 30 degrees higher than normal for the day. After its plunge today the temperature will rise again tomorrow, with today's fair weather giving way to another rain, according to the official weather forecast.

Spring and winter will continue to contend for control of the elements throughout this week, J. R. Lloyd, official weather forecaster, predicted. Snow is expected about the middle of the week and again on Saturday, but the temperature will remain above normal most of the time, according to his prediction.

HOUSE CHEERS WASHINGTON'S DEFENSE PLEA

Document 148 Years Old Is Read.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Temperate George Washington, who called Cornwallis' surrender "an interesting event," sounded his solemn warning on preparedness in the course of the commemoration of his one hundred and ninety-eighth birthday in the house of representatives this afternoon.

The source of the warning was a large sheet of letter paper—yellowed by the passing of one hundred and forty-eight years and the ink of Washington's clerkly handwriting on the sheet grown brown—which lay on the blue felt that covers the desk on the marble dais of the house.

Reverently the letter was brought to the house this morning from one of the steel archive cases in the library of congress, and reverently William Tyler Page, clerk of the house, who discovered the letter thirty-seven years ago in an attic of the capitol, took it up and read it in his resonant voice amid volleys of applause from both sides of the chamber.

The Ancient Letter.

The date line was "Mount Vernon, 18th Nov., 1781," the recipient "Robt. H. Harrison, Esqr.," and these are passages which Mr. Page read to mounting applause:

I thank you for your kind Congratulations on the Capitulation of Cornwallis—It is an interesting event and may be productive of much good if properly improved—but if it should be the means of relaxation and sink us into supineness & security it had better not have happened—Great Britain for some time past, has been encouraged by the impolicy of our conduct to continue the War—& should there be an interference of European Politicks in her favour peace may be further removed from us than we expect, while one thing we are sure of and that is, that the only certain way to obtain Peace is to be prepared for War,—Policy, Interest, Economy—all unite to stimulate the States to fill the Continental Battalions, & provide the means of supporting them—I hope the present favourable moment for doing it will not be neglected.

Dr Sir
Yr most Obed &
Affect Servt
G. Washington.

Letter from Widow.

In the case in which they were brought to the house this morning was a letter from Mrs. Washington, in which she thanks congress for its expressions of sympathy on the death of her husband. That letter indicates the first of the first ladies of the land was, like William the Third's Queen Mary, an untrammeled speller, for she wrote the word "grateful" "greatfull" and "gratefully" "greatfully."

In his commemorative address on Washington before the house today, Representative John Q. Tilson [Rep., Conn.], said investigations which he has made lead him to believe public celebration of Washington's birthday originated with Frenchmen and was held Feb. 22, 1781—the year of Cornwallis' surrender—at Newport, R. I. The celebrants were French troops fighting in the American cause and commanded by Count Rochambeau. The count wrote to Washington about the festivities and said one and all wished he could have been present. Washington replied in effect that he felt honored by the celebration, but that until he got a somewhat pressing war off his mind he could not attend such occasions.

Other congressional speakers today were Representatives R. W. Moore [Dem., Va.], John J. McSwain [Dem., S. C.], Robert Luce [Rep., Mass.], L. C. Cramton [Rep., Mich.], C. E. Moore [Rep., O.], C. H. Sloan [Rep., Neb.], and H. W. Temple [Rep., Pa.]. Representative E. W. Pou [Dem., N. C.], presided.

Plan Fête in 1932.

In justifying the extensive plans which congress has drawn up for the celebration in 1932 of the two hundredth anniversary of Washington's birth, Mr. Moore quoted Burke's saying, "A people who do not look backward with appreciation are not likely to look forward with hope."

In the course of the exercises it was announced that as yet only thirteen of the forty-eight states of the union have responded with the appointment of Washington centennial commissions to the invitation of the President and congress to coöperate with the government in the festivities of 1932. These states are California, Delaware, Idaho, Maine, Maryland, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Washington.

Will Complete Monument.

Dedication of four structural projects will be a feature of the bi-centennial. One of those projects is the completion of the Washington monument, which commands the Washington scenes for miles around, but which, although its cornerstone was laid eighty-two years ago and its capstone set nearly forty-six years ago, never has been really finished. It now is proposed to build the substructure and massive terraces which will complete the design and which, it may be added, will deprive the tremendous shaft of much of the austerity that makes it unique among modern memorials.

In the senate the only birthday ceremony was the annual reading of Washington's farewell address. Only three senators — the faithful Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], J. C. Watson [Rep., Ind.], and this year's reader, Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.]—were in the chamber when Vice President Curtis rapped for order. Some thirty more senatorial patriots finally wandered in, but a quorum never did show up for Vandenberg's reading of what Henry Cabot Lodge was wont to call "the noblest political testament a statesman ever left to his countrymen."

RUMANIA ORDERS POLICE TO SEIZE ILEANA PICTURES

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

BUCHAREST, Feb. 22.—An official order has been issued to all police authorities to confiscate and burn all photographs showing Princess Ileana with Count Hochberg. According to well founded reports in political circles Constantin Hiott, court chamberlain, will resign shortly as a result of the censure incurred by his failure to investigate the count's past before allowing the engagement to be announced. He has not accompanied Queen Marie and Princess Ileana on their Egyptian trip.

The official announcement of the cancellation of the engagement probably will be deferred a month.

Will Wed, Count Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CANNES, France, Feb. 22.—"Princess Ileana and I will be married as soon as the proper arrangements are made between the Greek Orthodox church and the Catholic church. That is the only reason the wedding has been delayed. Any other reports are lies!" Count Alexander Hochberg made that statement today on his arrival on the Vienna express.

CALLS ON PUPILS TO HELP CHICAGO BANISH GANGS

Loesch Is Washington's Birthday Speaker.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

George Washington's job as a pioneer citizen was to mold a nation. But the job of the 1,500 school children, members of the new Pioneer Citizens' club, who met yesterday in the Drake hotel to celebrate George Washington's birthday, is to grow up to free Chicago from gangsters and murderers. That is what Frank J. Loesch told them.

George Washington would not have understood the talk about "gangsters." But the boys and girls did.

"You boys and girls know what a bad condition Chicago is in," Mr. Loesch said, "because there are so many criminals here. You know what a bad reputation Chicago has all over the world for crime.

"We expect you to be intelligent voters when you grow up. We expect you to free Chicago from gangsters and murderers. One hundred years ago Chicago pioneers were clearing the land to build houses. Your job as pioneers is in another field. You can pioneer here in obeying the law and seeing that others obey the law."

Pioneer Woman Introduced.

Mr. Loesch then asked the children if they wanted to see a real pioneer, a woman whose grandfather was captured by the Indians. "Yes!" they shouted. A white haired woman in the balcony stood up and smiled and was cheered. She was introduced as Mrs. S. G. Browning. Her grandfather, John Shanklin, was taken by Indians in the Cherry Valley massacre and later traded to the British for a hand mirror. He had good treatment from them.

Mrs. Browning is Mr. Loesch's mother-in-law. Mr. Loesch is vice president of the Historical society, the organization which inaugurated the Pioneer Citizens' club, made up of children from the seventh and eighth grades of junior high schools of private, public, and parochial schools of the city. They were chosen by their principals as representative.

Dr. James Is Speaker.

Dr. James A. James, dean of the graduate school of Northwestern university, shared honors with Mr. Loesch as a principal speaker on the program. He spoke of Washington as the pioneer.

Preceding the program, which was the most important of all Washington's birthday celebrations over the city, the children, led by three real Indians, the Senn national championship high school band, and a special police squad, marched from the Chicago Historical society, 634 North Dearborn street, to the Drake hotel. Next in line were Boy Scout troops of St. Alphonsus church, Girl Scout troop No. 8, and Campfire Girls of Park Ridge.

Boy Gets Coonskin Cap.

Mrs. William S. Monroe, chairman of the woman's auxiliary of the Chicago Historical society, then placed the coonskin cap the society had had made, a model of one worn by the old pioneers, on the head of the Pioneer Citizens' president, Deane Tibbetts of Lyon school.

Other officers then were announced, came to the front, and were applauded furiously. They are: Marion Ryan of Immaculata High school, first vice president; John Nurnberger, St. Jerome school, second vice president; Bertha Lerman, Volta school, secretary, and Edward Witz, Palmer school, treasurer.

The Girl Scouts then gave a playlet on a pioneer theme, the Senn band played, Dr. William H. Johnson of Loyola university spoke, and the children all sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." Throughout the program Chief Sky Eagle and Clearwater of the Ottawa tribe, and Chief White Eagle of the Winnebago tribe, sat on the platform.

Among the many observances of the 198th anniversary of Washington was the luncheon of the German club at 2 o'clock in the Cameo room of the Morrison hotel. Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, head of the United States naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., and official American observer of the Graf Zeppelin's around the world trip, spoke.

The Thirty-seventh Engineers held a celebration in the Morrison hotel last night.

D. A. R. Members Celebrate.

More than 600 members of the Daughters of the American Revolution held their annual Washington's birthday luncheon yesterday in the Stevens hotel. "Washington, His Life and Citizenship," was the subject of an address by F. J. Stransky, former judge.

The part played by George Rogers Clark in the war for American independence was told by Judge John P. McGoorty, of the Criminal court last night in a talk before George Rogers Clark chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in a hall at 178 Forest avenue, Oak Park.

"Historians have overlooked the significance of the revolutionary campaigns as carried on west of the Alleghenies," said Judge McGoorty. "Only recently has there been any recognition of the importance of the feat of Clark in capturing the forts at Vincennes and Kaskaskia, which assured the new republic possession of the fur trading territory and paved the way for acquisition of the Northwest teritiory. In some respects George Rogers Clark was George Washington's equal as a military leader."

Other speakers were Mrs. Eli Dixson, state regent, D .A. R.; Mrs. W. S. Perry, state chaplain, and Charles H. Crysler, village president of Oak Park.

The Fort Dearborn chapter of the D. A. R. and the Evanston chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution gave a formal dinner dance in the Orrington hotel last night in honor of Washington's birthday.

Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom spoke before the Hamilton club in the afternoon on Washington.

MOTORCYCLIST DIES OF INJURIES.

Christ Hjortsberg, 20 years old, 4121 Belle Plaine avenue, died yesterday in the Belmont hospital of injuries received Friday night when he was caught between two street cars while riding his motorcycle in front of 3023 North Crawford avenue.

Nation's Present Chief Pays Homage at Tomb of First

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover motored to Mount Vernon this afternoon and for two minutes stood silent and uncovered within the tomb of George Washington.

The chains that guard the portals of this historic shrine were moved aside on the arrival of the presidential party and the chief executive entered the stone structure and with bowed head paid the nation's tribute to the man who had been its first President. A stone wreath, sent earlier in the day from the White House to commemorate Gen. Washington's 198th birthday, rested on the stone coffin of the dead chief.

The visit to Mount Vernon was unheralded and only a few visitors were standing in front of the tomb when the presidential party arrived.

Earlier in the day the President had motored to this historic city and joined with the citizens in honoring the memory of its townsman and greatest son. The principal event of the day was a huge military parade which was reviewed by President Hoover, Gov. Pollard, Secretary of War Hurley, and a host of public officials.

The citizens of Alexandria and the surrounding community turned out en masse for the celebration of Washington's birthday and local newspapers estimated 50,000 persons viewed the colorful parade that marched down North Washington street.

Some of the most historic military organizations in the country marched to the music of a score of bands. As usual in Virginia celebrations, the most spectacular unit in the parade was the Richmond Blues batallion.

The President laughed heartily when the Culpeper post of the American Legion passed the reviewing stand carrying large strips of cardboards reminding Mr. Hoover of his fishing camp in Virginia. "It won't be long before they bite," one caption read. Another cardboard carried the inscription, "Culpeper welcomes your weekly hike."

A few moments later the Spanish-American veterans passed, the President standing with bared head until the last of the men who had fought in 1898 had gone by.

so far away that we can't reach him in spirit," said the judge. "We love George Washington no less for his human frailties."

"His human attributes make it easier to understand him. He once guarded with 700 men the 300 mile front in Virginia. He lost only four men in his famous crossing of the Delaware river. Nothing that is true about him can take one color from the spectrum of his life."

Judge Horner was the principal speaker in a program of which former State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe was chairman. George M. Cohan spoke briefly, and sang a song he composed for the Irish Fellowship club. Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the sixth corps area, talked on Washington's genius as a military strategist.

Washington drank wine, fought with his fists, and danced past midnight, Dr. B. J. Cigrand of Batavia, president of the American Flag Day association, told the Union Patriotic society at the Palmer house.

"Let us keep George Washington human and he will continue to be an inspiration to the nation's youth," Dr. Cigrand said. "He was a free man and no clique or crowd, crew or group, could fasten a gold ring in his nose.

"He did things which we would not do and doubtless we do many things he would not have done. He drank his wine in a sanctified way. He bought a church lottery ticket and bet half a crown on a Virginia horse race. He danced past midnight, fought with his fists, and on several occasions swore in tones that made the earth tremble."

CRIMINAL CODE OUTDATED FIFTY YEARS—LOESCH

Tells Peoria Club Crime Alliance Is Unbroken.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Illinois criminal code is at least fifty years behind the times and needs many changes if the state is to control criminals, Frank J. Loesch, Chicago's veteran crime fighter, declared here tonight. He then outlined changes he considers most important, asserting they must be made before criminals may be generally punished and made to fear the law. Mr. Loesch delivered his address before the Crève Cœur club.

Says Crime Alliance Continues.

Mr. Loesch declared that the brotherhood of crime and politics exists in Chicago today almost as openly and strongly as it existed before he went to grips with it two years ago.

Mr. Loesch said that many of the safeguards thrown about a man charged with crime now are survivals of the post-American revolutionary war period in England, when the laws there were extremely severe with 160 crimes punishable by death. He pointed out that although all the harshness of those laws has disappeared from present day law, all the safeguards and technicalities remain and now have become loopholes through which criminals may escape punishment.

Against Unanimous Verdict.

"If a defendant refuses to take the stand," he said, "it should be considered an implied admission of guilt. It may well be that the time has come to abolish the grand jury and give the state's attorney the power to start proceedings by filing information. The grand jury is a cumbersome and expensive proceeding. A number of the states have adopted the other system.

"Ultimately we must abolish the unanimity verdict and require a majority verdict. The former is not required in any corporate business. A three fourths verdict of a jury should be sufficient to acquit or convict in any case."

Urges Better Police.

In addition to the changes in the criminal code, Mr. Loesch said "there should be a persistent agitation for a better qualified police force."

"More police of a higher character, education, and training as crime detectors are needed," he concluded. "There should be a reorganization on modern lines of efficiency so as to make it effective for the purpose of its creation and maintenance."

RICH JAPANESE KILLED IN FALL FROM WINDOW

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Falling from a window on the fourteenth floor of the Hotel Roosevelt to a setback ledge a few feet below, Joseph Takamine, wealthy Japanese chemist and son of the late scientist, Takamine, who perfected adrenalin, was injured mortally early today. He died four hours later.

Ellen Leenan, 22 years old, with whom the chemist had taken a room for the night, after making the rounds of several night clubs, was questioned today by detectives.

RADIATOR "RUM" CLAIMS 2 MORE; 5 YOUTHS DEAD

Lyons, Neb., Feb. 22.—(AP)—An antifreeze solution, rusted to the color and aged to the flavor of spoiled dandelion wine, today had caused the death of five young men.

Three died yesterday, one this morning, and one shortly after noon.

Half a dozen others, who sipped the supposed "wine" passed around at a carnival at Oakland, Neb., Thursday night, are expected to survive.

The dead are Leon Jarvis, 18, football player; Hollis Cleveland, 17, also a football star; Nelson Jarvis, 20, employed at a pool hall, and a brother of Leon; Lawrence Kohlmeier, 24, farmhand, and Reuben Roberg, 22, who worked on the railroad here.

Lester Kohlmeier, 22; Phillips Going, 23, and Clyde Dotson, who took one drink each from the gallon jug, sat home tonight hoping for the best, on advice of physicians.

Roberg in delirium yesterday kept repeating "Snethen's basement." Then it was discovered that Ed Snethen, station agent, found some one had gone into his basement and filled two one gallon jugs with radiator solution he kept there.

FOG CAUSES TWO SHIP COLLISIONS OFF NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Fog caused two ship collisions outside the harbor this afternoon and paralyzed airplane transportation on the flying fields around the city. None of the colliding ships was reported in danger and as far as could be learned, there was no loss of life.

The first collision occurred shortly before 2 p. m., between the United Fruit company liner Maya and the Swedish-American liner Kungsholm, whose master radioed he had anchored off Craven shoal because of the fog. The second collision occurred about two hours later, when the Ward liner Monterey, and the Italian freighter Isorga crashed about thirty-five miles south of Sandy Hook.

CITIZEN CORPS FOR CRIME WAR NEARLY READY

Randolph Due to Name His Board of 100 Tomorrow.

Announcement of the personnel of the Association of Commerce committee for the prevention and punishment of crime, to be composed of 100 Chicago business men, will be made tomorrow if possible, Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the association and chairman of the "secret six" committee, said last night.

The names of the twelve men who are to form a committee to collect and disburse the funds necessary to the association's fight against racketeering and other crime, also are to be made public. Col. Randolph said most of the dozen had been chosen and had agreed to act.

"We are going into this thing with determination," Col. Randolph remarked. "We do not expect to make a clean sweep of everything that is wrong in Chicago in six months, but we do expect to convict so considerable a number of the racketeers that now infest the city that the rest will respect and fear us."

Push War on Crime.

Meanwhile the police drive against gangsters continued. A number of men with criminal records were arrested.

Albert Van Pelt, 50 years old, of 5916 South La Salle street, believed to be head of a south side safe cracking clique, his brother, Earl, and his wife, Nellie, were arrested in an automobile at Roosevelt road and Kedvale avenue.

Detectives Joseph Seeback and William Tyrrell of the Fillmore street station found a revolver, a quantity of nitroglycerin and some dynamite in Van Pelt's car when they seized him, his wife and his brother. As the trio were being taken to the station it was reported that the safe in the Dale Furniture company's offices at 4222 Madison street, a mile away, had been blown and $500 taken from it.

Barker Arrested Again.

George "Red" Barker, gunman and hoodlum, business agent of the Coal Hikers and Teamsters' union, was arrested in his automobile at Halsted street and Washington boulevard after he had made a desperate effort to escape the police.

Sergt. William Burns and his bureau squad saw Barker driving his car west in Washington boulevard, near Wood street, early in the day. They started in pursuit and he soon pushed his speed up to 70 miles an hour.

The detectives fired several shots at Barker's car in an effort to stop him, but he sped on. At Halsted street, however, a street car blocked Barker and the detectives forced him to the curb.

Barker's arrest was his second within a week. He was seized several days ago with William "Three Fingered Jack" White, Bernard O'Donnell, brother of the notorious Klondike, and several others on charges of carrying concealed weapons. He must appear in this charge on March 7. When seized yesterday Barker had no revolver on his person nor in his car, and police after several hours released him on $100 bonds after placing a charge of disorderly conduct against him.

At midnight Mr. Byfield had been unconscious for 102 hours. Dr. Byfield said at midnight that the injured man's condition was not as favorable as it had been for the previous forty-eight hours.

DR. WYNEKOOP IS ARRESTED ON NURSE'S CHARGE

Dr. Gilbert H. Wynekoop, physician, was arrested last night in his combination office and apartment at 420 Surf street on complaint of Miss Edith Bieze, 28 years old, a nurse, of 3371 Palmer square.

Miss Bieze said she went to the physician's office yesterday afternoon in answer to an advertisement calling for the services of an experienced person to demonstrate a patented sterilizer. Dr. Wynekoop invited her into his office, locked the door, and bestowed unwelcome attentions on her, she said.

Dr. Wynekoop was locked up at Sheffield police station until his brother, Harvey E. Wynekoop, sent a $50 cash bond to the station by messenger.

CHICAGO REVENUE RELIEF CAMPAIGN ROARS INTO HIGH

Clarke Sends Committees Hunting for Cash.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The campaign to reëstablish Chicago's credit, by the raising of $74,000,000 with which to operate the city, county, public schools and sanitary district until July 1, was mapped out yesterday in the directors' room of the Central Trust Company of Illinois. Philip R. Clarke, president of the bank, who headed the campaign which sold about $750,000,000 of Liberty bonds in Chicago, will direct this drive to lift the local governments from their financial dilemma.

Mr. Clarke was chairman of the meeting. He selected 23 of the 25 chairmen of trade committees who will go out after pledges. Some of the chairmen started working yesterday afternoon. Others will use the Sabbath to garner in pledges. The entire organization, which will probably have 4,000 workers, is expected to be in high speed tomorrow morning.

First Call for Cash Friday.

It is hoped that the $74,000,000 will be subscribed by Wednesday night, but the campaigners really expect to do the job by Friday night. After the subscriptions are obtained by the Clarke organization, the Strawn citizens' committee will deal out the money as soon as arrangements can be made. It is now expected that the first call for cash on the subscriptions will be made next Friday or Saturday.

Pay day for the 43,836 public employés who have $11,909,430 coming in overdue salaries will follow immediately, according to the plan.

The immediate task is to obtain subscriptions. The Yellow Cab company sent a letter yesterday to Mayor Thompson offering to buy $200,000 worth of 1930 tax anticipation warrants of the city, and made another offer to buy $50,000 of the county warrants. But the total aid for the local governments has been relatively small.

List Subscriptions Received.

All of the subscriptions announced by both the Strawn committee and the Clarke organization which has not begun solicitation are as follows:

International Harvester Co.	$1,250,000
Chicago and Alton R. R.	1,000,000
Illinois Central R. R.	100,000
Burlington R. R.	300,000
St. Paul railroad	275,000
Union Stockyards	450,000
Montgomery Ward & Co.	375,000
Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.	250,000
Drake and Blackstone hotels	200,000
Central Manufacturing district	150,000
Robert F. Carr	100,000
H. H. Porter	50,000
Swift & Co subsidiaries	450,000
Natl. Malleable Steel Castings Co.	100,000
W. F. Babcock	20,000
Hart, Schaffner & Marx	100,000
B Kuppenheimer & Co	50,000
Chicago Daily News	65,000
Sprague, Warner & Co.	75,000
Yellow Cab Co.	250,000
Total	$5,610,000

From this small start Mr. Clarke started yesterday morning to acquaint his committee chairmen with the plan and their tasks.

Clarke Explains Campaign.

"The meeting required considerable time," explained Mr. Clarke later, "because of the confusions and misconception of what we have to sell by those who were not informed on the subject. The instrument we have for sale is a participating certificate in the Cook County Taxpayers Warrant trust. This was devised by Silas H. Strawn and associates as the most effective form of security to raise the money.

"The subscriptions will be paid from time to time on call and the money invested in tax anticipation warrants. It is now proposed to invest $22,000,000 in 1929 city warrants, $10,000,000 in 1929 sanitary district warrants, and the remainder in 1930 warrants. The first call, I expect, will be about March 1, and for 10 to 12 per cent of each subscription.

Meeting Is Enthusiastic.

"After the matter was fully understood the gathering was tremendously enthusiastic.

"Chicago's credit reputation at present is not high, but as for assured payment these tax anticipation warrants are as good as anything in the country."

"They have the unqualified recommendation of the banks," interposed Joseph E. Otis, chairman of the Central Trust directorate.

"The interest paid by the warrants is not a matter for consideration," went on Mr. Clarke. "Our appeal to men is to do something for this city. We want Chicago to indorse Chicago's credit. If the residents of the city do that promptly and cheerfully, Chicago's credit will be restored to the nation wide standing which it deserves. When that is done the way out will be smoothed.

"When the United States sees that Chicagoans have the utmost faith in their own credit, then comes forward the possibility of outsiders desiring our warrants. The gate will then be open to sell 1930 warrants. Another possibility is that the legislature will take such action as to reëstablish the confidence of the investors of the nation in the local tax warrants.

"We have requested the trust departments of all of the banks to sell participating certificates in the trust to individuals. It is expected that taxes will be collected so that there will be no occasion for holding the certificates longer than the middle of 1931."

23 Chairmen Are Named.

The twenty-five divisions into which the campaign has been divided and the twenty-three chairmen already appointed, all but three of whom were present at Mr. Clarke's meeting, are as follows:

Several men at the meeting said that they are confident that the Clarke campaign will net subscriptions for the total of $74,000,000, but most of them admitted that it will take work.

NAVAL RESERVE READY TO MOVE TO NEW ARMORY

The Illinois naval reserves will abandon their old headquarters aboard the U. S. S. Commodore this week and move to their new $350,000 naval armory, which is nearing completion south of Randolph street in Grant park.

The new armory is said to be the largest and most modern of its kind in the country. On the first floor will be the division headquarters, a large swimming tank, a shooting gallery and quarters for the American Legion. The naval reserves have occupied the Commodore since 1912 when the state purchased the venerable old lake freighter from the New York Central lines.

Capt. Edward A. Evers is in charge of the Illinois reserves, which first formed a naval unit in 1893.

PARIS BITES BACK AT ROME AS NAVY HATREDS BLAZE

Condemns Italy's Bitter Press Campaign.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The five power naval conference, originally conceived to reduce armaments and preserve peace, has already resulted in one serious repercussion—the focusing of the extreme bitterness existing between Italy and France and stressing Rome's suspicion and mistrust regarding Paris.

The strained relations arising out of the Fascist attitude towards France's naval aims are reflected in an unusually outspoken editorial in the semi-official Le Temps tonight, which bluntly asks, "What are the veritable sentiments of Italy toward this country?"

Discards Diplomatic Phrases.

Discarding the usual polite diplomatic French language, in which French editorials are usually framed, the article vigorously attacks the Fascists for the violent press campaign carried on by the Italian newspapers against the French demands for a great navy, and underlines the fact that the strict censorship, existing on the peninsula, makes everything permitted to be published almost a reflection of the Mussolini viewpoint.

"In the last few days, the Italian press attacks have taken on a tone recalling the days of passionate polemics against our country. Polemics should be couched with some courtesy and good faith, else they merely reflect the vulgar sentiment of impotent rage.

"They accuse France of preparing to wreck the conference—falsify by willful omission of statistics proving the difference in tonnage of the two fleets—insinuating that France seeks to dominate the earth, the sea, and the air, and its pacifism, it is suspected, deceives no one.

Resents "Shearer" Label.

"The hateful perfidious press campaign does not inspire the cordiality necessary to Italo-Franco relations, and contrasts singularly with the amical declarations responsible statesmen of Rome express toward the French nation."

The other afternoon newspapers here, commenting on the new government and what the next French delegation to London may demand, represented strongly that France is being labeled "the Shearer" of this conference, and declare that neither Great Britain nor the United States are entitled to accuse the Paris representatives of trying to smash the parley because they stand pat on the nation's requirements, the same as Prime Minister MacDonald and American Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson do, respectively.

The London newspapers' concentrated barrage against the French claims, coupled with the published reports that the American delegation sympathizes with Great Britain's apprehensions over the failure of negotiations unless France abandons its position, aroused public opinion and political circles here to a degree that the Chautemps cabinet and any government which may succeed it, would be forced to support Andre Tardieu's original demands in totality.

WOMEN AT NAVY PARLEY TO TAKE TEA WITH QUEEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The women of the naval conference delegations were thrown into a flutter of excitement and joy tonight when Queen Mary issued an invitation to them to drop in and take tea with her at Buckingham palace Thursday afternoon. The queen, when in Sandringham during the early days of the conference, expressed her desire to meet the women of the delegations. She has issued invitations to nearly a hundred guests.

Although it will essentially be a women's affair it is probable that King George will "look in" for his afternoon cup of tea. It is expected that Princess Mary will also be present. Guests will be received in the famous Bow room, tea being served in one of the adjoining rooms, probably the household dining room.

The queen has expressed her desire that the party be as informal as possible. The wife of the chief delegate of each nation will be introduced. She, in turn, will present her companions. During the tea music will be furnished by a famous military band. Ishbel MacDonald will lead the women of the British delegation.

The early settlers of New England made their own furniture out of the materials at hand—maple, pine, birch, hickory or a combination of these woods. Simplicity and grace of design gave their work a peculiar charm that is fully preserved in the interesting collection of Early American furniture exhibited on our fourth floor. The pieces illustrated here represent a few of our modestly priced copies of these charming examples of Puritan craftsmanship.

During the semi-annual sale every piece in the store has been considerably reduced in price. It is now possible to buy Scholle furniture at prices that are even more favorable than usual. These remarkable values are the result of great reductions made to us by the manufacturers. We feel sure that we can show you exactly the pieces that you want and, if desirable, we will hold them for future delivery.

FIREMEN FREE DRIVER FROM CRASH WRECK

Wedged Between Truck and Street Car.

Firemen were called to direct the use of jacks to extricate George Crowley, 38 years old, 6305 South Rockwell street, when he was wedged between the truck he was driving and a street car in a collision at 31st street and Pitney court yesterday. After his release he was taken to St. Paul's hospital. He suffered a fracture of the skull and internal injuries and physicians say he has little chance to recover.

The crash occurred when Crowley was unable to stop to avoid a collision when the street car halted. He is a delivery driver for a department store.

Two deaths yesterday raised the Cook county motor toll for 1930 to 111. The victims:

Mrs. Esther Skopp, 66 years old, 3838 Haddon avenue, died in the Lutheran Deaconess hospital. She was struck by a hit and run driver on Feb. 12 at Division and Leavitt streets.

Louis Aygran, 1701 North Lincoln avenue, was charged with assault following the accident when he was accused of being the driver. He was rearrested last night when he went to the West North avenue police station to inquire as to the condition of Mrs. Skopp.

Dennis Kelly, 49 years old, 6446 Normal boulevard, fatally hurt last night when knocked down while crossing Normal boulevard near 60th street. Edward Flynn, 10129 Beverly avenue, the driver, was held after taking the man to a hospital.

Wilbur P. Shanahan of Hammond was held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter by a coroner's jury investigating the auto collision in which Peter Kooy, a wealthy farmer of Munster, Ind., was killed at 182d street and Burnham avenue, Lansing, Friday night. Witnesses testified that Shanahan was intoxicated and had failed to stop for a through street.

RICH WOMAN'S OWN AUTO USED TO MURDER HER

Body Crushed by Slayer; Jewelry Stolen.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The body of Mrs. Dorothy Moormeister, 32, wife of Dr. Frank Moormeister, well to do Salt Lake physician, was found at 4 a. m. on a little traveled road, four miles south of this city. It was mangled and was stripped of jewelry valued at thousands of dollars.

The murderer, after striking the woman unconscious, had driven her own car over her body again and again until all life was crushed out. The motive apparently was to prevent identification.

No formal arrests had been made late tonight, but sheriff's officers were questioning Fred Le Carie of California, a card salesman. Le Carie is said to have known Mrs. Moormeister and seen her recently. He was located in Ogden today and brought here.

Body Found in Road.

The body was found lying in the road by a smelter employé homeward bound from night work. Three hours before the body's discovery Mrs. Moormeister's auto, which she was reported to have used Friday, was found on a downtown Salt Lake street. Blood stains were found on the car and its ownership was established about the same time the woman's body was found.

Sheriff's officers indicated that an arrest for murder would be made within 24 hours.

Investigation today brought to light the following information:

Sheriff's officers believe the woman went to Bingham, a suburban mining town, on Friday, for a reason yet unknown, returning apparently in company with her murderer or murderers. Her auto turned off the highway onto the dirt road on which she was found. She apparently was struck over the head and knocked unconscious. She then was robbed of a five carat diamond ring, a two carat diamond ring, two diamond bracelets, and a diamond wrist watch. The murderer then placed her body on the road and drove the car over and over her body. Ruts in the road and tire marks on her body indicated this.

Jealousy Possible Motive.

Officers ascribe the killing to jealousy or some other motive besides robbery. It is their belief the robbery may have been committed to hide the real motive.

Servants at the Moormeister home told officers Mrs. Moormeister left home Friday afternoon and last was seen visiting a milliner about 4 p. m. She told her husband she had an appointment with a masseur Friday evening and would return home afterward. Officers are certain that her murderer or murderers sped to Salt Lake in her car immediately after the crime and abandoned it where it was found.

FORMER CHICAGO GAMBLER SLAIN BY JEALOUS FOE

M. H. [Doc] Beddell, 32 years old, former Chicago gambler, was shot to death yesterday afternoon in a billiard hall at Miami, Fla., according to dispatches.

Joseph Cook, 32 years old, who fired a bullet into Beddell's heart, surrendered at the county jail as police were lifting Beddell's body into an ambulance. In a signed statement, Cook declared he shot Beddell because the latter had alienated the affections of his wife.

Records of a Miami justice of the peace showed that Cook had been twice arrested for wife beating and that Beddell had intervened on his behalf each time. Cook was held without bond.

Beddell, who was married, was employed in the Minerva club, at 412 South Halsted street, operated by "Dago" Lawrence Mangano, previous to his departure for Miami last November. He had lived here at 4915 Kenmore avenue and was a native of Butte, Mont.

FIND HEART DISEASE CAUSED DEATH.

An autopsy performed yesterday on the body of Clifford Shaffer, 45 years old, 5222 Dearborn street, who died suddenly at his home on Friday, revealed that heart disease caused his death. At first it was believed he had been poisoned by canned soup.

CONVINCE WIDOW VILLAGE CLERK IS FIRE VICTIM

The body found in the smoldering ruins of a vacant farm house near Broadview, Feb. 13, is that of a victim of the flames instead of a cadaver placed in the burning building. This report was made yesterday to Coroner Bundesen by Coroner's Chemist Ralph W. Webster, who failed to find traces of embalming fluid in the body. The victim is believed to be James Grant, village clerk of Broadview.

Mrs. Grant, who had refused to believe the body to be that of her husband, insisting that he had fled with another woman and had burned a cadaver, said she was convinced by the coroner's tests that the body is that of her husband. Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon with interment at Oak Ridge cemetery. No motive could be offered to support a theory of suicide.

Four Boys Confess Fifteen Burglaries; Loot Recovered

Four boys who confessed to more than fifteen burglaries and whose arrest led to the recovery of several thousand dollars worth of stolen clothing and jewelry, were held by the West North avenue police for juvenile authorities last night. Charles Hansen, 16 years old, 1712 North Campbell avenue, and Otto Frost, 15 years old, 2620 North avenue, were taken into custody first when the police found in their pockets several rings from which the stones had been removed. Frost and Hansen implicated Frank Pasdo, 14 years old, 1730 North Washtenaw avenue, and Edward Malmen, 14 years old, 1739 North Washtenaw, and they were arrested also.

Viaduct Over B.&O. Tracks to Be Closed for Repairs

Maj. Paul Schioler, city bridge engineer, announced yesterday that the viaduct, which runs parallel to South Wells street and connects Polk and Taylor streets over the tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad will be closed for seven weeks after today. The viaduct is to be closed to allow the railroad company to repair the supports and decking, according to Maj. Schioler.

FRANCE DEDICATES REVOLVING LIGHT TO WAR DEAD AT VERDUN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VERDUN, France, Feb. 22.—The strangest lighthouse in all the world was dedicated here tonight on the fourteenth anniversary of the beginning of the battle of Verdun. From the top of the grim ossuary at Douaumont it will flash forth alternately a red and white light over the wasted region where 1,000,000 men—400,000 Frenchmen and 600,000 Germans—lie.

Princess Henri de Polignac, whose husband fell before Verdun, pushed the button that set revolving the great lanters that are visible 20 miles away, while from the valley below rose the clamor of pealing bells of the five churches of Verdun and the cannon of the historic fortress.

Every night at dusk the lighthouse will send its beams flashing over the battlefield to keep alive in France the memory of the dead. Below the 150 foot tower is a magnificent chapel with stained glass windows recalling the sacrifices of war time.

'SLAYER' OF NINE TAKEN EAST FOR MURDER QUIZ

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—(AP)—James Baker, who confesses nine murders, eight of them by poison, left here tonight for New York in custody of Detective Arthur M. Horey of that city.

Baker is being returned on an indictment charging theft of $20 from the safe of the Guggenheim laboratories, but chief interest of the New York authorities centers in the statement of the prisoner that he murdered Henry S. Gaw, watchman at the laboratory.

Horey telegraphed New York authorities before he left, advising that Baker be indicted for that crime.

The murder of Gaw is the only one of the nine confessed by Baker of which a record has been found. Horey was convinced by Baker's accurate description of conditions at the scene that he knew something of the watchman's death on the night of Dec. 27, 1928.

Examination of Baker by psychiatrists here resulted in a report which would fit either a ruthless poisoner or a boastful pathological liar.

SECRET COMPANY GRANTED POWER TO RUN CAR LINES

Charter Is Drawn to Fit Consolidated Lines.

A new factor in the Chicago transit situation appeared yesterday with the disclosure that the Chicago Metropolitan Transit company has been chartered at Springfield. An air of secrecy surrounded the new company.

Theodore S. Chapman of the law firm of Chapman & Cutler, attorneys for the new company, stated that it had been formed to own, construct, or operate a transit system in Chicago and in the adjacent Metropolitan [illegible] It is empowered, he said, to operate surface, elevated, and bus lines. Such a grant of powers to the new corporation appeared to a number of aldermen to be in line with the proposed consolidated system in Chicago's transit settlement.

Incorporators Are "Dummies."

The incorporators of the company are said by Mr. Chapman to be employes of his office and the company's offices are listed at the address of the law firm. The capital of the company is listed at 1,000 shares no par value common stock. The names of the real owners or promoters of the corporation are kept secret. The listed incorporators are not the real owners, according to Mr. Chapman.

"None of the present car companies is behind the new company," said Leonard A. Busby, president of the Chicago City Railway company, South Chicago and Calumet Railway company and the Southern Street Railway company. "I do not know who is connected with it."

"I am certain that none of the present companies are interested in the new company," also stated Weymouth Kirkland, attorney for the Chicago Railways company, which operates the west side lines.

Chester Corey, vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, stated he knew nothing of the new company. A. W. Harris, president of the bank, who is in California, is chairman of the protective committee of the first mortgage bondholders of the Chicago Railways company.

Investment Official Silent.

Attention was called to P. W. Chapman & Co., an investment securities firm. Paul Chapman of the investment concern is a brother of Attorney Chapman of the law firm. The investment company was said to control several holding companies for water, gas, electric, and telephone utilities.

"I prefer to make no answer," said E. L. Harker, an official of the Chapman Investment company, to queries concerning the possible connection of his firm with the new company. "The attorneys who handle the incorporation are the ones to give out information."

Members of the council local transportation company could throw no light on the new corporation. They pointed out that the valuations of the surface and elevated lines is $259,000,000 and that $200,000,000 is needed for new extensions, making a total of approximately $460,000,000 that a purchaser would have to raise.

MERCHANTS DEMAND ALDERMEN SPEED TUNNEL FRANCHISE

A number of merchants who use the freight carrying facilities under the loop of the Chicago Tunnel company have written to the city council urging the aldermen to speed work on the company's new franchise, Ald. Thomas F. Byrne [15th] announced yesterday. Ald. Byrne is chairman of a council subcommittee which is working on the franchise. The subcommittee has insisted that the company pay back compensation before a new franchise is granted.

The council recently authorized the controller to advertise the tubes for lease or sale as they became the property of the city on the expiration of the old franchise last year. The bids will be opened Feb. 28. The city, however, does not own the terminal facilities and some difficulty in operation may arise, according to the aldermen, if a purchaser or lessee is found for the tubes.

BRUNDAGE TAKES NAME OFF LIST IN U.S. SENATE RACE

Rejects Friends' Plea to Run on Wet Issue.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Former Attorney General Brundage yesterday announced the withdrawal of his name from the Republican United States senatorship race.

He did so after an all morning conference with a large group of friends and advocates of the wet cause, who spent the time urging him to remain in the contest against Senator Deneen and Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick. There were about fifty enthusiasts on hand when he disclosed his final decision and overruled their pleas and arguments.

Immediately thereafter he dictated and signed his formal withdrawal and sent it by special delivery to Secretary of State Stratton at Springfield, wiring also that the formal document required by law was on the way and would arrive before the closing hour for such action at midnight.

Mrs. Baur Also Withdraws.

Mrs. Bertha Baur, national committeewoman, whose petition for congressman at large also was filed without her consent, was a few hours ahead of Brundage in withdrawing from that contest. Her withdrawal was sent to Springfield by special messenger on a morning train.

These were the principal cancellations of ballot entries on the last day allowed for that step by the election law, but there were a number of others of sectional interest, including withdrawals from congressional and legislative scraps.

Local candidates whose petitions were filed with the county clerks have until March 4 to step aside. But in Chicago there was one announcement of this character considered of importance. Following a conference between County Treasurer Harding and Attorney General Carlstrom it was announced that Gregory T. Van Meter, the city hall candidate to succeed Harding, will pull his name out this week. This leaves the treasurership contest a battle between Col. Howard E. Savage, started by the Republican Service Men's league, and Walter E. Bacon, the Lundin-Deneen entry. And it is expected that Harding and Chairman Snow of the county committee now will throw their strength back of the forces already supporting Savage in order to defeat Bacon.

There is another contestant for this office, Dr. John E. Stanton, a Legionnaire from the west side, who has attacked Savage chiefly because of the former national commander's connection with the Insull interests as general manager of the Metropolitan Motor Bus company.

Brundage Explains Decision.

In telling newspaper men the result of the morning conference, former Attorney General Brundage declined to issue any formal statement such as the one he issued when he was surprised by the filing of his petition. At that time he spoke of the widespread desire of the voters for a chance to express themselves on the prohibition issue.

"There is little to be said now," he explained, "except that after long and careful consideration I have decided that I shall not be a candidate. In doing so I have been compelled to go counter to the wishes of a great many who feel that this is the time right now to give forcible expression to the sentiment, the public opinion prevailing throughout Illinois that the evils of Volsteadism outweigh its benefits many fold.

"I agree with them that this is true. I regret as much as any of them that the state will not have a chance to demonstrate its opposition, its disapproval of present conditions due to prohibition. But after a thorough study of all elements in the situation, I have concluded not to run."

Mrs. McCormick Silent.

This decision was announced while Mrs. McCormick, just back from several days of downstate speaking, was on her way to take the 1 o'clock Capital Limited B. & O. train for Washington to take up legislative matters. No comment upon Mr. Brundage's step was obtained from her before her departure.

Senator Deneen is still in Washington, but it was believed at his Chicago headquarters that he will be here tomorrow. It is known that his backers here are worried by his lateness in starting his campaign. The primary is only six weeks from next Tuesday, and the senator has not yet made a campaign speech or announced his platform for renomination. Last December he said he would begin his campaign early in January.

PETITIONS WITHDRAWN

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Before the deadline for such action, at midnight tonight, two candidates for state-wide offices and a score of aspirants for district places had withdrawn their primary petitions. The withdrawal of Edward J. Brundage from the United States senatorial race was received this evening. That of Mrs. Bertha Baur for congressman-at-large came in several hours earlier.

Among the other withdrawals filed were the following:

CONGRESS.

Second district—Joseph J. McGeeney, Rep.

Eighteenth district—Fred G. Snow, Kankakee, Dem.

Twenty-fifth district—Judson E. Harriss, Dequoin, Rep.

STATE SENATOR.

Twenty-seventh district—Martin Tarracciano and Martin L. Kuklinski, both Democratic.

STATE REPRESENTATIVE.

Eighth district—Frank Behringer, Waukegan, Dem.

Fourteenth district—Maurice C. Handelman, Rep.

Twentieth district—Charles W. Sparr, Morris, Rep.

Twenty-first district—Maurice E. Arkin, Rep.

Twenty-fifth district—Mark J. McNamara, Dem.

Twenty-seventh district—Benjamin Chmielewski, Rep.

Fiftieth district—Fred D. Nellis, Cairo, and Bert Bagley, West Frankfort, both Republican.

Where there is no address given for a candidate the district is a Chicago one.

HUSBAND TRIES TO AID HUNT FOR WIFE'S SLAYER

Admittedly facing a blank wall in their search for the slayer of Mrs. Agnes Lavander, who was shot to death Monday night near the Forest Glen station of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad, the police last night turned to her husband and other relatives for aid in finding a clew to the motive and the circumstances of the mysteridus murder.

Seven suspects who had been questioned were all exonerated by Deputy Commissioner James L. Mooney and all but two of them were released from custody last night. Those two were being held for investigation in connection with other crimes, Commissioner Mooney declaring he was certain they had no connection with the Lavander case.

In their effort to reconstruct the killing, the police were carefully tracing Mrs. Lavander's movements and those of her husband on Monday night, in the hope that some detail heretofore overlooked might give them a clew to the identiy of the slayer. The husband, Stanley M. Lavander, retold to Lieut. Julian Vernacchi at the Irving Park police station his theory of Mrs. Lavander's supposed actions after she left home at 5451 Ludlam avenue to meet him.

At midnight Lavander went to the scene of the murder with the police.

Mrs. Lavander was to have met her husband at the Union station to accompany him and two friends to a theater. Lavander, an employé of the Cracker Jack company, left his office at about 5 p. m. and met the two friends, Leslie Kewley, 7544 Kingston avenue, and Miss Alice Ryan, at Franklin and Washington streets, shortly before 6 o'clock. They had dinner and then walked to the Bismarck hotel to wait until the time for Lavander to meet the train.

Goes to Meet Train.

The time for the train, which formerly left the Forest Glen station at 7:11 p. m., had been changed to 4:53 p. m., but Lavander and his wife were ignorant of the change in the schedule. At 7:20, Kewley told the police, when questioned yesterday, Lavander arose and asked him what time it was, adding that he had forgotten his watch. Kewley told him and Lavander left, saying that he would go to the station and meet his wife at the Union station, where the train, according to the old schedule, was due to arrive at 7:40 p. m.

Lavander, having waited at the station until about 8 o'clock, as he told the police, went in search of her, first telephoning his home to learn if she had left. He then searched about the Forest Glen station for two hours, before reporting her disappearance to the Irving Park police.

After the police had compared Lavander's story with the stories of his brother-in-law, Walter Paske, and Kewley and Miss Ryan Lieut. Vernacchi said no hidden detail that might be of any assistance to the police had been revealed.

The two prisoners still held last night were Carl Acqua, 29 years old, 7126 South Hermitage avenue, and Arthur Johnson, 42 years old, 2272 Milwaukee avenue. Acqua is held for an attack on two young women, while Johnson was sent to the psychopathic hospital for examination, he being an escaped inmate of the Elgin insane asylum.

Hunt Mother of Four, Missing Since Friday

A search for Mrs. Ann Murphy, 45 years old, Glenwood, who disappeared on Friday, was started yesterday by the Oak Park and Chicago police. Mrs. Murphy, the mother of four children, telephoned from the loop at noon on Friday to her cousin, Mrs. George Menger, 946 Hayes avenue, Oak Park, that she was on her way to Oak Park for a visit. She did not arrive at the Menger home.

Now Majestic GUARANTEES

No Reduction in Prices!

Realizing that a satisfied owner is the greatest advertisement of all, Majestic has always sought to have its owners proud of their purchase. Majestic owners are proud of their Majestic sets. To prove it, look around you—make inquiries—ask your neighbor who owns a Majestic. And many more than two million happy people do own them.

In the "For Sale" columns of the want ad sections of great city dailies, you will find hundreds of other sets "For Sale Cheap," but you seldom find a Majestic thus advertised.

In fact, it's hard to buy a "second-hand" Majestic. Dealers will tell you that the few times they do take in a Majestic it is usually part payment on a new Majestic; and the "old Majestic" is sold so quickly there is hardly time to even wipe off the dust. In practically every section of the country the dealers' own Blue Book, which gives the official trade-in price of every make of radio set, classifies Majestic as having the highest trade-in value of any radio set in the country.

This bespeaks pride of ownership. But this ad gives you another definite reason why you can be prouder still of any Majestic you are thinking of buying.

Effective immediately, Grigsby-Grunow guarantees that the company will not reduce the list prices of its present models up to January 1, 1931.

Pause and realize the significance of the above announcement—Majestic, the world's largest manufacturers of complete radio receivers, can only make it because of having already put into effect every saving possible through mass production and mass purchasing power. Majestic has priced its present series of sets at the lowest possible figures at which quality merchandise, of the standard required by Majestic engineers, can be produced—has instituted the most economical distribution methods known to the industry.

Your investment is safe with Majestic—safe as to quality, safe as to price. If you have hesitated to buy a Majestic, being confused at the lurid offers of bankrupt merchandise being dumped on the market, go this day to any authorized Majestic Dealer and buy your Majestic. You can feel absolutely confident that you are buying a good money's worth and absolute security on value, not to mention the most important thing of all—your pride in owning a set that is the finest that hands and brains can create.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of outgrowned trusses, as they all set where the lame is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime (no matter the size of the rupture), and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil.

The Spermatic Shield-Complex in combination with the Retainer-Grappler (Patent No. 747247 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but corrects the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any lacerament method or other procedure and producing results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secured a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. PROGRESS IN RUSSIA.

It is no longer fashionable to speak of the overthrow of the soviet régime. Predictions of the imminent collapse of the communist state were freely made when it was younger. Some of the forecasts reflected merely the wishful thinking of exiles. Others were based on an estimate of the effects of communist policies. The trouble with these estimates was that they took no account of the Russian capacity for suffering and inaction in the face of suffering. The Russian government, to be sure, has imposed a tyranny and a degree of physical deprivation which the peoples of western Europe and America could not tolerate, but Russians are different. Their standards are lower. Their experience of misery has been prolonged. Their pessimism is deep. Therefore the predictions of revolt have not been realized.

Still, it would be a mistake to assume that the communist state is secure. Perhaps at no time since 1918 has it been less secure. The base of Russian society is the peasant class, which constitutes nine-tenths of the population. The government represented by Stalin has, of late years, sought to carry the revolution to these peasants. The kulaks, the less impoverished peasants, have been driven to cover. Some of them have joined the coöperative farms, though they remain suspect even after giving up their property; others who have refused to pool their holdings fear to produce more than the bare minimum of food required to keep themselves and their families from starvation. The coöperative farms are land poor. They lack horses and machinery, including tractors, needed for large scale farming, and even more they lack 25,000 trained agronomists to act as farm managers. The small farmers dare not produce as much food as they have in the past; and the coöperative farms cannot produce for lack of machinery and managerial brains. Of recent weeks Russia has been exporting wheat in considerable quantities. Hunger on the farms and starvation in the cities may be averted by bumper crops in 1930; and a short crop, by the same token, may have profound political repercussions.

This analysis of the Russian outlook is not that of a seasoned enemy of communism. It will be found in the writings of Herr Paul Scheffer of the Berliner Tageblatt. Herr Scheffer is regarded by many of his colleagues in journalism as one of the ablest, if not the foremost, students of contemporary Russian affairs. He lived for many years under the bolsheviks and was highly regarded by them until recently, when his dispatches pointed to the unsoundness of Stalin's agrarian policies. Herr Scheffer is no longer welcome in Moscow. He left Russia and has been refused the right to return.

One of his latest articles, published in the London Observer and reprinted in a recent number of the Living Age, ventures a prediction of the next turn in the history of the revolution. If the agrarian policy of the present government ends in collapse, the next step, he thinks, will not be a reversion toward the right, toward a compromise with capitalism along the lines suggested by Lenin in his new economic policy, but rather a further movement toward the left. The treatment which Stalin accorded Trotzky and his associates who counseled against extreme communism may be meted out, in turn, to Stalin. As Scheffer puts it:

"The menace is not only from the faint hearts of the right. The left, too, is stirring. The youth of Russia is on the left. Its training in communism has been as extreme as possible. It knows nothing of the outer world. It has no standards by which to frame its judgments. . . . There is abundant evidence that communism in the soviet union is not moving fast enough for these young minds. Will they one day throw it in Stalin's teeth that all his difficulties are due to his failure to be swift and thorough enough in forcing at all costs the creation of their Golden Age? From his own arguments against the right they could draw weapons to strike him down."

Herr Scheffer does not mention another element in the Russian economy which may prove equal in importance to agricultural collapse in bringing about a crisis. The Russian currency is being steadily inflated. In the month of October, 1929, alone there was an increase of more than 10 per cent in the circulation of paper money. The increase, if we are to believe the soviet economists, writing in "Economic Life," is the consequence in part of "delays in grain collection." The soviets, having discarded the laws of Jesus and Moses, seem now to have determined to disregard Gresham's law as well. The outcome will be watched with interest.

CHASE COMES TO ILLINOIS.

Illinois has reason to rejoice over the selection and the acceptance of Dr. Chase of the University of North Carolina as president of the great institution at Urbana. A committee representing the trustees of the university, the faculty, and the alumni has been very thorough in canvassing the field of available educators and is to be congratulated upon its success. Dr. Chase is one of the outstanding university builders of the country, with a record of accomplishment which brought him not only distinguished recognition but many tempting offers from other institutions. That he has decided to come to us is gratifying and significant.

It is no disparagement of North Carolina to say that Illinois offers an opportunity to a man and educator of Dr. Chase's moral and mental caliber not surpassed anywhere in the country. It now has a magnificent physical and technical plant. The great work of Dr. James in this field has been carried on and consolidated during the astute and devoted administration of Dr. Kinley. It has a good board of trustees and a strong backing in the alumni and press. What it needs most at this stage is a strengthening of the scholastic and teaching structure and a general advance along this line. Dr. Kinley's health has hastened his retirement, but he steps aside with the appreciation and gratitude of every friend of the university. Dr. Chase will take over his responsibilities with the prestige of his own high reputation and striking accomplishment. He is also assured of support from the intelligent public opinion of the state and from a loyal alumni. The prospect is one of inspiring progress for the great institution of which Illinois is rightly proud.

A NIGHT'S RIDE FROM CHICAGO.

To keep the turnstiles clicking World's Fair workers are banking on the accessibility of Chicago to a great and prosperous volume of population. Chicago is within convenient motoring distance of the entire country and much of Canada; air routes converge here and visitors may come by water. But the railroads must be depended upon to bring us the bulk of the cash customers. Persons within an overnight's journey of Chicago by railroad will be the most numerous patrons of the fair. What are the cities from which Chicago can be reached by a night's ride on the train?

By consulting time tables THE TRIBUNE'S traffic department has prepared a map showing the cities in which travelers can board a train just before the evening meal and wake up in Chicago. An overnight railroad trip is no longer more than an incident in American existence. It is not a hardship to business men nor an indulgence to pleasure seekers. Consequently people within this range of Chicago will visit the fair with scarcely more preparation or forethought than they would go to the theater.

Albany, N. Y., is the most distant point, north, south, east, or west, which is accessible to Chicago in an overnight trip on the present railroad schedules. A special New York Central train stops at Albany at 5:51 in the evening and arrives in Chicago at 9:45 the next morning. Harrisburg, Pa., is the Pennsylvania railroad's farthest station in overnight range. Leaving there at 5:53 p. m., the traveler arrives in Chicago at 9 a. m. The Baltimore and Ohio brings Cumberland, Md., within our specifications, touching the mountain town at 6:41 in the evening and reaching here at 9 a. m.

The southern sweep of territory within a night's ride of Chicago extends on the Southern railroad to Lexington, Ky., 4:40 p. m.-7:10 a. m.; on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois to Nashville, Tenn., 5:40 p. m.-7:45 a. m., and on the Illinois Central to Grenada, Miss., 6:55 p. m.-9:30 a. m.

To the southwest there is Springfield, Mo., on the St. Louis-San Francisco, where the train boarded at 5 p. m. reaches Chicago at 7:45 in the morning. Leaving Topeka, Kas., on the Santa Fé at 6:20 in the evening, the Chicago visitor arrives at 8:10 a. m.

The Rock Island's farthest overnight city from Chicago is Lincoln, Neb., where a train is scheduled to leave at 5 p. m. and arrive in Chicago at 7:30 the next morning. The North Western and the Union Pacific reach Chicago at 9:20 a. m., leaving Grand Island, Neb., at 5:30 the previous evening. Departing from Sioux City, Ia., at 5:30 p. m., the North Western arrives in Chicago at 7:20 a. m.

The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific and the Northern Pacific bring Fergus Falls, Minn., within our radius. The schedule is: Leave Fergus Falls 5:35 p. m.; arrive Chicago 9:15 a. m. Leaving Duluth, Minn., at 5:35 in the evening, the North Western arrives here at 8:10 a. m. Ishpeming, Mich., is also a North Western overnight outpost. The traveler may leave there at 6:40 in the evening and reach Chicago at 7:25 in the morning. The Soo Line makes an overnight run from Sault Ste. Marie to Chicago, leaving at 5:40 p. m. and arriving at 7:25 a. m. Traverse City, Mich., is, by grace of the Pere Marquette, within the fold. The trip is from 4:45 in the evening to 7:10 in the morning. Finally, there is Toronto, Canada, which is accessible by a night's ride either on the Canadian National or the Canadian Pacific.

The territory described within a line touching these cities contains the largest potential attendance at the World's Fair. All of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Ohio, Michigan, much of New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, and Minnesota, and part of Alabama, Kansas, and Nebraska are within this vast stretch. If the railroads can be induced to continue their recently adopted practice of arranging faster schedules the overnight territory will be considerably enlarged.

The following Bible reading begins with the fourth verse of the seventeenth chapter of I. Samuel. The American standard version is used. The only change is in paragraph form and punctuation method.

DAVID AND GOLIATH

And there went out a champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, of Gath, whose height was six cubits and a span. And he had a helmet of brass upon his head, and he was clad with a coat of mail; and the weight of the coat was five thousand shekels of brass. And he had greaves of brass upon his legs, and a javelin of brass between his shoulders. And the staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam; and his spear's head weighed six hundred shekels of iron; and his shield-bearer went before him. And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, "Why are ye come out to set your battle in array? Am not I a Philistine, and ye servants to Saul? Choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me. If he be able to fight with me, and kill me, then will we be your servants; but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us." And the Philistine said, "I defy the armies of Israel this day; give me a man, that we may fight together." And when Saul and all Israel heard those words of the Philistine, they were dismayed, and greatly afraid.

Now David was the son of that Ephrathite of Bethlehem-judah whose name was Jesse; and he had eight sons; and the man was an old man in the days of Saul, stricken in years among men. And the three eldest sons of Jesse had gone after Saul to the battle; and the names of his three sons that went to the battle were Eliab the first-born, and next unto him Abinadab, and the third Shammah. And David was the youngest; and the three eldest followed Saul. Now David went to and fro from Saul to feed his father's sheep at Bethlehem. And the Philistine drew near morning and evening, and presented himself forty days.

And Jesse said unto David his son, "Take now for thy brethren an ephah of this parched grain, and these ten loaves, and carry them quickly to the camp to thy brethren; and bring these ten cheeses unto the captain of their thousand, and look how thy brethren fare, and take their pledge." Now Saul, and they, and all the men of Israel, were in the vale of Elah, fighting with the Philistines. And David rose up early in the morning, and left the sheep with a keeper, and took, and went, as Jesse had commanded him; and he came to the place of the wagons, as the host which was going forth to the fight shouted for the battle. And Israel and the Philistines put the battle in array, army against army. And David left his baggage in the hand of the keeper of the baggage, and ran to the army, and came and saluted his brethren.

And as he talked with them, behold, there came up the champion, the Philistine of Gath, Goliath by name, out of the ranks of the Philistines, and spake according to the same words; and David heard them. And all the men of Israel, when they saw the man, fled from him, and were sore afraid. And the men of Israel said, "Have ye seen this man that is come up? Surely to defy Israel is he come up; and it shall be, that the man who killeth him, the king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and make his father's house free in Israel." And David spake to the men that stood by him, saying, "What shall be done to the man that killeth this Philistine, and taketh away the reproach from Israel? For who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God?" And the people answered him after this manner, saying, "So shall it be done to the man that killeth him."

And Eliab his eldest brother heard when he spake unto the men; and Eliab's anger was kindled against David, and he said, "Why art thou come down? And with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness? I know thy pride, and the naughtiness of thy heart; for thou art come down that thou mightest see the battle." And David said, "What have I now done? Is there not a cause?" And he turned away from him toward another, and spake after the same manner; and the people answered him again after the former manner.

And when the words were heard which David spake, they rehearsed them before Saul; and he sent for him. And David said to Saul, "Let no man's heart fail because of him; thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine." And Saul said to David, "Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him; for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth." And David said unto Saul, "Thy servant was keeping his father's sheep; and when there came a lion, or a bear, and took a lamb out of the flock, I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth; and when he arose against me, I caught him by his beard, and smote him, and slew him. Thy servant smote both the lion and the bear; and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them, seeing he hath defied the armies of the Living God." And David said, "The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine." And Saul said unto David, "Go, and the Lord shall be with thee." And Saul clad David with his apparel, and he put a helmet of brass upon his head, and he clad him with a coat of mail. And David girded his sword upon his apparel, and he assayed to go; for he had not proved it. And David said unto Saul, "I cannot go with these; for I have not proved them." And David put them off him.

O hero of our younger race!
Great builder of a temple new!
Ruler who sought no lordly place!
Warrior who sheathed the sword he drew!

Lover of men who saw afar
A world unmarred by want or war,
Who knew the path, and yet forbore
To tread, till all men should implore;
Who saw the light, and led the way
Where the gray world might greet the day;

Father and leader, prophet sure,
Whose will in vast works shall endure,
How shall we praise him on this day of days,
Great son of fame who has no need of praise?

How shall we praise him? Open wide the doors
Of the fair temple whose broad base he laid.
Through its white halls a shadowy cavalcade
Of heroes move o'er unresounding floors—
Men whose brawned arms upraised these colors high
And reared the towers that vanish in the sky,—
The strong who, having wrought, can never, never die.

RELIEF FOR THE DEAF.

IT IS possible that before many years the chronically deafened may have new possibilities of relief. About one hundred years ago Dr. William Wilde of Dublin said of one of two varieties: "One kind of deafness is due to wax and is curable; the other is not due to wax and is not curable." Since then we have traveled forward somewhat, though not enough to satisfy. We now have refined electrical instruments to test hearing in place of the old time tuning fork. We have electrical hearing devices in addition to artificial ear drums, speaking tubes, and ear trumpets, and we know which kind of ear apparatus can be expected to be of most service to a given case.

We know that chronic deafness may be due to several causes and may be of several kinds and we are acquiring ability to differentiate between the several varieties. Various methods of using sounds to massage the ear drums are in use. The objection argued against the earlier apparatus was that the vibrations were not of the same wave length used by the human voice and, therefore, the massage they gave was not equal to that the ears got from use.

It was contended that hearing noises was better massage for the ear than was supplied by any device in use. Later devices were made which met some of these objections. Some have reported good effects from the use of these devices. Dr. D. W. Drury says: "Some cases of chronic deafness are inflammatory in character. These are the cases of catarrhal deafness. The noises in the ears, the vertigo, and some part of the deafness in these cases are benefited and sometimes cured by attention to the nose and throat. Some require operation."

Even a larger proportion of cases are due to what is known as otosclerosis.

However, most pathologists think this name is incorrect since hardening of the bones of the ear is either absent or is secondary to other processes. In otosclerosis treatment of the nose and throat is not expected to relieve head noises, vertigo or deafness.

Dr. Drury finds that some of these cases are due to disturbance of the ductless glands. In some, the trouble is in the thyroid; in others in the pituitary; and in a few, in the ovaries. In some of these cases relief follows treatment of the underlying ductless gland trouble. An examination of a person to find the cause of chronic deafness and to suggest a cure should include investigation of the endocrines.

MUST HELP OUT NATURE.

W. A. M. writes: A year ago I stretched a ligament of the first joint of my middle finger. It is bent forward and is rather swollen. I have no control over this joint, although I can move it with my other hand. I was told it would eventually fall into place. Is this possible?

REPLY.

I think you need help. Nature seems not equal to the job.

MASSAGE WILL NOT HELP.

F. W. writes: I am a victim of infantile paralysis and, due to this, my left leg from the knee down is much smaller than my right. Will electric massage help?

REPLY.

No.

DISORDER IS NOT SERIOUS.

A. W. writes: I am beginning to have enlarged finger joints, but no pain. What causes this? Is it arthritis? What should I eliminate from my diet? What foods are best to eat?

REPLY.

This is a disorder frequently encountered in elderly people. It is found in women more frequently than in men. It is one form of arthritis.

Possibly overcoming constipation may help. Diet is not supposed to affect it. I do not know what else to say.

The disorder is not serious.

WILL NOT HARM HEALTH.

E. C. V. writes: If a person has sweaty, odorous feet, will curing the condition harm his general health?

MENINGITIS.

Mrs. C. N. writes: Is spinal meningitis contagious? Does the law require the body to be buried within 24 hours after death? Are friends and relatives allowed to visit patient while sick with spinal meningitis? After death?

REPLY.

Spinal meningitis is regarded as contagious. It is included among the reportable contagious diseases by health departments. The law or the rules of the department always cover the points you ask about. Ascertain the law in your state and city and obey it.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 23, 1865.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Admiral David D. Porter reported from the Cape Fear river to Gideon Welles, secretary of the navy, under date of Feb. 19, as follows: "I have the honor to report the surrender or evacuation of Fort Anderson. Gen. Schofield advanced from Smithville on the 18th with 8,000 men and at the same time I attacked the works by water, placing the monitor Montauk close to the works and enfilading them with the Pawtucket, Santee, Unadilla and Pequot. The fort answered pretty briskly. On the next day I moved up closer and the boats kept up a heavy fire. The enemy's batteries were silenced by 3 o'clock in the afternoon, but we continued to fire all day and throughout the night. The enemy left in the night, taking with them everything of value."

NEW YORK.—The Tribune's Washington special says: "It is probable the new secretary of the treasury will be appointed within a day or two. There is still great diversity of opinion as to whom Mr. Lincoln will select. James Howe of Pittsburgh is being urged from Pennsylvania. The delegation of the Illinois legislature has indorsed Hugh McCulloch of Indiana." The Tribune says: "We understand the President has concluded to appoint Mr. McCulloch, now controller of the currency."

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—A special to the Bulletin from Washington says: "It is said that rebel papers announce that Gen. Sherman's advance reached Camden, forty miles north of Columbia, S. C., on Feb. 18. Camden is northeast of Columbia, about half the way to Florence, showing that Sherman is moving for the latter place. Hardee is evidently pressing forward to reach Florence, and thence to Wilmington. His race with Sherman will be a close one."

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 23, 1900.

LONDON.—The London press is exceedingly optimistic this morning in the unanimous belief that Gen. Cronje and his Boer army are as good as crushed already and that Ladysmith to all practical purposes has been relieved. A Cape Town report that Gen. Cronje asked Lord Kitchener for 24 hours' armistice to bury his dead is followed by another from the same source to the effect that Kitchener replied: "Not a minute. Your whole force must surrender." Another report says that the Boers admit to 800 killed and wounded in the Paardeburg fighting.

PAARDEBURG DRIFT. — Today, Feb. 20, was the third day of Gen. Cronje's imprisonment and grim resistance. Early today the British infantry engaged the Boers in the bed of the river, driving them back a short distance. Lord Roberts' artillery was on both banks of the river and enfiladed the whole stream. These guns must have done terrific execution, but the Boer loss is not yet known. There is something tragic in the stern resistance which Gen. Cronje is hopelessly offering.

CHICAGO.—The work of erecting the buildings for the Chicago institute, the academic and pedagogical school founded by Mrs. Emmons Blaine, will be begun at once. They are expected to be so far advanced as to permit the opening of the summer school on July 2.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 23, 1920.

CHICAGO.—Open defiance of the power of the federal authorities to enforce prohibition in the upper peninsula of Michigan has developed in the thickly populated mining district of Iron county. So serious is the situation, as outlined by Leo J. Grove, supervising prohibition agent for the upper peninsula, on his arrival in Chicago yesterday, that Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, prohibition chief of the central division, wired to Washington for full authority to lead an armed forced to quell the "revolt."

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Walter A. Scott, 1411 North State street, advertised for a maid, and a nice looking girl who said her name was Ethel Mann applied for the job and got it. Now $3,000 worth of antiques, cut glass and jewels is gone and so is the nice looking maid.

CHICAGO.—Federal revenue agents raided the St. James grill on the top floor of the Majestic hotel and confiscated some jugs of whisky and wine. Charles M. Sommers, the proprietor, was arrested.

WASHINGTON.—Unless the unexpected happens the senate will adopt the compromise railroad reorganization bill tomorrow or Tuesday, whereupon the labor forces plan to appeal to President Wilson to use his veto.

GERMANY'S PLIGHT.

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—The Dawes plan was discovered to be breaking down at the moment when Germany's capacity to pay came to the test of really paying from her own resources rather than from the loans granted to her by American banks. Now, with the Young plan, history is repeating itself. The latest plan "made in America"—no reflection upon the good will of its originator—is to replace the impossibilities of its predecessor with a practicable system of payments from Germany's own resources. But what about the resources? In private business the creditor finds it his own interest to have the resources of his debtor preserved, or, if possible, increased. Not so with the allied creditor nations. They do not appear to reason along the lines of a sound business policy. The wise fable of the goose and the golden egg has no meaning for them. They insist upon killing the goose.

Neither the Dawes plan nor the Young plan will result in substantially helping to solve the essential problem. Both plans deal with an entirely fictitious "capacity to pay." Neither the one nor the other took into consideration the fatal leak in Germany's economic organization. Owing to the pressure of French diplomacy the old time war psychosis prevailed, which means destruction instead of reparation. In the first place, just as happened ten years ago, no credit was given to Germany for the territories taken away from her. The value of her colonies alone had been conservatively estimated at 100 billion gold marks. No mathematical figures would do justice to the value of Upper Silesia, West Prussia, Posen, Alsace-Lorraine. On the other hand, the corridor was thrust in between East Prussia and its mainland, ostensibly with the intention of giving Poland an access to the sea, in reality for the purpose of giving France (for Poland is practically a French colony) the same strangle hold in the east as she had in the west. It is in that region where Germany's economic system is slowly but surely being ruined.

I invite fair minded Americans to visit the corridor and the territory east and west of it. They will find land, never Polish before, in Polish hands. They will see one of the oldest German cities, Danzig, fighting a losing fight against a Polonization forced upon her. They will see farms cut to pieces by a frontier drawn for military reasons, a barrier, sixty feet east of the Vistula, near enough for the German farmers to see the river, too far away to use its water. The Versailles treaty, intolerably hard as it was, promised the Germans an access to the Vistula. The access now consists of a road, 12 feet wide, closed by a Polish toll gate.

The adjacent harbor, once German, is not available at all. The river navigation, once a flourishing industry, has ceased. The dikes and levies built by the Germans for the absolutely necessary protection of the lowlands east of the river, the German side, are being ruined by Polish negligence. The magnificent bridge near Muensterwaide, finished in 1909 at an expense of more than nine million gold marks, has been dismantled by the Poles, whereby the railroads and highways that used to connect east and west across the bridge were hopelessly blocked. Such is the nature of the war after the war.

East Prussia, thus isolated from its mother country and at the same time shut off from its former foreign market, Russia, cannot live. It will therefore fall an easy prey to Polish aggression, and Germany will be deprived of another chief source of supply. This will mean another gap in her revenues, another reduction in her "capacity to pay." Even now East Prussia is not self-supporting, but dependent upon subsidies from the reich, whereas it ought to support the mother country. It is impossible for the reich to stand that strain indefinitely. If the present situation is not remedied at once East Prussia—in fact, the whole territory east of the Oder—will be Polish within ten years.

The solemn promises of American statesmen have put a moral obligation upon our shoulders, the obligation of doing all in our power to right wrongs to which we were treacherously induced to subscribe. We are loaning money to Poland for her military schemes while we acquiesce in one more plan of liquidating the war on false premises. Germany's capacity to pay is still calculated on the basis of pre-war conditions no longer existing. We expect fabulous sums from resources which we are instrumental in destroying. If the corridor is allowed to stand Germany will be restricted in size to the territory between Rhine and Oder. Her Baltic seaports will be gone, her richest farm land will be settled by Poles. What will then be left of Germany's "capacity to pay"?

WHAT'S HAPPENING IN LONDON.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—In connection with the editorial "Stimson to Borah to MacDonald" of Feb. 14, I wonder is it possible that THE TRIBUNE or any of its capable staff really feel that the American delegation is in conference to give anything away or to come out of the conference with "as little as possible"? Heaven help them if they do believe it.

The statement that the "French, Italian, and Japanese delegates at times seem to be greatly puzzled" is not to be wondered at. They are puzzled, as are the English. They cannot quite understand that the American delegates are there for the express purpose of reducing the terrific overhead constantly upon maintaining a large naval force. These great American delegates are there to set a precedent. They are there to carry out the purposes for which the conference was arranged, and that is to reduce this aforementioned overhead. They have demonstrated that the United States is ready to put into actuality the expressed desire to reduce navies. For what other purpose are they there?

If other great nations can and will follow suit, has not a great good been done? Has the United States lost anything if they retain the same relative position they held? And don't forget that men like Stimson and Dawes are not "giving anything away" in the final analysis. A. N. JEREMY JR.

AFTER THE BOMBING.

Harvey, Ill., Feb. 14.—Do you know that the bombing on the northwest side last Sunday evening brought to a young man of clean character and stainless reputation a nightmare of brutality on the part of the police? All because he happened, unfortunately, to be waiting for a street car near the scene, and the explosion frightened him so that he ran, and directly into the arms of one of Chicago's policemen.

A night of hell for him at the hands of the central office thugs. His firm, after careful inquiry, finally discovered his whereabouts and secured his release on a bond of $5,000.

Sir, the influential pressure of the citizenry for the abolition of crime in this city always brings about unwarranted suffering upon the innocent citizenry themselves. While the elite of Chicago's criminals hobnob with the influential politicians under Florida's winter sunshine the great army of Chicago's unemployed are picked up and displayed to the public eye as thugs, gangsters, racketeers, and whatnot.

Do not think me a Red, nor Socialist, or anything not conducive to good citizenship; for I am born of this city, served my country in its hour of greatest need, married, have a family, hold a good position, and am respected and trusted by my fellow men.

I am only disgusted with conditions, and would like to lend my aid in the betterment of my compatriots' welfare, if this can be accomplished.

LAWRENCE C. OBRIEN.

HUTCHINS FOR PRESIDENT.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—As a presidential possibility for the White House at Washington when the right time arrives, the hand of destiny points to Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago.

His deep fund of knowledge, intimate study of human relations, his wonderful grasp of civic, state and national affairs combined with his international mind make Robert Maynard Hutchins well qualified to fill the greatest office in the gift of the nation, when opportunity calls. HARRY EDWARD FREEMAN.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—We can spend millions on extending parks, building a drive out in the lake, excessive payrolls, etc., but I do not recall seeing a policeman in the near north side district during several years. Incidentally, while dumping millions into the lake for a drive, the big chuck holes in our city pavements nearly break the springs of our cars. TAXPAYER.

FIND VIOLATION OF COUNTY ORDER IN AIR TRAGEDY

"Shocking" Conditions Bared at Inquest.

The plane in which Capt. Joseph Donnellan and Richard King were killed Friday was being flown in defiance of orders from Charles J. Sauers, general superintendent of the forest preserves, he testified at the inquest yesterday.

Donnellan and King, whom he was teaching to fly, were burned to death when their plane plunged 350 feet to the field at Irving Park boulevard and Cumberland avenue. Testimony at the inquest showed a disregard of department of commerce air regulations by those in charge at the field.

Field Under Ban.

Maj. Ralph Royce, county air officer, reported to the county board last November that the field was unsafe for flying. The board ordered flying terminated on Jan. 1. On Feb. 1, it was discovered that the hangars of the Pioneer Flying club and Chicago Flying club were on county property and that the entire field, with exception of a plot of 32 acres, was county property. The hangars were ordered removed.

Forest preserve police were on guard at the field to see that no flying was done until last Wednesday, when they were called to the Glenview district, where the neighborhood was reported in fear because of the murder of Mrs. Agnes Lavander. As soon as the police left flying was resumed, the evidence at the inquest revealed.

Shocking, Says Landis.

"The evidence offered shows a shocking state of affairs," commented Maj. Reed Landis, foreman of the jury of six pilots which heard the testimony. "During three years, it is apparent, there was no proper management at the field and the air laws were violated. Unlicensed ships and pilots were allowed at the field. The field itself is unsafe because of nearby telephone poles and the heavily wooded forest preserves."

The jury attempted to find who was responsible for conditions at the field. They found that the two flying clubs were composed of members who purchased planes jointly and hired pilots to teach them to fly. Thus, there was really no manager at the field, Maj. Landis pointed out.

Gust Lindquist, a pilot at the field, who also taught students, revealed that the ship in which Donnellan and King were killed figured in a crash several weeks ago at Woodstock, Ill. The plane was repaired but was not submitted for examination to a government inspector, as required by law.

"Flying Too Low."

The plane, a Parks two seater biplane with dual controls, was purchased on Dec. 1 by eight men who paid $350 apiece, according to testimony. It had had about 20 hours of flying at that time and Donnellan had flown it another ten hours since.

Although Donnellan had a reputation as a careful pilot and was experienced, he was flying much too low with the student, Maj. Landis declared after hearing the testimony.

Members of the club were not informed of the orders against flying at the field, according to Theodore Mount, 2647 Washington boulevard, one of the members. The inquest was continued until next Friday when the jury will return a lengthy verdict dealing with conditions at the field.

DEFENSE ASSAILS STATE SLEUTH IN 'BOMB RING' TRIAL

Altmeier's Reputation for Veracity Under Fire.

The reputation of Joseph Altmeier, bankrupt butcher, who turned undercover investigator for State's Attorney Swanson at $250 a month, was attacked yesterday in Judge William N. Gemmill's court by witnesses in behalf of three Italians charged with possession and sale of bombs. Several defense witnesses told of Altmeier's failure in the butcher business before he decided to turn detective for Swanson and uncover what was heralded at the time of the arrest as the "bomb trust."

Ficke Denies Bomb Knowledge.

Steve Ficke, father of five children and a naturalized citizen, who is a co-defendant with Gus Fiocca and Mike Caselli in what has been called the "butcher boys" bombing case, also took the witness stand to deny any connection with any bombing trust or with the twenty-five sticks of dynamite displayed in court on Friday by Assistant State's Attorney Wayland Brooks.

Ficke testified that he never knew either Caselli or Fiocca before his arrest and had no knowledge of bombs. He protrayed himself as the hardworking head of his family of five children.

Ficke told his attorney, John Johntry, that he has no knowledge of the whereabouts of his son, Vito, 14 years old, who was supposed to have delivered the bombs to Altmeier. The boy is missing.

Hear Character Witness.

Thomas J. Rooney, superintendent of the South Chicago branch of Armour & Co., and Frank S. Kelly, another employé of that concern, testified about Altmeier's reputation for truth and veracity. They would not believe him, they said, although at one time he was an extensive purchaser of meat from their employer.

Rooney said that Altmeier, before going bankrupt with creditors trying to collect approximately $60,000, was a rival of Fiocca in the butcher business in South Chicago. He testified that Altmeier asked him to negotiate for the sale of Fiocca's business so that the latter would not know who was trying to buy him out.

TRIBUNE TO NAME THIRD PERSONALITY WINNER NEXT SUNDAY

Final judging in THE TRIBUNE'S $22,000 Personality contest, enlistment in which closed Jan. 19, will be concluded next week.

Next Sunday announcement will be made of the winner of the third grand prize of $1,000. The second prize winner, who is to be awarded $2,000, will be announced on March 8 while the identity of the winner of the grand prize of $5,000 will be revealed on Sunday, March 15.

The committee of scientific characterologists and analysts who passed judgment upon the great army of candidates found it an enormous task. Entries, which were submitted from all sections of the country, totalled more than 70,000.

The Personality contest was not in any sense a beauty contest. Neither physical beauty nor photographic effects influenced selections. Any type of picture was considered—snap shots, cabinet photographs or post card pictures receiving equal attention. Personality, as expressed in the face, was the sole basis of award.

According to the experts, characterology is now an exact science, embracing psychological analysis comprehensively. Ordinarily, character is read intuitively, with varying degrees of accuracy, but in the recently concluded contest every picture was submitted to the examination of one or more experts.

THE TRIBUNE endeavored to find three girls who possessed personalities of unusually high order. The three have been found. Next Sunday a full page, natural color photograph of the third of these will form the cover for the rotogravure section.

ASSASSIN TAKES SOLE BLAME FOR SHOOTING RUBIO

Reveals He Acted on Spur of Moment.

BY JOHN CORNYN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO City, Feb. 22.—After 18 days of investigation behind closed doors and a strict military silence as to the character and motives of Daniel Flores, would-be assassin of President Ortiz Rubio, were revealed today for the first time. Flores was turned over to the civil authorities for trial yesterday in accordance with the Mexican law.

In interviews and in statements before the court, Flores declared that he had strong convictions in favor of Jose Vasconcelos, and had believed that the elections for the presidency had been unfairly conducted. He said that in attempting to assassinate President Rubio, he had acted on the spur of the moment, inspired by his political convictions.

Constant Church Goer.

Flores shows every evidence of being a weak character of a mystical nature, and an inability to reason connectively and clearly. From the time he left his native village, until he arrived in Mexico City, he frequented churches in different towns and was constantly in the company of priests, the authorities reveal.

The investigations and statements by Flores show that he is another tool to Leon Toral—the assassin who killed Gen. Alvaro Obregon. Living in an intensely Catholic community, where practically every one supported Vasconcelos' candidacy, and resenting his failure, Flores admitted that he felt strongly that some one should rid the world of Ortiz Rubio, who had stood in the way of Vasconcelos.

On Feb. 5, the day of the inauguration of President Rubio, Flores stood on the outside of the national stadium, where the ceremonies took place, until it was empty. He resented the ovation the newly elected president, he said. He followed the presidential party on to the national palace, and waited there.

"I hadn't made up my mind to any thing," he said. "I had scarcely arrived at the door of honor when I heard the bugle play the national salute, and I knew that President Rubio was coming out. I saw red. I was only six yards from the president's auto when I stepped forward, unloaded, drew my revolver, and fired all of its chambers at the president.

"I had no intention of hurting any one else. I was unaccompanied. I am not a member of the Vasconcelos party, although I cast my only vote for him in the presidential elections. "I am not a communist and do not know what a communist is. Politically, I am a Vasconcelos, and religiously, I am a Catholic."

Plot Against Hoover.

Although the two priests with whom Flores visited after leaving Mexico City, are under arrest and held for an examination, the belief prevails their trial will not connect them with the Flores crime.

St. Louis, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Nicholas Alcorta, 22, was held incommunicado tonight by immigration and secret service officers, who continued their investigation of reports he was the author of a letter in Mexico, which is said to have mentioned preparations to assassinate President Hoover.

Alcorta continued to assert that he wrote the letter to a college companion as a joke. Authorities said the youth would be held incommunicado pending the translation of a bundle of letters seized in his room here. The letters were written in Spanish.

Alcorta, a commercial artist, declared the letter contained any reference to a plot against the life of President Hoover.

In support of his statement that the letter was a joke Alcorta said, he had drawn a bomb and machine gun on the envelope and addressed it to his friend as the soviet representative at San Luis Potosi.

Chicago Prohibition Agent Robbed in Albany, N. Y.

Joseph Claffey, a prohibition agent living at 420 Diversey parkway, reported to the police at Albany, N. Y., yesterday that his room in an Albany hotel had been robbed of $2,210 in money. Among the valuables taken, he said, were three diamond rings worth $900, $700 and $300. Claffey was transferred to the Chicago prohibition district recently, and had been summoned in Albany to testify in federal court.

A NATIONAL INSTITUTION

DOCTOR, A DRY, TO TELL EVILS OF PROHIBITION

Gerty Called to Testify in Washington.

Dr. Francis J. Gerty, Chicago neurologist and for the last six years superintendent of the county psychopathic hospital, will depart for Washington on Tuesday to testify on Wednesday before the judiciary committee of the house of representatives regarding his observations of prohibition enforcement in Chicago. The committee is holding hearings on measures to repeal or modify the 18th amendment.

Representative James T. Igoe [Dem., Ill.] completed arrangements for the appearance of Dr. Gerty and of former Police Chief Morgan A. Collins before the committee yesterday, previous to his departure for the capital last night. He indicated that other Chicago witnesses might be obtained before the hearings are resumed.

Dr. Gerty Is a Dry.

In Dr. Gerty, the judiciary committee will have a witness who is personally dry and who has never given a thought to the political aspects of prohibition. Congressional drys will, however, get scant consolation from the trend of his testimony, as indicated by the neurologist last night in giving an outline of what he expects to tell the committee.

"I accepted the invitation to testify with reluctance," Dr. Gerty said. "My official duties are pressing and I can ill spare the time for the trip to Washington. Personally I never take a drink and have given no consideration to the political side of the prohibition question.

"Alcoholic Cases Increase."

"I have found it a pretty pitiful business, however, to deal with the thousands of alcoholic cases which have come to the psychopathic hospital in ever increasing numbers. I will take with me to Washington the hospital records which show that since 1922 the number of psychopathic cases due to alcoholism has been greater than at any time previous to the passage of the prohibition law.

"The gentlemen of congress can draw any conclusion they choose from this condition," he continued. "All I will do is present the records showing that cases of delirium tremens, alcoholic hallucinations, paraonia, and mental deterioration due to use of alcohol are more frequent now than they were before enactment of the Volstead act."

Collins to Tell of Crime.

Mr. Collins, who was police chief from 1923 to 1927 under the Dever administration, is going direct to Washington from a Pacific coast tour, it is understood. It is expected that he will tell the story of crime, graft and corruption attending prohibition, as he observed it while head of the police department. He is known to be an advocate of modification of the 18th amendment.

The only Chicagoan who has been before the committee so far is Attorney Ralph M. Shaw, who assailed the prohibition law in a statement presented Thursday. Invitations had been sent by Representatives Igoe and Adolph J. Sabath [Dem., Ill.] to a number of other Chicago civic leaders and officials including Chief of Police Russell, State's Attorney Swanson, Col. Robert Isham Randolph, and Silas H. Strawn, but owing to duties at home and uncertainty as to when they could be heard they were unable to arrange for the trip.

AERIAL BOMBS TO WARN RUM BOATS GUARD IS NEAR

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Commander M. W. Rasmussen, district chief of the coast guard, said today that liquor smugglers on Lake Erie would have no excuse hereafter if greeted by bullets after they refuse to halt on the signals of the coast guard. The entire coast guard fleet of 100 boats is to be equipped with aerial bombs which explode 200 feet in the air and display varicolored lights which will be visible for two minutes.

The contraband carriers are expected to realize when they hear a deafening report and witness the color display in the air that the coast guards demand that they halt immediately.

In addition the government chasers will have searchlights capable of throwing a light ray a distance of one mile.

Father, Rebuked by Son, Dives to Death in Lake

Angered because his son, Ernest, 25 years old, suggested that it was time for him to return to work after a two weeks' absence because of a cold, Gus Johnson, 64 years old, 9630 Ewing avenue, a carpenter for the Illinois Steel company, ran from his home last night and drowned himself in the lake at the foot of 99th street. His body was recovered by the East Side police.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The cerebro spinal meningitis death toll reached eighty-six here today. There have been 128 active cases in Indianapolis.

HOOVER LETTING DRY LAW FAIL, NORRIS CHARGES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—President Hoover's failure to "take politics out of Volsteadism" was assailed today by Senator George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], chairman of the senate's judiciary committee, as the underlying cause of the breakdown of prohibition enforcement.

"One sentence from the President would wipe out corruption in enforcement," the senator said. "The President has only to announce that he will disregard politics and politicians and political considerations regarding policies and appointments. There is no other way of making the dry law effective."

Such an investigation of enforcement conditions as he has proposed in a pending resolution, which is to come up before the judiciary committee Monday, would demonstrate, Norris asserted, that improvement must come "from the top."

Since the resolution was introduced last Monday a mass of information of a sensational nature has come to him from "seeming responsible sources," indicating, Norris said, "an amazing and astounding situation in many sections of the country."

GOVERNOR SETS ASIDE OFFICIAL ARBOR, BIRD DAYS

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Gov. Louis L. Emmerson today issued proclamations designating April 11 as Arbor day and Oct. 10 as Bird day.

In another proclamation the governor set the week of April 2 as the time for health promotion week and May 1 as child health day.

Judge Urges Insurance as Marriage Prerequisite

Life insurance as a prerequisite for marriage was advocated yesterday by Judge John G. Karel of Milwaukee, at the National Fraternal Congress of America, meeting at the Hotel Sherman. The insurance, Judge Karel said, would serve the double purpose of providing for a widowed mother and her children and operating as a certificate of the physical fitness of the bridegroom, as the insurance would not be issued unless the insured were in good health.

2 RUM RUNNERS 2,000 CASES OF LIQUOR SEIZED

New London, Conn., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Two rum running vessels and 2,000 cases of liquor were seized by a coast guard destroyer on the Atlantic ocean off the Long Island shore early today. The boats are the British schooner Isabel H., and the American gasoline powered boat Mohawk.

The destroyer on patrol came upon the rum boats while the Mohawk, a contact boat, was taking on a load of contraband under cloak of murky darkness and a heavy fog. Caught unawares neither the schooner nor the Mohawk had a chance to escape and men from the destroyer were sent aboard them. It was found that there was considerable liquor on the contact boat.

Although she had not completed taking on a full load from the schooner, both vessels were seized and with their crews and the liquor were taken to New York in tow of the destroyer.

HOLD SUSPECT IN SLAYING.

Lorenzo Loving, colored, 21 years old, 2001 Walnut street, was arrested by the Des Plaines street police yesterday in the investigation of the murder of Isadore Turek, in his grocery store at 235 North Ashland avenue, on Tuesday night.

HOUSE OF DAVID DIVIDES ASSETS, FORMS 2 CAMPS

Queen Mary Heads One, Dewhirst the Other.

St. Joseph, Mich., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—A truce between Queen Mary Dyer and Judge H. T. Dewhirst, rival leaders at the House of David, has been concluded.

According to the terms of the agreement both the assets and membership of the colony will be divided. Real estate and cash from $750,000 to $1,000,000 are to be divided between Queen Mary and Dewhirst and the followers.

Under her own leadership and management, Mary will set up her own colony elsewhere and Dewhirst will remain to rule the throne formerly occupied by King Benjamin Purnell.

The agreement has been signed by the two leaders and formal papers are now being drawn up by attorneys. Division of the colony holdings is to become effective April 1.

Dewhirst Keeps Headquarters.

According to terms of the settlement Dewhirst gets the Britain avenue property, the old House of David headquarters, and all the buildings thereon. He also will receive High Hand, retains the Australian colony properties and all cash and assets in the colony. Locally Dewhirst also will be given title to the hotel property on West Main street in Benton Harbor.

Queen Mary gets the 400 acre colony farm near Berrien Springs which is the largest farm owned by the colony, the uncompleted hotel building at Colfax and Elm streets in Benton Harbor and certain other city properties. The two leaders and their followers will divide $120,000 in both sides taking such personal belongings and furnishings as they now own.

Signing of the pact means peace for the time and the ending of litigation which has extended over a period of several years.

Attorney William P. Harvey of Benton Harbor, acting for Dewhirst, admitted that the settlement had been made. Counsel for Queen Mary is Senator J. Barnard of Paw Paw.

The leaders will hold the divided parts of the colony for their respective members. Dewhirst will continue the official board originated by King Benjamin. None of the members individually will get any of the money or property.

Membership Dwindles.

At one time the House of David had nearly one thousand members. Today there are only about four hundred. Mary probably will lead 215 between and Dewhirst will remain with 185. Older members remain under Queen Mary and many younger ones, including most of the musicians, will stay with Dewhirst.

The body of King Ben will remain where it has been for the last three years, in the diamond house near the auditorium, where for many years he preached the "gospel of eternal physical life."

"Under the terms of the agreement they may call her new colony the Apostolic House of David as reorganized by Mary Purnell."

Progress advanced for the truce are said both sides had become wearied of the long litigation; members had drifted along with colony receipts and even the walls Benjamin had built were commencing to crumble.

EXTORTION CASE WOMAN BEGS A NIGHT'S LODGING

Olga Edwards, Accused by Amster, Is Destitute.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Olga E. Edwards, former actress, who is accused by Nathan L. Amster, financier, of having extorted $170,000 from him in the past six years through threats of a paternity suit, and whose trial on a charge of extortion is now pending, appeared at the West 47th street police station tonight to declare herself utterly destitute and to ask for a night's lodging. She was accompanied by her 6 year old son, Lee. Both Mother and son were well dressed.

She explained to Capt. Lewis F. Dittman that the publicity caused by her arrest on Amster's charge had led to her eviction from the Savoy-Plaza, where her trunks and such household goods as she possesses were held for back payment of rent. She moved into a small hotel in West 59th street, she said, but has been unable to pay her rent there and was evicted late this afternoon.

Capt. Dittman made arrangements with the Volunteers of America to give Miss Edwards food and lodging for the next few days. The child, Lee, was booked as a "neglected minor," and turned over to the Children's society.

BISHOPS TO AID IN EVANSTON SEMINARY RITES

The Very Rev. Dr. Frederick C. Grant, dean of Western Theological seminary, Evanston, has announced the program of dedication of the first five units of the new $750,000 plant, which will take place tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. At 9:30, in a semi-private service, the body of the late Bishop Anderson will be committed to its final resting place in the crypt beneath the altar of the Anderson Memorial chapel. This service will be in charge of Bishop Elect Sheldon M. Griswold.

Dedication services will begin with the Rt. Rev. Harwood Sturtevant, bishop coadjutor of Fond du Lac, pronouncing the service for the Horlick refectory. The south dormitory will be dedicated by the Rt. Rev. Harry Sherman Longley, bishop of Iowa, and the Wheeler lecture hall and administration building will be dedicated by the Rt. Rev. John N. McCormick, bishop of western Michigan.

Bishop Griswold will dedicate the Robert B. Gregory library and the William B. Stirling cloister. The consecration of the Bishop Anderson Memorial chapel and altar and first celebration of holy communion in the edifice will close the ceremonies. The Rev. Dr. Grant will be the celebrant at the Eucharist. The Rev. George Craig Stewart, D. D., rector of St. Luke's church, Evanston, will preach the sermon.

FAIL TO LOCATE BODY OF GARY SICILIAN CHIEF

Although an all day search of likely localities in two counties had failed to discover his body, police of Gary, Ind., were convinced last night that Paul Perconti, 40 years old, chief of the Gary branch of the Unione Siciliana and reputed bootlegger, has been slain. He has been missing last Tuesday evening.

Twenty additional empty shells, from four types of pistols, were found yesterday in the immediate vicinity of the spot in 21st avenue, Gary, where a pool of blood and a litter of broken glass were found by police late Tuesday night after residents of that neighborhood heard a pistol volley. Seven of these shells were fired from a pistol of the same type as that found in a bloodstained holster on the "Old Johnson farm" in Porter county, ten miles east of Gary, Friday afternoon.

Perconti's wife identified the pistol and a bloodstained cap found with it as her husband's.

HAMAGUCHI WINS MAJORITY OF 80 IN JAPANESE DIET

Government Party Makes 101 Gains.

TOKIO, Feb. 23 [Sunday.]—(AP)—The final results of the national elections for the lower house of the Japanese diet today swept the Minseito party of Premier Hamaguchi to victory with a majority of 80 seats over all other parties.

The Minseito total was 273 seats, against 174 for the Seiyukai party, their chief rivals. The Proletarians returned 5 members, and other groups, 24.

Minseito Lost Only 2 Seats.

Premier Hamaguchi's followers lost only 2 of their seats in the preceding diet and gained 101.

An impartial opinion of the election result is that it is a sincere expression of approval of Premier Hamaguchi's policies of retrenchment of expenditures of a budget balanced without loans and of restoration of the gold standard for Japan. The verdict also is considered a repudiation of the Seiyukai's long domination of governmental affairs.

Ballot Strengthens Naval Envoys.

Although the election campaign was fought on purely domestic economic issues, all parties avoiding the naval disarmament question, it is believed that the Minseito party landslide strengthens the position of the delegates to the London conference, especially that of Reikiro Wakatsuki, former chief of the Minseito. The delegates, it is thought, will be permitted greater freedom in conducting negotiations, with authority to make concessions of developments warrant. The business world generally hails the results as insuring economic stability.

The Hamaguchi cabinet, of which all members holding seats in the lower house were reelected, will face the new parliament in an early special election, probably in the first days of April.

AUSTRIA TO URGE GERMANY TO SIGN BUSINESS TREATY

Hopes to Climb Out of Commerce Rut.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Feb. 22.—Having made amends to Premier Mussolini at Rome, in return for vague concessions to Austria which have not yet been definitely shaped, Chancellor Johann Schober reached Berlin early today.

This time he will try for specific results. His goal is a commercial treaty with Germany, giving Austria an opening for its exports and a chance, thereby, to again come down to economic earth. Upon his arrival the chancellor paid formal calls on President Paul von Hindenburg, Chancellor Mueller, and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius, Berlin dispatches say.

Although Austria and Germany nearly united during those hectic days following the signing of the armistice, and though the Anschluss movement is by no means dead, the two countries have never been able to get along commercially. Germany's high tariff on Austrian cattle, horses and lumber, has been one of the reasons for Austria's economic ruin.

Demands Tariff Concessions.

Last year Austria bought three times as much from Germany as she sold her. Chancellor Schober has declared that he will get tariff concessions from Berlin, or Austria will wage a retaliatory war.

While the Austrian chancellor is in Berlin primarily to reach a commercial accord, it is learned this visit has a good deal of political significance for all Europe.

Austria now looms, not only as the connecting link between western and eastern Europe, but as a new bridge between Italy and Germany, thus connecting the Baltic and the Mediterranean, cutting off France from her wards — the members of the little entente and Poland.

Jailed Tyroleans Given Amnesty.

That Chancellor Schober discussed this with Premier Mussolini is well known. The only fear here is that the clever leader of Italy is only using Austria to better the Italian aspirations in the Balkans and diminish France's sphere of influence. If Germany develops closer relations with Italy, however, Austria will be in the key position.

All Tyroleans, arrested for political offenses, have been granted amnesty by Il Duce, according to Rome dispatches. Herr Schober himself is supposed to have received a promise from Premier Mussolini that the Italianisation of Austrians in southern Tyrol will proceed much less brutally than heretofore. Yesterday's amnesty is the first step in that direction.

FILIPINOS ERECT FIRST MONUMENT TO WASHINGTON

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 22.—[U.P.]—As Filipino demands for independence rang throughout the country today a monument to George Washington, the first in the Philippines, was unveiled at San Lazaro leprosy hospital by Mrs. Ventura, wife of Judge Ventura. The monument was erected by Filipino Boy Scouts and former lepers.

Filipinos throughout the islands hailed Washington's birthday as an auspicious day to press their independence demands, because of Washington's fame as the world's greatest independente.

Former Senator Juan Alegre and Gov. Ignacio of Mindoro attacked Gov. Gen. Davis, alleging that he is subordinating interests of the Filipinos to American appointed officials.

YANKEE WOMAN SEEKS COUNCIL SEAT IN SHANGHAI

Candidacy Excites Foreign Section.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—Miss Viola [illegible], United States trade commissioner, stationed at Shanghai, today was nominated as candidate for the municipal council election for the municipal council for the international settlement. [illegible] She is the first woman ever nominated for a position in the governing body of the foreign settlement. [illegible] Smith was nominated by two other American business women, Virginia Cowper, a book dealer, and Edna [illegible], a rug dealer.

Causes Great Excitement.

While the nomination has the support of the local Anglo-American Women's club, it has caused a sensational complication in local politics, due to the action of the male members of the American community, who today nominated two other candidates, the Rev. Charles Patton, Presbyterian missionary, and J. W. Carney, member of the staff of Socony.

Heretofore only two Americans ever held places in the local administration, and the election of all three would mean the displacement of one British member of the council, the British having held the majority of seats be-

Is China Many Years.

Miss Smith is a member of the foreign section of the United States department of commerce and has lived in China for many years, being the first woman ever appointed as foreign trade commissioner.

The nomination of members to the council of the international settlement is attracting major interest, due to the efforts of the powers to adjust the long standing Chinese foreign deadlock over control of the foreign area. It was recently decided to increase the Chinese membership of the council from three to five, making the present composition five Chinese, five British, two Americans and two Japanese.

ENGAGED

Miss Kate Lurya, whose engagement to Samuel J. Sherman has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Lurya, 3260 Sheridan road. Mr. Sherman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sherman. Both Miss Lurya and Mr. Sherman are graduates of Northwestern university.

Open Ward of 56 Beds at Contagious Disease Hospital

A new ward of 56 beds will be opened tomorrow at the contagious disease hospital for convalescent scarlet fever cases, Health Commissioner Kegel announced yesterday. The ward was made available by the transfer of the nurses' quarters from the hospital to the new nurses' home which was opened recently.

SUFFOCATED BY FIRE IN BED.

John Stevenson, 30 years old, 530 North Wells street, was suffocated early yesterday in his bedroom when a cigaret which he was smoking in bed ignited the mattress.

BRIMSTONE ODOR RECALLED IN OLD BIBLICAL SCHOOL

Garrett President Tells of Pioneer Trials.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Theological seminaries were regarded as anterooms to hell by most of American Christians seventy-five years ago when Garrett Biblical institute was founded, according to President F. C. Eiselen of Garrett, who told yesterday of anniversary celebration plans.

Garrett Biblical institute is the oldest seminary in Chicago that has always been a Chicago institution. It also pioneered against the religious antagonism and prejudice generally associated with such institutions in early days, Dr. Eiselen pointed out.

"To advocate the establishment of a school of theology in such unfriendly atmosphere," Dr. Eiselen said, "required faith, courage, and a true pioneer spirit. Early leaders had already taken steps to found a university at Evanston. They considered no obstacle sufficiently serious to stop them.

Compromise on Name.

"But on one point they were willing to compromise, and that was in the matter of a name for the school. A school of theology was of the devil; an 'institute' for the study of the Bible was of God. Hence the name—Garrett Biblical institute — which is also to commemorate the generosity of Mrs. Eliza Garrett."

The founding of theological seminaries of the Methodist Episcopal church and other bodies resulted in controversy not unlike the present fundamentalist-modernist dispute. In 1840, the bishops' message to the general conference discouraged theological training while the 15 years intervening before the founding of Garrett were full of dispute. The New York Christian Advocate, a Methodist journal, commenting on the widespread protest against Garrett at the time it was opened 75 years ago, said:

"The great body of our people prefer heat to light, and spiritual common sense to all the literary refinements that were ever concocted in all the theological seminaries of the universe."

Improves Religious Training.

Garrett Biblical institute has made easier the development of theological education in Chicago. Practically all of the greater communions are developing their leading seminaries here. The Presbyterian Theological seminary is in the midst of a development, involving several million dollars, at Fullerton and Halsted streets, while tomorrow Episcopalians will dedicate the first units of Western Theological seminary on grounds nearly opposite Garrett Biblical institute in Sheridan road, Evanston.

The Episcopal school is erected on lands largely given by Northwestern university and Garrett. The two seminaries are related so closely that interchange of courses, students and professors will extend the range of instruction in both institutions. This relationship, it is said, will have great influence on the development of church unity. Chicago is now regarded as the center of American theological education.

The financial foundation of Garrett institute lies in a bequest of Mrs. Eliza Garrett. Practically the entire bequest was real estate, valued in 1855 at $300,000. The property is in the vicinity of what is now Wacker drive and Lake street and on Indiana avenue and 13th street. According to President Eiselen, the property now has a value of about $5,000,000.

President Eiselen said Garrett is one of the largest Protestant theological seminaries in America, with 468 students from 35 states, 25 different denominations, 25 different denominations, and 135 colleges and universities. Union Theological seminary, New York, and the divinity school of Chicago university are the only seminaries which challenge Garrett's enrollment leadership in America.

Dr. Eilesen pointed out that 90 per cent of the Garrett student body is financially self-supporting.

Among the earliest trustees of Garrett were Orrington Lunt, John Evans, founder of Evanston; Philo Judson, and Grant Goodrich. Laetr such names as William Deering, P. H. Swift, and F. P. Crandon appear on boards of trustees. The present president of the board of trustees is Harry A. Wheeler, vice chairman of the board of the First National bank, Chicago.

FACES SECOND TRIAL FOR MURDER.

Macomb, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Charles Zimmerman of Colchester will be tried on March 3 a second time for the murder of William McGran of Colchester. A jury last week failed to reach a decision in the case. Judge George Hillyer today refused to admit Zimmerman to $20,000 bond.

AFGHAN'S EX-KING URGED TO RETURN TO LOST THRONE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A fresh outbreak of trouble in Afghanistan is indicated by the news coming from the very highest source that Nadir Khan, the present king, has cabled Amanullah Khan, the former king, that now is the time for him to return and take control of the country again. Amanullah is now on his way to Constantinople from Rome. It was learned that two airplanes are held in readiness there to take him to Kabul.

Nadir Khan, who was formerly commander in chief of Amanullah's army, as been regarded all along as only a substitute for Amanullah and as ready to turn over the throne to him as soon as it was safe for him to return.

It is not clear whether Amanullah will be able to take Queen Souriya back with him or not, as she is intensely unpopular with the orthodox Moslem tribesmen and was the chief cause of her husband's downfall. Many of the Moslems objected to the queen's refusal to veil her face and to her adoption of European dress.

YELL 'DOWN WITH KING' AT MADRID FETE FOR EXILE

Youths Welcome Student Hero Back to Spain.

MADRID, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The return here today of Antonia Maria Sbert, a student exiled under the Primo de Rivera dictatorship, resulted in a tumultuous demonstration by several thousand university students.

The students first greeted Sbert, hailing him as a hero and martyr, in the great Plaza Castelar, then went to a large restaurant on the outskirts of Madrid for a long afternoon banquet. Bystanders were amazed the police did not interfere.

Cheer for a Republic.

While the gay youths were wining and dancing they cheered incessantly, shouting "Down with the king and the monarchy! Death to Primo! Down with the new dictatorship!" Some cheered for a republic.

Sbert attempted to speak, but was unable to make himself heard above the uproar and abandoned the attempt. A number of girl students attended, as did student representatives from various Spanish universities outside of Madrid. Greetings were read from Miguel de Unamuno, who recently returned to Salamanca university after six years of exile.

Demand New Spain.

Prudencio Sayagues, president of the committee of the students' union, in a speech asserted the students would fight any other government as they had fought Primo if their liberty were impeded, and said they would continue fighting for a "new Spain."

The opinion here is the authorities think the best way to handle students is to let them blow off steam, for after the students had shouted themselves hoarse today they dispersed of their own accord. Such public expressions against the monarchy and for revolution have rarely been known here.

Duke Gets New Post.

The Duke of Alba, who has been acting as minister of public instruction in the Berenguer cabinet, today was appointed minister of state, having charge of foreign affairs.

The ministry, which had been deprived of its power under the administration of Primo de Rivera, was reestablished by a royal decree and the Duke of Alba was sworn in this morning at the royal palace in the presence of King Alfonso, Gen. Damaso Berenguer, and court officers.

Peer's Widow to Keep Relics from King Tut Tomb

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Lady Westbury, widow of the English peer who committed suicide yesterday, does not believe in the curse of the Pharaohs. She is keeping the relics from Tutankh-amen's tomb, which her son, an Egyptologist, Capt. Richard Bethell, gave to his father. Her son died suddenly last November. Both deaths revived stories on the evil fate which the superstitious claim pursues those connected with the opening of the Egyptian ruler's tomb.

CHICAGO DOCTORS DEMAND HEARING ON PORTER BILLS

The Chicago Medical society, through its president, Dr. Charles B. Reed, yesterday appealed to Representative Willis C. Hawley of Oregon, chairman of the house ways and means committee, for an immediate hearing on the Porter bills pending in Congress, which propose to set up a federal bureau of narcotics similar to the prohibition bureau.

The opposition of Chicago physicians to the proposed bureau was expressed last week in resolutions adopted by the medical society's council condemning the bureau as "paternalistic in character" and condemning the movement as efforts of professional reformers to substitute "a powerful bureaucracy in Washington for the authority of the states, to hamper and impede the proper and legitimate practice of medicine, and to deprive citizens of their due rights and liberties."

Dr. Reed described the powers of the proposed narcotics bureau as even more dangerous to the liberty of the individual doctor than those of the prohibition bureau. The Porter bills would give the commissioner of prohibition power to suspend or revoke licenses of physicians at will, without notifying the physician of his contemplated action. No provision is made for suspending the decision of the commissioner pending an appeal to the courts, and the commissioner can be the sole judge of the evidence.

PORTO RICO'S 12 DAY DEADLOCK IN SENATE ENDS

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The senate deadlock on the election of a presiding officer to succeed Antonio R. Barcelo, who resigned Feb. 10, was broken today with election of Letis Sanchez Morales, member of the Alianza party, with eight votes. Senator Iglesias, Socialist, received seven while four votes were blank. The vice presidency also went to the Alianza, Celesbro Iriarte being elected. Manuel F. YOUTHS' INDOOR EVENT FEATURE OF AIR SHOW

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Interest today in the International Aircraft exposition was centered around the national indoor model airplane contest held in the arena, with about 10,000 youths in attendance.

Joseph H. Ehrhardt, 17, of St. Louis captured first prize in the senior indoor hydro event and second award in the senior indoor hand-launched contest.

He flew his model plane two minutes and forty-two and five-tenths seconds in the latter contest.

The prize for indoor hand-launched models went to Harold Dennison, 18, Marion, Ind., youth who kept his craft in the air five minutes and 37 seconds. The third award in this classification was taken by Rurick Meyers, 18, of Chicago, with a time record of four minutes and 21 8-10 seconds.

In winning the senior hydro event, Ehrhardt defeated Ernest Marcouiller, Chicago, national all-around playground champion for 1929. Marcouiller took third place, flying his model two minutes. C. Leja, 16, also of Chicago, placed second, with two minutes and seven seconds.

For your health's sake ...don't fry... broil

This new In-a-Drawer Broiler makes broiling amazingly easy

Pulls in and out like a drawer—one hand—one motion. Broiling compartment rolls out its full length. No burned hands. No bending or stooping. Bread toasted as easily as though it were on the kitchen table . . . .

Ask your physician. He will tell you to eat more broiled food—less fried food. Children especially should not be given fried foods. Here is the reason:

Food fried in grease is hard to digest—often causing constipation. Frying also injures the nutritive value of the food.

Broiling, on the other hand, makes the food easy to digest. This method of cooking retains all of the nourishing, invigorating values in the food as well as its juicy, palatable savoriness.

Until now, broiling in the home has been a difficult and sometimes a painful task. Women have been justified in not cooking this healthful way because of the extra work and danger from burns it entailed.

But now Universal has eliminated all broiling risk.

The new, patented Universal In-a-Drawer Broiler makes broiling safer and easier than frying. It pulls in and out like a drawer—one hand—one motion. It moves on roller bearings. At a touch of the hand, the entire broiler rolls out into view.

Thus steaks, chops and other broiling foods can be turned or removed from the broiling compartment without effort or danger from burns.

Think, too, of the added joy these healthful, palatable broiled foods will bring to your table. The juicy steaks that men love! The savory chops! All served in your home the same way as the world's greatest chefs cook them!

Toast for the family can be made in the In-a-Drawer Broiler in a fraction of the time required by an electric toaster. The Universal toasts 12 pieces of bread at one time to a delicious even brownness.

This big broiling improvement is but one of the many features in this famous porcelain enameled Universal. It contains all the features you have wanted in a gas range. Also you can have this new range with a new Insulated Oven at a small additional cost. This marvelous feature saves half of the oven gas and keeps the kitchen cool in summer.

PERMANENT CARE FOR MEMORIAL HIGHWAY CERTAIN

Tree Plantings on Forest Way to Start Soon.

BY PAUL POTTER

Ground along the Soldiers' section of the Forest way is being cleared and will be ready for tree plantings within a few weeks, it was announced yesterday at the offices of the county commissioners. The Soldiers' section, which is to connect Roosevelt road with the north gateway of the new Skokie park, near Riverside, will be a model tree lined highway permanently maintained, to commemorate the sacrifices of American service men.

Buildings of the county highway division along the east side of First avenue just east of Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital, near Maywood, are being removed and concession stands at the Roosevelt road intersection are being torn down.

The Soldiers' section is a part of the Forest way project of the forest preserve commissioners of Cook county and its citizens' advisory committee to beautify drives of the metropolitan area.

Trees to Separate Paths.

Six avenues of trees are to be provided on each side of a forty foot pavement, in the eventual appearance of this carefully designed masterpiece of American treelined highways. A bridle path and footpath on each side will thus be separated from each other by rows of trees.

In the scheme of variety and species selection for the planting, quick growing young trees will be alternated with slower maturing but lasting kinds. Although the particular varieties have not yet been named, only those suited to climatic and soil conditions of the lower Lake Michigan region will be used.

The attitude of this memorial highway sector's sponsors is that Chicago has hitherto been growing like a mushroom and has provided for its immediate necessities. Now, they say, more thought must be given to the artistic and intrinsic values of future eras.

Secure Permanent Care.

"For this reason," said one official, "we have selected for one of the world's outstanding roadways of the future a spot which will be insured of care and maintenance by generations to follow. Many elaborate tree flanked highways have been started in Europe by farsighted leaders, yet have failed of their purpose through neglect. The forest preserve is the county's own, and every safeguard for its permanent upkeep is being made."

Hearty approval of the Soldiers' Section plans has been given by Dr. Hugh Scott, chief of staff of the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital, himself an ardent admirer of trees. Since the plans call for a part of the section's plantings to be made along the eastern edge of the hospital grounds, as well as for dedications of trees by soldiers, veterans, or their relatives and friends, Dr. Scott is expecting to lend his assistance in their fruition.

Other groups, such as school children, civic and social organizations, or individual families, will be privileged to participate in dedicatory ceremonies during the highway development.

NAB SCION OF FRENCH ROYALTY STEALING CAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—One of the most blue blooded aristocrats of France, Eugene de Marigny, whose family dates back to 750 when Pepin the short ruled in France, was tried in the tribunal of the Seine for selling his employer's automobile, of which he is the chauffeur.

The sizeable fortune that De Marigny inherited he squandered in a short time. He joined the Foreign Legion and was decorated during the world war. Later he became an actor and then a professor in the Royal college at Brussels. He acted also in the capacity of translator of French for the Austrian government.

Finally, however, he was forced to get a job as a chauffeur in Paris under an assumed name. He was arrested while trying to sell the automobile during his employer's absence from town.

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Feb. 22.—[U.P.]—The prince of Wales, hunting big game in the interior, arrived here today on a special train without the elephant which he had hoped to bag. He expects to remain several days before continuing to the second stage of his hunt.

SOPHS AND FROSH FIGHT WITH FIRE, THREE BURNED

Amherst, Mass., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Three students were taken to the college infirmary suffering from burns received in the annual class war between sophomore and freshman groups of Amherst college today. More than a score of students were treated for burns by physicians.

The injuries were received when freshmen, about to carry out the annual battle of burning the first year green caps, were charged by a mob of sophomores carrying kerosene soaked battering rams and flaming torches.

Many students found their clothing on fire and rolled in the snow and mud in frantic attempts to put out the flames, while those untouched by the oil continued the battle with fists. The fray was stopped by faculty members.

WEST SIDE JOINS IN PLEA TO CURB OPEN BRIDGE EVIL

Association Raps Delays to Traffic.

Joining the rest of the city in a vigorous demand that the closed periods for the downtown bridges be reasonably increased, the west side yesterday asked the right of uninterrupted egress to this large section of the city.

In a letter to Attorney Benjamin F. Goldstein, special assistant corporation counsel assigned to advise the aldermanic bridge committee, Frank J. Birk, president of the West Central association, stated that "the west side, particularly the district near the river, constantly suffers vital injury because of too prolonged hours of bridge opening, with the consequent traffic delays and blockades involving heavy business losses and extreme individual inconvenience."

Demands for Remedy.

After he had read the communication, Mr. Goldstein said: "This only serves to convince me of the unanimity of the public demands for an alleviation of this open bridge nuisance. All sections of the city feel the inconvenience of the present short closed hours. The interest in a remedy seems to be universal."

"Our association," Mr. Birk's letter said, "stands as the guardian at the gateway of the great west side, and I can assert that our every act has had in view the welfare of that vast division of our city. Whatever aids the west side must correspondingly benefit the north and south sides. But whereas communication between the north and south sides is concerned with a half dozen bridges, our district alone has to contend with twelve bridges from Lake street to Roosevelt road. One tug towing a barge bearing a freight car or two requires the opening of all, and traffic is jammed for blocks on either side.

"Surveys at the Washington street bridge have shown that traffic there has almost quadrupled in the last 17 years. Jackson boulevard bridge has shown a similar increase, and the other spans match them accordingly. Traffic during the half hour periods between 9:30 and 10 a. m. and 4:30 p. m., is but little less, if any, than during the so-called peak hours supposedly preceding and succeeding these periods. Bridge opening blockades at such times injuriously affect the whole west side, and that injury is reflected on our neighbors to the north and south."

States Case of West Side.

Supporting Mr. Birk's general statement, Guy Cramer, secretary-manager of the West Central association, outlined the following factors in the case against the bridge opening:

1. Trucking to and from the various freight houses that fringe the river is constant throughout the day. To that must be added the interurban trucks bringing their tonnage from hundreds of miles to the west and southwest.

2. The great markets from which all Chicago draws its food supplies—South Water, Fulton and Randolph street markets—are all on the near west side.

3. The new postoffice will soon be erected west of the river, and the increased traffic it will bring with it will add to the present problem.

4. If the metropolitan elevated bridge is lifted by a bridge opening, four lines of the elevated are jammed back to the loop, thus blocking north and south traffic on the common quadrangle.

Problem for Commuters.

5. The Union and North Western railroad terminals have, beside their regular transcontinental passenger traffic, a rapidly increasing suburban traffic, and tens of thousands of commuters must face the open bridge problem.

6. The loop "no parking" ordinance has caused citizens to make the near west side their open air garage. This practice tends to choke the various narrow streets, especially those which carry two lines of street cars. Vehicular lanes are thus reduced to a minimum, and when the traffic is stalled by a bridge opening, every citizen using the street or sidewalk is immediately affected and inconvenienced."

LOST U. S. FLYER'S NAME SIGNED TO NOTE IN BOTTLE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Feb. 22.—Frederick Slater, a school boy, found a bottle on Bantry beach, near Cork, Ireland, containing a message purporting to have been written by the American flying rancher, Urban F. Diteman Jr. of Billings, Mont., who set out from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, on Oct. 22 to fly the Atlantic in a little Barling monoplane.

The message reads: "Sinking fast in mid-Atlantic. Petrol sinking low. Fighting awful head winds. Oct. 23. U. F. Diteman."

The message was written on a sheet of note paper which is in perfect condition and quite legible.

THREE HELD AFTER QUARREL.

Mrs. Marie Kosinsky, 23 years old, 4116 North Western avenue, the mother of two children, her husband, Leo, and James DeRossi, 40 years old, 3024 North Tripp street, were held by the North Robey street police after Kosinsky is alleged to have attacked DeRossi. Mrs. Kosinsky said her husband was unable to provide for her and that she had appealed to DeRossi, who bought her a meal. When they returned Kosinsky struck DeRossi with a blackjack.

MISS DE LAMAR ENTERS BRANDON LOVE, FRAUD SUIT

Jury Will Hear Story of Millionairess.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The testimony of one of the world's wealthiest bachelorettes, Alice Antoinette De Lamar, will be heard Monday in the $574,165 breach of promise and fraud suit brought by Mrs. Frances Brandon against George J. Gillespie.

Gillespie masked as a "holy man" and proposed marriage to her, Mrs. Brandon testified this week before Supreme Court Justice Louis A. Valente and a jury, so that he might steal away her client, Miss De Lamar.

The $10,000,000 bachelor girl, who has spent most of her life shunning men whom she called "fortune hunters," will tell her story by proxy. Miss De Lamar was examined before trial to spare her embarrassment, and will remain secluded in her mansion at Palm Beach, while her testimony is read in court.

Seeks to "Expose" Him.

Mrs. Brandon, only woman assistant corporation counsel of New York City, has stated that Miss De Lamar's friendship and business was the invaluable loss for which she wants to expose Gillespie, 62 year old president of New York City's board of water supply.

The bachelor girl, thus brought into the scarlet triangle as the innocent cause of Mrs. Brandon's "living death," was a member of a motor corps of which Mrs. Brandon was the leader during the war. Later, the woman lawyer said, she protected the poor little rich girl from "crooks," and finally enlisted Gillespie's aid.

Took Her Place, She Says.

But Gillespie, Mrs. Brandon testified, usurped her place in the bachelor girl's business regard, and then denied that he ever proposed marriage.

Gillespie's counsel has insisted that he never proposed marriage, and has emphatically denied everything else she charges, including the alleged fraud involving the purchase by Miss De Lamar of a $525,000 tract of Long Island shore property.

The heiress' connection with the breach of promise suit has brought her into the spotlight for the first time in more than five years. She inherited a third of the $30,000,000 estate of her father, Joseph Raphael de Lamar, in 1920, and immediately retired to avoid "men who made love for money." At that time she asserted that she wanted only "true romance." She has had many offers of marriage, including a proposal from Prince Carol of Rumania.

Bystander Is Wounded as Police Battle 2 Robbers

Stepping into the line of fire as two policemen and two bandits exchanged shots at Racine avenue and Jackson boulevard last evening, Irwin Rivard, 17 years old, 329 South Racine avenue, was slightly wounded as a bullet grazed his chest. The robbers had held up John Ross in his grocery at 323 South Racine avenue and were chased by Patrolmen Max Durachta and Charles Paglusch. One, who identified himself as Max Franke, 42 years old, 450 North Clark street, was captured and disarmed. He named his companion, who is being sought.

City Prosecutor to Probe Aid's Handling of Case

Julius Steiner, a former employé of the corporation counsel's office, charged with striking a 70 year old woman in an argument outside of a courtroom, was arrested yesterday by the police after he had forfeited a $50 bond by failing to appear in Judge Immenhausen's court Friday to answer the charge. City Prosecutor Peska said he would investigate the handling of Steiner's case by Assistant City Prosecutor William Oehlsen, who is said to have asked a continuance. Steiner lives at 6913 Dorchester avenue.

RACE FOR GOLD IN ALASKA AT 40 BELOW ZERO

Richest Strike in Years Is Described.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—An eye witness account of the newest gold strike at Poorman, Alaska, has been telegraphed to the war department by the army signal corps operator at Ruby, on the far stretches of the Yukon river. William N. Gowden, the operator, describes the strike as the richest in the history of that camp.

Here is his description of a trip to the gold region while the thermometer was registering forty degrees below zero:

"Richest gold strike in history this camp struck at Poorman few days ago. News reached town yesterday and every man in whole vicinity that can get transportation of any kind is gone or has gone.

40 Degrees Below.

"Left Ruby Sunday proceeding to Long, twenty-nine miles away staying there overnight meeting many stampeders. Temperature forty below zero. Left next morning for Poorman, twenty-eight miles away.

"Poorman had every cabin crowded. The one roadhouse and store filled to capacity. All mining plants at Poorman had closed down on account of strike and all rushed to stake in ground at New Discovery, located about seven miles from Poorman.

$1.48 per Pan.

"Broke pieces from ground various places, held pan with dirt in tub of boiling water to thaw out, then panned, finding about two dollars and sixty-six cents worth fine looking coarse gold in two pans.

"Next morning went over to Discovery creek and staked claims on ground overlooked by others. Hope it is good, but don't know yet. It is a test in district. Left at 2:00 p. m. by Long, reaching there eight o'clock next, finding hotel crowded with stampeders headed for new strike. Nils and I left Long next morning, mercury below zero and reached home about noon."

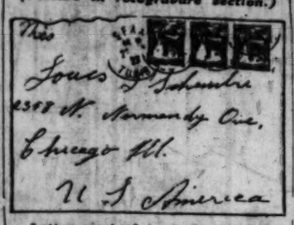
From Sfax, Tunis

(Picture in rotogravure section.)



Letter received by Louis Schembri, 2358 North Normandy avenue, Chicago.

Sfax is a seaport town in Tunis. On the Gulf of Gabes, it carries on an extensive trade in cottons, woollens, fruits, soda, oil, and essences. Connected by rail with Gafsa, it handles the output of the best phosphate deposits of that region. Its population is about 15,000.

Tunis, a regency and French protectorate, is one of the Barbary states in northern Africa. It is bounded by the Mediterranean, the Sahara, and the Algerian province of Constantine. The region long constituted the main portion of the dominions of Carthage.

ENDS LIFE BY HANGING.

Peter Sroka, 55 years old, 2855 Keeley street, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself from a doorknob in his bedroom.

WAUKEGAN ACTS AGAINST SPREAD OF MENINGITIS

State health authorities took precautionary steps yesterday to prevent any outbreak of spinal meningitis in Waukegan. Harold Martin, 16 year old senior and student band leader at Waukegan High school, died Friday of the disease in Victory Memorial hospital. He had been ill only four days.

Under supervision of Dr. D. N. Dearing, the high school building and the Martin home at 1025 Hickory street, Waukegan, were fumigated, and a ten day quarantine was established on the dwelling. Classmates of the stricken youth were placed under medical observation.

Swanson's Police Seize 32 in Calumet City Raid

Lieut. William Blaul and a squad of policemen from the state's attorney's office last night arrested thirty-two men in a raid on an alleged gambling house at 12 State street, Calumet City. Twelve of the prisoners were taken to the East Side police station and the other twenty to the South Chicago station. They were to be taken to the detective bureau later to learn whether they have criminal records. According to the Calumet City police, the gambling house, which they said was owned by James Finnerty, a local politician, had been raided twice in the last week, but Finnerty was released both times. He was not at the place during the raid last night.

Needless Pain!

The man who wouldn't drive his motorcar half a mile when it's out of order, will often drive his brain all day with a head that's throbbing.

Such punishment isn't very good for one's nerves! It's unwise, and it's unnecessary. A tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin will relieve a headache every time. So, remember this accepted antidote for pain, and spare yourself a lot of needless suffering. Read the proven directions and you'll discover many valuable uses for these tablets. For headaches; to check colds. To ease a sore throat and reduce the infection. For relieving of neuralgic, neuritic, and rheumatic pain.

People used to wonder if Bayer Aspirin was harmful. Doctors answered that question years ago. It is not. Some folks still wonder if it really does relieve pain. That's settled! Two hundred and one boxers of Chicago, Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa and Michigan are ready for THE TRIBUNE'S third annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament at the Coliseum Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Bouts will start at 7 o'clock each evening.

Ninety-four of the contestants will represent Chicago and its suburbs. They have earned the right to compete by winning in trials held in three districts of the city. Preliminaries were conducted in 16 out of town cities and from these trials will come the finalists.

Greatest Amateur Show.

The tournament should be one of the most successful amateur events ever staged in the country. The boys who are fighting to win golden gloves as well as a place on the Chicago team which will meet New York's best boxers at the Chicago Stadium

Proceeds of the tournament will go to the Forty and Eight for the maintenance of its world war veterans' camp in the forest preserves. American Legion posts and those in active service are cooperating to make the show successful so a large sum can be raised for this worthy cause. Tuesday night will be American Legion night, Wednesday, army night, and Thursday, navy night. The final will be Chicago night. Indications are the arena will be filled each evening. Boxing fans who have seen the golden gloves in my amateur boxing is more entertaining than professional. There are no pulled punches, and the losers go down fighting.

Welcome Competitive Sport.

The American youth with red blood in his veins welcomes competitive sport. Boxing is a sport in which courage and gameness stand out more prominently than in any other line of athletic endeavor.

Boys who have not learned the finer points of the game have been eliminated and will wait for another year gladly. Every bout will be a fight between experienced boxers.

In the first two nights, at least 60 bouts will be held. Two rings will be used with fights going on simultaneously. There may be knockouts in both arenas at the same time, and visitors will see action every minute. Victors again will be put to the test in the semi-final and final rounds.

Rivalry for Team Trophy.

As well as individual rivalry is developing itself. The bouts will not only determine golden gloves winners, but will establish champions of the various sections of Chicago. Many of teams such as George Kamm of the Lawndale gymnasium, Harry of the gym which bears name, Kid Howard of the Arcade, Kopp of Roseland, Ill., Willie of the South Shore A. C. and of the Belle Plaine A. C. are claim to the handsome trophy will go to the team scoring the number of points.

When the finals are held Friday the winner of each bout will be with five points. Second place will receive three points, and one point. The trophy will be to the team manager or at the conclusion of the show. of golden gloves will receive trophies in the ring as the decisions are announced may keep their gloves as souvenirs of the tourney.

Boxers Report by 6.

Boys are urged to report before each night to be weighed examined. Drawings will take promptly at 6:30 o'clock. Contests will box three minute rounds. Preliminaries in the 112, 118, 126, 135 pound classes will be held Qualifiers will report back for semi-finals Thursday night. In the 147, 160, 175 pound and heavyweight divisions will be held Thursday, and qualifiers in these classes also will fight again Thursday. No assistant will be permitted to enter second in his corner. Proceedings seconds have been engaged Referees will be at the ringside to give their services.

Effort will be made to seed fighters. For this reason the best fights in the tournament may take place on opening night. In the trials boxers from the same club did not meet.

GOLDEN GLOVES ARMY MARCHES IN TOMORROW

BY FRENCH LANE.

The Golden Gloves tournament invaders from the central states will begin to reach Chicago late tomorrow afternoon. From then until shortly before 6 o'clock on Tuesday night almost every train will bring a party of fighters headed for the Coliseum determined to win a championship.

Most of the seventeen teams from five states—Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin and Indiana—will be quartered at the Bismarck hotel. The remaining teams will be located at athletic clubs and at other loop hotels. Most of the boys expect to engage in road work or light boxing here tomorrow and Tuesday.

Large delegations of rooters are coming from all the sectional centers and from dozens of other cities. Many out of town fans will arrive on Tuesday and remain for the entire tournament. Some will wait until Wednesday night, when the lads in the four heavier divisions see action.

The Jackson, Mich., team was a belated entry. The entries came in so late the names of the boys who will fight on the Jackson team will not appear on the official program. But the boys in the eight divisions will be allowed to fight it out with their rivals from Chicago and from all other sectional centers.

The boxers coming to the tournament will devote their entire visit in Chicago to the business of glove swinging. But the publishers, managing editors, and sports editors of the seventeen newspapers which have coöperated with THE TRIBUNE in making the Golden Gloves tournament an event for all Chicagoland will be entertained at a Golden Gloves dinner at the Congress hotel at midnight Wednesday.

And there are to be spies from New York here to get a line on the boys who fight in the Chicago tournament. The champions of the Chicago tournament fight the New York champions in a great intercity match at the Chicago Stadium, March 19. Paul Gallico, sports editor of the New York News, and several others from New York will watch every battle fought in THE TRIBUNE tournament.

They would like to go back to New York and report the Chicago team an aggregation of set-ups, but they are likely to go home and tell a different story.

19 Cub Battery Patients Visit Doc McCarthy

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal., Feb. 22.—Joe McCarthy, doctor of baseball, hung out his shingle at the Cub training field this morning and announced himself ready to prescribe for the muscular ailments of battery men.

Nineteen patients seeking physical perfection promptly caused a rush of business and they were accommodated with two hours of assorted labors sufficiently strenuous to let the participants know they were not on a joy ride but taking the first hurdle of a task that will not be completed until next October. The hope is that the completion will mark a world series victory.

Photogs Have Big Day.

The initial drill was not accomplished without giving more or less heed to the wishes of the photographers, who swarmed in profusion. Still pictures, plain movies and talkies were in great demand. But despite what appeared to be an annoyance, Dr. McCarthy managed to sneak in enough training stunts to make him feel certain the day was not a loss. He had the boys throw, hit, bunt and run the bases. That doesn't sound like a strenuous program, but it was amply sufficient to make some of the patients complain later in the day about aches and pains.

There were about five hundred folks around the field during the drill, and most of them wanted to know about Gabby Hartnett's famous as well as ailing arm. They filed requests that the star backstop do a little fancy throwing so that they could pass judgment on his condition, but Gabby politely informed them they had better come back next week.

"The arm feels fine, but I am taking no chances just yet," he declared.

Gabby's Throws Mild.

Gabby did a lot of throwing while warming up a few of the pitchers, but the efforts were mild, like those he performed in the gym during the winter. There was one favorable sign about him, however. When his arm was the best in baseball he brought his throws over his shoulder. Last season when the arm was a dub he lobbed the ball with a side arm motion. Today he was bringing the throws straight up over the shoulder as of yore. This showing was very discouraging to a flock of ravens which appeared over the park in expectation of picking up a dead arm.

Until McCarthy had his nineteen patients assembled under the occasional sunshine this morning he wasn't

Shires' Salary Stand Fails to Worry Bosses

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 22.—Manager Donie Bush and Secretary Harry Grabiner, of the Chicago White Sox, today refused to view with alarm the most recently circulated reports on the business attitude of the Great Shires. C. Arthur's supposed statement at Fort Worth that he will hold out for $15,000 is what started a new discussion of the ball player pug.

While both said that Owner Charles A. Comiskey would remain in charge of the contract signing ceremonies, Bush and Grabiner volunteered as their part of the on-the-ground situation that Shires will not be given a uniform until he is a signed performer. Futhermore, he will not be permitted to eat victuals at the club's expense nor work out with the signed players.

It's Club Policy.

Mr. Grabiner explained that this was not an edict aimed at Shires but a fixed policy of the Comiskey organization.

Many major clubs, including the Giants, who are also here, permit athletes to work out pending financial adjustment and the Sox occasionally have had holdouts from other clubs exercising with them, but it is a hard and fast rule for the Sox not to harbor their own holdouts.

There are some pretty reasonable ball players on the Sox club who cannot be said to be pining away because of the prospect of delay in the arrival of Mr. Shires. They say, somewhat privately, that they became very weary of hearing C. Arthur's unceasing horn blowing last year when he was merely a discredited athlete. With the young man having been spoiled by so much attention during the winter they fear he has become a bassoon soloist whose concerts and serenades will be little short of maddening.

Players Are Unimpressed.

The extent to which most of the Sox players are not impressed by Shires' fistic attainments is somewhat surprising. To the ball players he still is just a fair first baseman who batted only .312 last year and missed 52 games in which his team participated.

Regardless of these things, it still is apparent that the public hereabouts is interested in the young man and there would be a very perceptible sag in the attention attracted by the club were Shires to remain entirely out of the picture.

The second Sox squad of White Sox, including Shires, is not due until a week from today. While it is expected that athletes will be popping into town throughout the week no one will begin getting cross about absentees until 11 o'clock Monday morning.

The Sox will practice at the San Antonio Texas league ball park for the last time tomorrow. They can stay as long as they want, for the Giants have been given the Sabbath off. Monday morning the Sox move to their own training ground.

SHIRES DENIES RULES.

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 22.—(AP)—The Chicago White Sox have set no standard of conduct for Charles Arthur Shires. While visiting in Fort Worth the young first baseman branded as a myth the story that President Comiskey had attached a note to his contract setting forth what behavior was expected of the baseball player. There was a letter attached, but it didn't mention, or even hint, at Shires' conduct, the player revealed.

Shires was reprimanded gently for not answering a previous letter, offering him an $11,000 salary, warned him it would be useless to have any correspondence over the amount, and mentioned the club's rule against players reporting before they have accepted terms, Shires said. That was all, with nothing about ginger ale drinking, punching managers, clowning, or any of the other things which caused excitement last year.

BRUINS SCORE 23 TO 19 VICTORY OVER CLEVELAND

Cleveland, O., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Cleveland Rosenblums, crippled by the loss of their high scoring center, Joe Lapchick, went down before Chicago in an American league pro basketball game here tonight, 23 to 19. Chicago took an early lead and Cleveland was unable to even knot the score at any time. Lapchick is suffering from a wrenched back. Lineup:

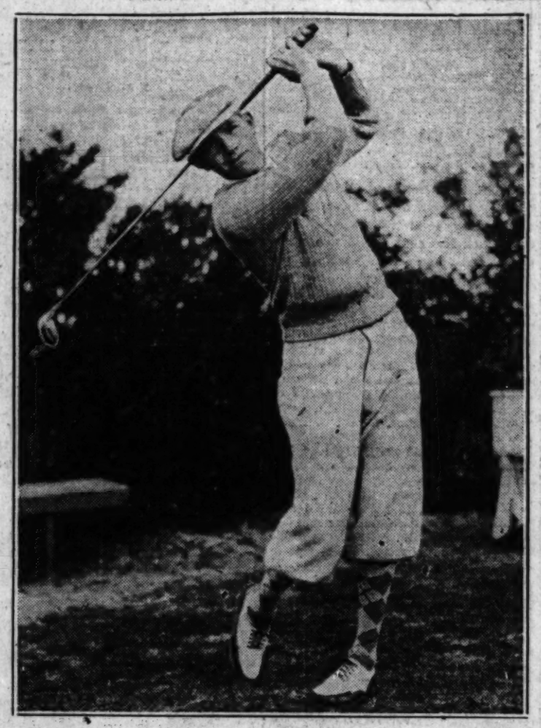
ONE TOO GOOD FOR BOBBY



Horton Smith's total of 278 was one too good for Bobby Jones in the Savannah, Ga., open meet, which ended yesterday, despite the latter's record breaking 65 in the morning round. The victory was worth $1,000 to the 21 year old Detroit pro.

Horton Smith's 278 Defeats Bobby Jones by One Stroke

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Horton Smith, blond young golf wizard from Detroit, continued his par shattering play through the final two rounds here today to post a 278 for the 72 holes and win a one stroke victory over Bobby Jones, national open king, in the $3,000 Savannah open.

The 21 year old youngster, who learned his golf in the Missouri Ozarks, turned in cards of 70 and 71 for the two rounds today, and these scores, together with the 71 figure of Thursday's first round and the brilliant 66 yesterday, gave him the victor's share of $1,000.

As his scores indicate, the youthful money maker clung close to par and shot steady golf throughout the three day grind. His 66 Friday was punctuated with brilliant shots.

Jones Falters with 72.

After breaking the course record with a great 65 on his morning round Jones faltered on the final round and took a 72. His 137 today, coupled with his 142 of the opening two rounds, gave him a final score of 279.

Seven strokes behind the leader was Bobby Cruickshank, Scotch pro from Purchase, N. Y., who took second prize money of $500. The little Scotchman scored a 69 on the final round. His 142 of today, with 143 yesterday, gave him a gross of 285.

Al Espinosa, veteran Chicagoan, and Ed Dudley of Wilmington, Del., were tied for fourth place with 286. Al had 144—142 for his score, while Dudley paired a 141 yesterday with 145 today.

J. Fairley Clark, Savannah professional, who shot two great rounds of 68 and 69, blew up on the final 36 holes and had to be content with a three cornered tie for sixth place. His 138 yesterday and 149 today gave him 287. Joe Turnesa of New York and Bill Mehlhorn of Pensacola also had 287's.

Two exponents of golf for cash from the middle west—Neil McIntyre of Indianapolis, and Ted Smith of La Crosse, Wis.—were bracketed at 288.

Farrell Shoots a 289.

Johnny Farrell of St. Augustine, Fla., former national open champion, who won the Pensacola event last week, could do no better than 143—146—289, while Herman Barron, 21 year old professional from Port Chester, N. Y., had 145—145—290.

Three professionals were clustered at the 291 mark. Jeff Adams, Savannah professional; Harry Cooper, unattached; and Whiffy Cox of Brooklyn had this figure.

Smith registered ten birdies as he made his way over the final 36 holes, while Jones had 13 birdies and an eagle. Most of Bobby's great shots were made on his record breaking morning round.

Fowler's 302 Second.

Lee Fowler of the Eastlake Country club of Atlanta was second low scorer among the simon pures. He had a 72 hole total of 154—148—302. He received a silver loving cup. Bobby Jones was presented with a shotgun for his low score among the amateurs.

Here's how the low scorers shared in the money today and their 72 hole scores:

Horton Smith, Detroit	$1,000.00
Bobby Cruickshank, Purchase, N. Y.	500.00
Al Espinosa, Chicago	350.00

$27.50 to See Phil Faint? Miami Yawns

THE CARD

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special]—The supporting card for the Sharkey-Scott bout Thursday night will be:

Johnny Risko vs. Victor Campolo.
Tommy Loughran vs. Pierre Charles.
Jimmy Maloney vs. Moise Bouquillon.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22.—The customers who are infesting this place in great numbers at present are manifesting extreme diffidence in the face of their golden opportunity to buy $27.50 tickets for the impending program of prize fights under the auspices of the Madison Square Garden corporation.

VICTORIO CAMPOLO

I report this shyness or apathy of the paying trade in no spirit of malicious exultation, notwithstanding my conviction that prize fighters, and particularly heavyweights, should be paid on the same basis as common labor, with no pay for the clinches or intermissions. The failure of this promotion might be interpreted to mean that the customers were not interested in heavyweight prize fights in Miami.

Fighters Find Money Tight.

In that event, I might be assigned to remain at home among the snow drifts and prohibition next winter and my social aspirations, which already have carried me into some of the lower haunts of the upper classes in Palm Beach as a modest beginning, would be thwarted abruptly.

There are even more paying customers hereabouts this year than there were last year and they seem quite willing to pay for everything but prize fight tickets at $27.50. They are patronizing hotels which charge $30 a day for a room and restaurants where it is possible to spend $7.50 for a simple breakfast and impossible to spend much less, and they are patronizing the horse and dog tracks and the halls of chance.

But they are not patronizing the box office of the Madison Square Garden corporation in the half basement arcade of the McAllister hotel on the bay front where the boys sit behind the wickets, eager to serve.

The halls of chance have resumed operations, incidentally, under a compromise agreement following a brief cessation due to an unseasonable attack of civic morality. Under the terms of the chairman, as I understand them, severe restrictions have been imposed on the chancey games, it being agreed that not more than ten establishments may operate in any one business block, not more than six in any one residential block and none whatever within ten yards of any public school or church.

Bar Children Under Six.

Children below the age of six are not permitted to play by the wheel, the banker or the bird cage, except upon written permission of their parents, guardians or pastors. The places to be raided are to be selected by a blind draw once a week, supervised by representatives of the city and county administrations and a delegate from the Shake, Rattle and Roll society, the official guild of the dealers.

These stipulations represent a drastic curtailment of the liberal conditions which existed here before and while they have been accepted, they are taken with rather poor grace.

I hear complaints that the authorities are trying to kill the town. But that is the way of things always in cities where the field becomes overcrowded with dealers and if business is regulated to death under the current reform plan it will be only because the boys took too many liberties with local tolerance when Miami was broad-minded and cordial.

Fighters Live Modestly.

The prize fighter contingent, a very small group in town as compared to the thousands who have come down for the horse and dog races, the jai alai, the faro, the wine, the beer and the bathing, seem lost in the daily hubbub of indoor and alfresco amusements. Fainting Philip Scott, the only one in town who seems able to remember the name of Jack Sharkey's opponent of next Thursday evening, lives in a quiet hotel on the bay front. His manager, James J. Johnston, has established his family circle in a modest apartment on Miami beach.

Jimmy Maloney of Boston lives somewhere else in the commonplace style of a local grocery man. Sharkey and his manager, John Buckley, have brought their wives and kiddies with them and Frank January Bruen, manager of the prizefights and general manager of the race track as well, goes home at night like a New Haven commuter, to while away a blameless hour listening to the Soapsuds Boys on his radio before taking his bedtime draught of orange juice.

In the morning, before the hour of starting for the horse track at Hialeah, which seems to be the principal interest of all present, including the pugilists and their attaches, the boys congregate in the arcade of the McAllister and ogle the passersby as if trying to shoo them into the box office by the power of suggestion and concerted will. But the customers are almost imperious to suggestion and have a superior will of their own.

Mr. Johnston was standing near the box office with Mr. Mike Jacobs, the Walter, Riel Lead Purple Quintet to Victory.

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Northwestern defeated Illinois tonight, 34 to 32, in a game packed with excitement. Illinois went spinning into a nine point lead at the start of the game, but saw this lead dwindle to a point as the half ended, 18 to 17.

The Illini lost this lead in the first minute of the second period when Bergherm scored from under the basket. Northwestern led by six points eight minutes before the end of the game, but Illinois closed this lead and went ahead with two minutes left. Capt. Russ Walter tied the score with a one handed shot, Riel added a field goal before Walter dribbled in close with another to give his team a four point lead with a few seconds to play. Capt. Mills scored for Illinois as the game ended.

M'GRAW FEARS CUBS, PIRATES, AND CARDINALS

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP)—John McGraw believes that the Chicago Cubs, Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals will be difficult assignments for his New York Giants during 1930 big league baseball play.

McGraw arrived here today from Havana en route to San Antonio, where the Giants are gathering for spring training under his management.

He predicted that he would have a hard fighting team, but at this stage would make no forecast as to the standing of his team at the end of the season.

Stephenson Scores 8 Points in Last Five Minutes.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Bartlett Gym rang with the crashing melody of Chicago's victory song for the first time in the Western conference basketball season last night, when the Maroons wrested a bitter contest from Wisconsin, 23 to 21, in the last seconds of play. Not only did the game pull Chicago out of the undefeated class, but it definitely checked the Badgers out of the Big Ten race and dropped them back with the other teams which have lost two games.

It wasn't the same Maroon basketball team that played the earlier games, except in its fighting spirit and even in that the Maroons outdid themselves. Their fine defensive game through the first half kept them in the lead, and after Wisconsin had put on a rally that gave the Badgers a seven point margin with five minutes to play, the Maroons smashed through their stalling game to win with long shots in the last minutes.

Stephenson Saves Game.

The credit for the last minute rally goes to a little sophomore, Paul Stephenson, who twisted a leg a couple of days ago and wasn't expected to get into the game. But with the leg bandaged he went in with five minutes to play and the Badgers leading 20 to 13 and banged in three baskets and two free throws.

That was the last five minutes. Before that the other Maroons had battled the Badgers on their own terms and didn't lose anything in the comparison. Marshall Fish, a scoring back guard, who sometimes hasn't appeared at his best defensively was one of the greatest factors in Chicago's crack defensive game. Fish was an enormous help in diving through to take the tipoff and hat it back to Ashley or Anderson. Another was Hal Boesel, who a few weeks ago was only another clumsy lad on the squad, turned in a great game of holding Bud Foster, Wisconsin captain and chief scoring threat to a single basket, as well as outjumping him.

The Badgers were not passing as well as they might. Chicago's defense kept them from many short shots and they missed most of the long ones. The defense of each team held the other to three baskets in the first half. After the score was tied on two Chicago free throws and Paul's under the basket shot on a quick cut, the Maroons moved out in front 4 to 2, then 9 to 4, but at the half led only 11 to 9 by virtue of Chmielewski's long shot in the last second. Foster had also hit with one rebound, Anderson caged a dazzling hook shot going away, Fish a long flat toss and Channon from under the basket on Boesel's out of bounds pass.

Badgers Tie Score.

The Badgers lost no time in tieing the score in the second half on Foster's two free throws. Fish put Chicago ahead again with a short shot and then went out on his fourth foul, while the wildest yelling crowd Bartlett Gym has seen since the last high school intercollegiates, groaned and stood up and cheered him.

The Badgers started from there, getting six shots in succession and recovering the rebound, until Paul's short one tied the score. Three free throws and Farber's long baskets gave them a 20 to 13 lead with five minutes to play.

Enter Paul Stephenson and things happened. His first effort was was a long shot that banged through the hoop. Boesel made two more points by following in his own long throw and the Badgers started to stall. But Chicago drove for the ball, fighting like tigers, and with about two minutes left Stephenson leaped in to score the rebound on Changnon's long shot, despite Paul's foul as he shot.

The Maroons were only a point behind 20 to 19 as Stephenson stepped to the free throw line. His first shot hit the rim, rolled around, and dropped in, tying the score. His second hit the rim, rolled into the basket and Chicago led by a point. Boesel, who had been outjumping Foster, leaped higher than ever and after a minute's passing, with Wisconsin driving for possession of the ball as furiously as had Chicago, Boesel dribbled down, then passed to Stephenson, who had a clear shot from the foul line. He caged it. That was the ball game, though Foster added one more point for Wisconsin on Ashley's foul just before the gun.

KENTUCKY DERBY MAY 17 DRAWS 149 TURF STARS

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Entries for the fifty-sixth renewal of the Kentucky Derby were announced here today by Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf association and executive director of the Churchill Downs track. There were 149 nominations for the $50,000 added 3 year old fixture which is to be run at Churchill Downs on Saturday, May 17.

Only three notable 3 year olds are missing from the list of eligibles: Harry Payne Whitney's great pair, Whichone and Boojum, and W. R. Coe's Caruso, a frequent winner last year.

William Woodward's Belair stud led in the number of nominations with seven. This is an eastern establishment, and three other eastern owners, Harry Payne Whitney, Willis Sharpe Kilmer, and Harry F. Sinclair each named five. No reason was given by Mr. Whitney for eliminating Whichone and Boojum from the Derby entry list and including five others from his string.

Bradley Stable Represented.

Other well known racing establishments to be represented in the Derby field are those of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, Gifford A. Cochran, Samuel D. Riddle, Johnson N. Camden, Audley Farm stable, Edward R. Bradley, Hal Price Headley, Edward B. McLean, Walter J. Salmon, Fred A. Burton's Everglade stable, the Sage stable, the Three D's farm stable, the Warm stable, and William Ziegler Jr.

The entries for the Derby came from every section of the country. The Pacific coast is represented with the greatest array of Derby talent ever scheduled for shipment to Kentucky. The far western owners who seek the Derby prize are Chaffee Earl, Baron Long, George Wingfield's Nevada Stock Farm stable, and W. H. Hoffman's R. C. stable.

Dedicate Is Entered.

Several Chicago owners are represented in the Derby field, and Dedicate, the fleet son of Dodge, owned by Fred A. Burton, is considered one of the leading contenders. Dedicate rolled up a string of victories at Arlington Park in Chicago last season and later traveled to Maryland to beat many of the leading eastern 2 year olds in the Eastern Shore handicap. Pat Joyce of Chicago has nominated his fast colt, Dick O'Hara, and Charles W. Bidwell nominated Picadome and Tea Cracker.

Among the leading 2 year olds of last season nominated for the Derby are Flying Heels, Desert Light, Gallant Fox, Sarazen II., Crazy Coot, Play Ball, All Upset, Grattan, Gallant Knight, Alcibiades, Tannery, Lightning Jones, Sydney, Jim Dandy, Infinitus, and Crack Brigade.

Many of the Derby candidates already are in Kentucky and have started training for the race.

sure which was which. He had to walk around and introduce himself to the newcomers, asking of each the official name. McCarthy enjoyed this proceeding until he approached a fellow named D. Warneke, a right hander with the Alexandria, La., club last season. The kid is a perfect double, both still and in action, of Howard Ehmke, who gave the Cubs such a terrible jolt in the series opener last fall. No wonder McCarthy lost his smile for the day.

The members of the fat men's club, with one exception, appeared with the insignia of their organization. This is a rubber shirt. The garments were worn by Hartnett, Malone, and Carlson. Malone was the only one who gave positive signs of being benefited by the extra covering. The perspiration off him was so heavy that his cap floated off his head. Blake was the fellow eligible to wear the rubber reducer but didn't. The sheriff doesn't believe in hurrying except when it is necessary to run out a base hit.

Pat Perspires Easily.

When the pitchers were permitted to do a bit of hitting, something they always want to do, Malone, Grampp, and Osborn did the pitching. Of the trio, Malone was the only man who had to be cautioned. He wanted to overdo it merely because he had worked a bit in Chicago several weeks ago. The ease with which he perspired indicated he hadn't done anything all winter except eat.

Tomorrow, after church attendance has been complied with by those so inclined, McCarthy will summon his gang for their second drill. That is, he expects to do it, but his plans may be washed away by rainfall. The weather experts, which includes everybody on the island, proclaimed today's clouds a forerunner of an unusual rainstorm. The athletes won't mind being kept from their baseball uniforms, but rain will spoil their plans for golf—and that's something else.

JOHNNIE DAWSON TO PLAY TEXAN FOR TITLE TODAY

Houston, Tex., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Johnnie Dawson of Chicago and Ossie Carlton, Houston amateur, went into the finals of the 16th annual Houston Country club invitation golf tournament this afternoon. Dawson defeated George Rotan of Houston, 4 and 3, in his semi-final match, and Carlton beat Bud McKinney of Del Rio, Tex., 6 and 5.

Dawson, the tournament medalist and pretourney favorite, rallied to end the match on the 33d green. He was four down to Rotan, six times winner of the event, at the turn of the first nine holes, and one down at 18 holes.

Dawson went up for the first time during the match after he had squared accounts on the 23d hole and won the 25th, putting him one up. A birdie on No. 28 put the Chicagoan two up, but Rotan won the 29th. Dawson then won the 30th, 31st and 32d holes with two birdies and a par, and a half at the 33d hole ended the match.

The 36 hole championship match will be played tomorrow.

Rockefeller Proves Par Isn't Safe from a 90 Year Old Golfer

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—[U.P.]—A firm stepping golfer of 90, John D. Rockefeller Sr., who carries his years as lightly as he does his brassie, iron, and putter—his favorite clubs—has negotiated eight holes of the famous Ormond Beach club course here in 37 strokes.

On the day that "Neighbor John"—as he is known here—turned in his card of 545 446 45—37, against a par of 445 535 34—33, he arrived at the course five minutes later than usual, at 10:20, armed with his golfing paraphernalia and dimes, nickles, and poetry.

"Return next year with this nickel, my friend, and I will exchange it for a dime," he said with a kindly smile as he gave a five cent piece to a member of a friendly crowd.

He also gave copies of a poem written by a 19 year old girl in the department of commerce, entitled "I Do It Unto Thee." He had it read before he teed off.

Ignoring the customary preliminary swings the oil king smacked the ball cleanly and sent it sailing for about 150 yards. The gallery rewarded him with a chorus of Ah-h-hs and Rockefeller smiled happily.

Number one is a par 4 hole. "Neighbor John" selected a brassie, swung slowly, deliberately and sent the ball in good position to the green. A perfect pitch and he was on. Two putts gave him a 5. Par one up.

A 200 yard drive from the second tee, a good accurate brassie and he was again on the green. Two precisely played putts gave Rockefeler a par four.

Number three is a par 5. That's what Rockefeller took. His drive was one of good distance, followed by a brassie. He elected to use a brassie for the approach and was on in three. Two putts and he was down.

He made a birdie 4 on the 465 yard par 5 fourth and was all square with par. To do it he sank a 20 foot putt.

Perhaps a bit unnerved, Rockefeller took a four on the par 3 fifth. His consistently long drive was followed by an approach which made the green, but he took two putts. Par was one up again.

Number six, par 5, presented unexpected difficulties. His drive was true, but his brassie went in the water and he lost a stroke when his caddie fished it out. His iron approach was on, and his usual two putts were enough. But par was two up.

Par 3 number seven found the oil king on in two, but he required his two putts again.

On the eighth and regularly final hole of every daily round, Rockefeller made a fine tee bid, but topped his second shot for a bare 50 feet. He recovered quickly by sending his third well on the green and holed out in two for a five. He finished his round four down to par.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Slashing his way through a field of ten classy thoroughbreds in record shattering time, Jack Howard's Islam today won the Miami Jockey Club over a lightning fast track at Hialeah Park.

With the crowd of 15,000 fans almost dumb from surprise, the four year old son of Porter literally ran the best of the handicap performers into the ground as he stepped the mile and eighth in 1:50 1-5. The time was one second faster than the mark hung up by War Eagle under 105 pounds on March 5, 1927. Islam had only 96 pounds in the saddle, a part of which was F. Dainty.

Few of the vast mob, however, had the forethought to back the colt, recently purchased by Howard from A. Sutro, with the result that he paid 20 to 1 win, 8 to 1 to place, and 4 to 1 to show. The lack of confidence was due to the fact that Islam's last victory was back in the summer days of 1929.

DONNAY WINS AT N. O.

New Orleans, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Over a track fetlock deep in mud, Donnay, 4 year old ace of Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas stable, today plowed his way to victory in the George Washington Birthday handicap at the Fair Grounds.

E. Steffen again was astride the star of the green and white silks. Steffen reserved his mount back of the pace setting Uluniu and First Mission for the first 5 furlongs and then sent him up with a rush to pass the leaders in the stretch. At the finish Donnay was drawing clear, being a length in front of Uluniu, which carried the silks of Mrs. R. Pollard. The Walbri farms' Strongheart came up fast in a drive but was a nose back of Mrs. Pollard's speedy colt at the judges' stand. Coupled with Leucite, Donnay was made the favorite at $1.45 on the dollar, paying $4.90 for a $2 investment in a straight ticket at the mutuel windows.

CHICAGO RACQUET TEAM ADVANCES TO SEMI-FINALS

Local Players Triumph Over Philadelphians.

Chicago squash racquets players almost ran away with the national championships in the two rounds played yesterday at the Harvard-Yale-Princeton and Racquet clubs. Two of the semi-finalists in the singles come from New York, two from Philadelphia, while the only western team among the four left in the team championships is the Chicago quintet.

Most of the second round matches in the singles were decided in straight games, but each of the four quarter-final matches went to four games. Lawrence Pool of New York, defending champion, and Herbert N. Strachan of New York, champion two years ago, who are picked to meet in the final, both dropped their opening games in the quarter finals and had close sailing through to win.

Strachan Meets Pool.

Donald Strachan, the Princeton youth who is the dark horse of the tournament, won his first match by default and then defeated R. E. Smith of Milwaukee, three games to one, to get the stage for what is expected to be one of the best matches of the tournament, when Strachan meets Pool in the semi-finals this evening.

Edward Sullivan, the other semi-finalist, defeated Jay Rawlins this morning, making Chicago's only entrant in the tournament in the second round, when he defeated T. H. Fisher, 17-18, 15-10, 15-4 and 15-10. The semi-finals are to be played at the Harvard-Yale-Princeton club at 10 o'clock this morning and the final on the same court at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Chicagoans Reach Semi-Finals.

Louisville at the Racquet club, Chicago club and the H-Y-P club, the team championship worked through the first two rounds. Chicago swept Louisville aside five matches to none in the first round and then defeated Philadelphia four matches to one, to reach the semi-finals. The Chicago team composed of J. H. Douglas, W. Hardin, L. S. Hardin, M. D. West and E. E. Anderson will play Boston in the semi-finals at the Racquet club at 2 o'clock this morning. At the same time and place Baltimore will play Buffalo. CHICAGO BOYS STAR AS RIPON WINS, 60 TO 42

Ripon, Wis., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Ripon and Hamline piled up 102 points in a Midwest conference game here tonight. Ripon won, 60 to 42.

Ripon's last home Midwest game was Falconer, Johnson and Cooke, of Lake View High stars of Chicago, carrying the scoring burden. Ripon led with six field goals and seven free tosses.

Hunt, forward, and Sturm, sophomore guard, each contributed six field goals for Ripon, while Graves and Hunt tallied most of Hamline's points.

Golden Gloves Fighter Also Is Star on Gridiron

Boxing is not the only sport in which Thomas Dicenso, lightweight star of the Springfield Golden Gloves sectional tournament excels. Mr. Dicenso also is a football star of ability and has been elected captain of Springfield High school's team.

Just as young Dicenso has been versatile, always has been interested in athletics, at a sacrifice of time in his studies. Of course, he received opposition of his parents who wanted him to excel in the classroom and not on the football field or track.

So he was sent away to an academy at Jacksonville where he would be under the watchful eyes of his parents both in school and out. Here his athletic activities were curtailed, for he soon became a leader in the academy as well as a star of the football team.

Recently he convinced his mother that he become interested in books, and was permitted to return to Springfield. And last year he won the love of Springfield fandom for his prowess on the football field.

Few Illinois heard of the Springfield Golden Gloves champion until once more yielded to the urge to pull on the padded mitts. Then he fought his way through the sectional division and realized his ambition of a trip to Chicago as a Golden Gloves fighter.

Fields Loses to Corbett but Retains Title

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Young Corbett of Fresno, a 2 to 1 outsider, won a ten round decision over Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, this afternoon at Recreation park. The decision of Referee Jim Griffin was favorably received by the crowd with whom Corbett was popular.

JACKIE FIELDS.

Fields and his manager, Gig Rooney protested the verdict.

Just as the fight ended Fields raised his hand in the air, as though anticipating victory but Griffin reached around him and grabbed Corbett's hand in token of victory. The welterweight title was not at stake as Fields had forced Corbett to come into the ring over the weight limit.

The contest showed that southpaw boxing still is a puzzle to Fields. Jackie was unable to avoid Corbett's left hand and at no time was he able to devise a defense for Corbett's best weapon. Fields showed a burst of speed in the tenth round when Corbett tired but his rally was far too late. A check of the rounds showed that Corbett carried five with three for Fields and two even.

Chick Devlin, 157 pounds, San Francisco, scored a six round decision over Herman Ratzlaff of Minot, N. D. Devlin was the stronger and forced the fighting all the way.

Barney Ross, Chicago lightweight stablemate of Fields, punched his way to an easy four round decision over Jiro Kumagi, San Francisco.

LES CANADIENS WIN.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 22.—(AP)—The Montreal Canadiens trounced the New York Americans, 9 to 2, in a National Hockey league game here tonight.

$27.50 TO SEE PHIL FAINT DEAD AWAY? MY WORD!

Society Folk Have Watched It Once Too Often.

official ticket scalper of the Garden corporation, this morning when a customer walked out examining two fifteen dollar tickets.

"Look at that mob storming the ticket windows," Mr. Johnston exclaimed excitedly.

"Yes," Mr. Jacobs agreed brightly. "But I like these stampedes."

I understand now that the business men connected with the enterprise do not expect more than $250,000 worth of trade Thursday evening, about 60 per cent of the capacity for which they builded their expectations and their arena.

This downward revision of the business may be blamed against the New York prize fight commissioners, who extended their authority to the state of Florida and nominated Fainting Philip for Sharkey's opponent too soon after he swooned to the floor in round one of a $100,000 exhibition with Otto von Porat in New York, claiming to have been fouled in a grievous manner.

The socially refined millionaires of New York ordinarily buy up about 60 per cent of the preferred seats at the Garden corporation's major productions and they may be holding off in this case, deeming it hardly worth the inconvenience to struggle out to the arena in the traffic and the crowds, if any, to see Fainting Philip faint without due cause again.

How to Tell a Millionaire.

As an unfortunate aftermath of the refined boxing exhibition produced under the auspices of the socially exclusive Oasis club in Palm Beach Wednesday, both Fainting Philip and Mr. Johnston have helped themselves to a large amount of umbrage and have practically severed relations with the Palm Beach set.

It now develops that although Philip broke camp here and went to Palm Beach only at the cost of considerable inconvenience, he was not afforded the social courtesies which he had been led to expect and it also develops that Mr. Johnston committed a serious faux pas when he mistook one of the most refined millionaires in Palm Beach for the janitor of the Oasis club.

"I should have known that nobody but a millionaire would have the nerve to go around Palm Beach looking like a bum," Mr. Johnston explained today. "But I was out of temper myself. These millionaire tried to shove my Philip into a dressing room with a lot of common sparring partners while assigning separate dressing rooms to a lot of bums owned by Neddie Hutton, the millionaire. So I looked around for the janitor to make a complaint.

"I picked out the commonest looking bum I could find and told him to get Hutton's bums out of the individual dressing rooms so that my Philip and his sparring partners could dress and while he did this for me I thought he seemed a little put out by the incident. It was not until after the show that I learned of my error, but by that time I was out of temper again because they tried to cut Philip's boxing down to two minute rounds in order to make a place on the card for Hutton's bums.

Society Forgets Its Manners.

"Millionaires are beginning to be a nuisance in this profession. They are always talking about uplifting prize fighting and I am always asking them why they don't uplift the brokerage business first. When a man gets into the ring he knows he has only one man to fight but when a customer goes into a brokerage office he is one man against a whole crowd, without any referee to see that he gets a square deal."

But the real social error occurred at the conclusion of the boxing entertainment when the millionaires gathered around the tea table and began to absorb tea in small glasses out of a silver urn, which seems to be the fashionable way to serve tea nowadays.

Fainting Philip, an English chap, who feels quite seedy if he does not have his tea in the afternoon, waited about for almost an hour after his boxing performance for some millionaire to invite him to join his hosts at the refreshment tables, but nobody approached him.

Finally, Philip picked up his handbag and started from the exclusive Oasis club and as the sounds of hilarity around the silver urn faded into the distance, he said to Mr. Johnston:

"Tell me, Jimmy, are these really the finest gentlemen in America as you have told me and if so what kind of gentlemen are they? Here I have broken camp and traveled 150 miles to box for them. And now that it is over nobody even thanks me or invites me to have a bit of tea. No English gentleman would let a guest go without his tea."

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Fred Wettach, Harold Talbott and Russell Firestone were the individual stars in the Washington birthday polo matches at the Nauticus field today for trophies awarded by Mrs. John D. Hertz.

Talbott's play gave the Rangers a 10 to 9 victory over the Cardinals in a match game. Going into the seventh chukker two goals behind, Talbott, who already had scored twice, tied the count, and in the next chukker assisted Jesse Andrew in making the deciding goal. Maj. CHICAGO TRACK TEAM DEFEATS MICHIGAN, 49-45

Letts and Weaver Lead Maroons to Victory.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—By virtue of seven first places to Michigan's four, the University of Chicago track squad nosed out the Wolverines, 49½ to 45⅓, tonight.

Although the Maroons started with a rush to capture firsts in the high hurdles, 60 yard dash and mile run, the first three events on the card, and were never headed, it was the ironman performance of Letts that gave Chicago the meet.

The rangy Letts stepped the best mile seen on the field house oval in several years to beat Wolfe, and then came back in the 880 to win in 1:59.7, which is within half a second of the track record. This saved the Maroons a shutout in the event and won the meet. Letts had a margin of three yards.

To Buck Weaver, Chicago giant, went the honor of setting the only new fieldhouse mark. He tossed the 16 pound ball 46 feet 7½ inches to better the record set last year by Anderson of Cornell.

Michigan's first place winners were Dale Seymour in the 440, Felker in the high jump, Dougall in the pole vault, and the relay team. AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

60,000 See England Beat France for Rugby Championship, 11-5

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Sixty thousand persons, including Prince George and Prince Arthur of Connaught, the French ambassador, M. A. de Fleuriau, and Georges Carpentier, saw England win the international Rugby union championship at Twickenham today at a score of 11 to 5. The union includes England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and France, the latter having already defeated the strong Irish and Scotch teams, hoped to gain the championship today, which is rarely held by France.

Prohibitionists might take text in the fact that the losing team arrived with each member carrying a small barrel of French wine under his arm, but the wets are able to come right back and attribute the victory to the exhaustion of the supply two days before the match.

The extent of interest in the match was indicated by the action of Andre Tardieu, former French premier, when he telegraphed the minister of war demanding one of the French stars, who is serving in the army, be excused from military duties in order to play, while the new French premier, Camille Chautemps, wired wishes for success.

Rugby as played on this side of the water does not look much like the American game. It is played in the costume worn for soccer in America and is much less deadly.

The first half was fairly close, ending with a score of 6 to 5, but England outplayed France during the second period, adding five more points and holding the French scoreless.

Ireland beat Scotland, 14 to 11, in another important international match.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Would you rather be on Catalina Island with the Cubs or in San Antonio with the White Sox?

The Answers.

William Moroney, 6308 North Rockwell street, compositor—On Catalina Island with the Cubs. I understand no expense has been spared to make it an ideal baseball training camp. Catalina Island probably is the better place for conditioning. Incidentally, I take more interest in the Cubs than I do the Sox.

W. J. York, 4900 South Blackstone avenue, credit man—I would rather be on Catalina Island with the Cubs. Of course, this means living like one of the players, getting expenses paid and enjoying a nice vacation. I hope the players don't call training work.

David Kushnir, 1555 South Spaulding avenue, musician—On Catalina Island with the Cubs, surrounded by the music of the ocean. I am a Cub fan. However, I am informed that the climate at San Antonio is to be preferred at this time of the year, it being mild compared to that of the stiff winds and drizzly weather on Catalina Island.

Jack Janofsky, 5615 Castello avenue, pressman—Give me Catalina Island and the Cubs. The island and this baseball team would be a fine combination for me. I never have been in California, and who wouldn't like to make a trip there? Possibly by going to Catalina Island first one could slip over to San Antonio and see a little of Texas, too.

Richard Graff, 4354 Princeton avenue, errand boy—Being a follower of the Cubs, there's only one answer—Catalina. But I would be glad to go to either place if I had a chance to see something of the west. I wouldn't be very particular if it actually came to one trip or the other.

DOG DERBY WON IN RECORD TIME BY ST. GODDARD

QUEBEC, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Mushing his way over the hard packed 120 mile snow covered course in record breaking time, Emil St. Goddard today won the eighth annual Eastern International Dog Derby.

The youthful musher from The Pas drove his team of huskies over the three laps of 40 miles each in a total elapsed time of 11:01:27—five minutes and six seconds faster than the record hung up by Leonhard Seppala, veteran Nome (Alaska) driver, last year. Seppala's time in 1929 was 11:06:33.

Clinging to the heels of the flying St. Goddard to take second place was Seppala. The Nome musher drove his dogs over the course in 11:06:27, six seconds better than his own mark of last year.

Kimball Wins Dog Derby.

Ashton, Idaho, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Earl Kimball of Cascade, Idaho, today won the annual American dog Derby. His time was 2 hours 10 minutes and 25 seconds for the 25 mile course. Delbert Groom, 17 year old musher of Rigby, Idaho, was second in 2:11:13.

PAVING BRICK MANUFACTURERS PRESENT CASE

Make Another Appeal for Use in Illinois.

BY HAL FOUST.

The National Paving Brick Manufacturers' association is making another appeal for the use of its product on Illinois highways. Last November Gov. Emmerson was asked to build new roads with the little red blocks that are the butt of many curses from motorists. Now the brick men want to resurface some of the state's concrete highways.

Officials of the National Paving Brick Manufacturers' association requested THE TRIBUNE automobile editor to investigate their claims and to report conclusions. The investigation included the perusal of a library of technical literature and three days of discussion with the association's engineers and promoters on a thousand mile tour of Illinois roads.

Broken Concrete Found.

It was found that there are miles of Illinois concrete broken and crumbling years before the road bonds are retired. Maintenance costs on these stretches exceed the interest on an investment in a new pavement or new surface.

This is not a description of the average Illinois concrete highway, but it describes exceptional cases covering many miles.

Parts of Illinois route 4, between Springfield and East St. Louis, constructed in 1919, 1920, and 1921 under a twenty year bond issue, are cracked and raveled by the expansion and contraction of temperature changes and by the impact of heavy traffic.

The surface of Illinois route 5, east of Rockford, is bumpy with broken patches. The construction joint in the center of the pavement indicates that it was built since 1922.

Illinois route 22, between Aurora and Elgin, has broken edges and rough tar and gravel patches. This was built between 1916 and 1919. Its design is obsolete.

Bad Spots on Roosevelt.

Roosevelt road has bad stretches of old concrete between Chicago and Geneva. There are depressions where the dirt subgrade has settled and there are weather cracks and load breaks. Touhy avenue, just west of Chicago, is badly broken, presumably by overloaded trucks. It was built in 1921.

Something must be done with this uneconomical and unsatisfactory pavement. Some of the brick men advocate a new surface of brick over the old concrete. Some presume that brick should be placed on the state's entire system to prevent premature disintegration of the concrete.

The basis for the presumption that all slab roads will follow the course of the exceptions is not impressive. Nor are the arguments in favor of a brick resurface on broken concrete convincing, although they might merit experimental tests by the state highway department.

The average motorist condemns brick because most of its mileage in Chicago and in Illinois is worse than the worst concrete. Lake street road through Maywood is typical.

Brick Streets 35 Years Old.

A common experience of Illinois drivers is to sail sixty miles an hour over the state's smooth concrete onto the rutted brick of a village street. The brick manufacturers offer an explanation by way of apology for this fly in their sales talk.

"Almost all of the brick on village streets used by state highways is between 20 and 35 years old," said W. H. Moseley, head of the Illinois district of the brick manufacturers. "You are contrasting concrete with brick twice its age."

We drove to Pana, Ill. Its main streets are cited all over the country as examples of the longevity of brick, according to George F. Schlesinger, managing director of the National Paving Brick Manufacturers' association. The surface is moderately rough, but has served for thirty-three years with little maintenance.

"I've always preferred brick," said Harry Stanton, city clerk of Pana, "but the town voted overwhelmingly five years ago to adopt concrete for a paving program."

Another old brick pavement, remarkable for its age rather than its riding qualities, is Ridge avenue, built thirty-six years ago.

70 Miles an Hour on Brick.

"But it was never a high type surface for fast motor traffic," George Barton of the Chicago Motor club deprecated the brick men's exhibit.

The brick manufacturers took the party far from Chicago in an attempt to disprove that brick pavements have a characteristic roughness due to the construction joints ever few inches. They proved that well laid brick has less wave than much of the state's concrete and most of the concrete in the village and city streets where inspection is less exacting.

On Illinois route 8, between Knoxville and Galesburg, the automobile traveled seventy miles an hour over five year old brick without the sway that is found on poorly laid concrete and on almost all bituminous pavements. Tests at skidding showed good traction. Yet, at forty miles an hour there was the "brick vibration" due to the joints between the bricks.

Good Base Necessary.

On Illinois 78, between Kenton and Farmington, we drove 75 miles an hour over two year old brick. Here there was no vibration. The cracks between the brick were still full of the bituminous binder that wears out quickly under traffic.

The brick men were successful in their proof that their material withstands wear. But they conceded that a brick surface is no stronger than its base. They were unconvincing when they spoke in favor of putting brick on broken concrete.

New brick roads on new concrete foundations show the cracks where weather has broken the concrete. The brick is not broken, but the bumps are there just the same.

Clifford Older, former state highway engineer, in his report in 1924 on the Bates experimental road tests conducted by his department, said:

Suggests Experimental Road.

"Bituminous filled brick surfaces apparently do not add materially to the strength of the base, but by lessening excessive impact at small broken corners, they give considerably increased resistance to progressive destruction."

The state highway department could determine with scientific accuracy and with little expense the merits of the engineering claims made by the brick men. A small experimental road could be built with brick over a concrete slab in good condition and another experimental stretch with brick on broken concrete.

Aside from the engineering questions and the relative riding comfort of the two paving materials, a question of finance is involved. The state highway department figures show that brick laid on Illinois' systems from 1925 to 1929 cost 77 per cent per unit more than concrete. The state would have considerably less hard road mileage today had brick rather than concrete been given the bulk of the contracts.

Say Figures Are Unfair.

The state highway department also reports a much higher maintenance cost on the state's brick than on its concrete. The brick manufacturers contend that the figures are unfair because the brick is much older than the concrete. This sounds reasonable.

The resurfacing with brick is estimated at $23,000 a mile. New concrete averages $28,500 a mile. A new surface with steel reinforced concrete costs between $14,000 and $16,000 a mile.

The National Paving Brick Manufacturers' association announces that it is willing to rest its appeal for business on the questions of engineering and finance. Mr. Mosely and Mr. Schlesinger both repudiated reported attempts of brick men to use political pressure on the state administration.

HOLES IN ILLINOIS CONCRETE

The pictures, taken on Illinois route 4 between Springfield and East St. Louis, are examples of the disintegration of some of the state's concrete years before the road bonds are retired. Maintenance costs are becoming so great that the state must reconstruct or resurface.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

MICE NEST IN MOTOR.

Middlebury, Ind., Feb. 20.—Here is some news that might interest some of the readers of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

After failing to get my car, which had been stored in a barn for several months to start, the cylinder head was removed. Upon examining the valves they were found to be carefully packed underneath with corn, while the exhaust manifold also was filled.

The corn apparently had been put there by mice which had entered through the only opening, the exhaust pipe and muffler. The total distance is about 80 inches to travel through exhaust.

USE RIGHT LANE.

Chicago, Feb. 21.—I think that a large number of our policemen should be taught some of the traffic rules. After a small accident last Sunday, during which another vehicle made a right hand turn from the left traffic lane of the street and struck the rear part of my car as it was doing so, the argument arose as to whether a man could turn right from a left traffic lane. A policeman on hand said there was no law against it, and the sergeant at the station reflected the same thought. See chapter XIX., paragraph 113.

WILLIAM Q. BECKETT.

ENFORCE PARKING RULES.

Oak Park, Ill., Feb. 20.—A drive along Jackson boulevard reveals a host of signs stating that parking is prohibited during certain hours, although an inspection of this thoroughfare will show so many cars parked on this street that there is only one lane left open for each line of traffic.

Are the west park police sponsoring a new branch of the "I gotta drag club," or do these parkers wield so strong an influence that the police are helpless to enforce the laws?

Whenever more tax money is needed the motorist is the goat. Such being the case, give us a little break at least. Keep the boulevards open so we can drive along without having to wait for several changes of the traffic light before we are able to pass. Enforcement of this parking law will benefit many thousands and we hope to see an improvement.

MOTORIST.

SARCASM.

Chicago, Feb. 21.—I wish as a law abiding citizen of Chicago to protest against the unfair criticism aimed at our efficient police system.

Our police chief and state's attorney having become convinced the crime wave is about over, are wasting no time, but are attacking with renewed energy the other problems of city government. Only this morning I saw evidence of this. It was on a quiet side street on the south side as a police officer, keenly alert, spied a car parked facing the wrong way. With some patience he stood and waited the driver's appearance. With admirable restraint he handed him a court slip, and the information that there was a citywide drive on. I hope this will be a lesson to this man to have more respect for our laws. Of course, it happened that at this time a man was held up and lost a few teeth on the next street, but every reasonable person will realize an officer cannot be two places at once.

LAW AND ORDER.

PREY ON PARKERS.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 19.—"What does the stranger think of our city?" is a question doubtless in the minds of good citizens of Chicago.

Probably your greatest evil is petty graft. At least to a stranger it is most evident. Most apparent to the motorist is the petty graft that permits belligerent operations of your "parking lords" in choice spots.

I parked in a vacant space on Congress, between State and Wabash, after hours last week, and before I could get the door open a Negro was there telling me he watched the cars along there. I said not a word, visited my client, made an appointment to return in one hour, and this Negro was much in evidence, not attempting to hide his chagrin when I drove away apparently ignoring him.

When I returned again, an hour later, I was again met, recognized, and told the space was reserved, by the same man, but still ignored him and parked, anyway. Ten minutes later I returned to find two tires and my spare flat.

I notified the patrolman on the beat, who informed me that unless I had definite evidence, with witnesses, to prove deliberate mischief I had better go on about my business. He told me, further, that this Negro was a bad actor and advised me to have no quarrel with him.

C. W. PELTY.

DISTRIBUTE TRAFFIC.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Hardly a day passes without the newspapers telling us of some automobile accident due to too much traffic on narrow streets.

We are constantly urged to vote bonds to widen streets and build new roads within the city limits. All this may be a very good way out of it, but it is very expensive, too.

I have a remedy in mind that has never been suggested by any one, as far as I know, and I cannot understand why it wouldn't be a good idea to pave all streets in Chicago, so that autos could be driven on any of them. As it is at present, less than 10 per cent of our streets are fit to drive on, consequently all our autos are driven on just a few thoroughfares and this, of course, makes the congestion and delays.

Take, for instance, when we people on the north side want to drive out south, we have the choice of one street, Michigan avenue, all the rest are unfit to drive on. Not long ago the city built at a great expense the La Salle street bridge and tore down buildings downtown at a cost of millions, all for the purpose of taking away some of the traffic from Michigan boulevard. Has it done it? No, of course not. La Salle street is unfit to drive on, and it seems so foolish to build a bridge and expect people to use it when they know the street is not fit to drive on.

Maybe I am wrong, and I would like to hear from some one else, but as far as I can see there is only one solution and that is to pave all streets well. Traffic will then loosen up at once and all will be fine.

Just imagine that you can drive down any street at all and you don't have to drive on crowded through streets and boulevards. Here's to this hope, that some of our traffic engineers will get some sense.

H. H. T.

TRAFFIC ARRESTS FOR REVENUE.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Since the police of the city are among the principals of the unpaid group, I wish to suggest a manner by which two birds can be killed with one stone. Chicago is well fortified with automobile ordinances. Why not try a little enforcement?

By the thousands, on streets, on boulevards and in alleys, cars are parked without lights, narrowing the driveway and making night driving dangerous. They are driven upon the streets, hogging the road, cutting in and out of traffic, doing a neat forty, without lights fore or aft.

Some are equipped with a terrible blast horn and this great black monster suddenly appearing beside you out of a great black nowheres, with a blast that would shame Gabriel's trumpet is enough to make even the callouse drivers climb curbstones and trees. Then there is driving and parking on the wrong side of the street, and at any old angle, cars parked in safety zones, on sidewalks, at fireplugs, and on crosswalks. There are cars with no state plates, old state plates, muddy state plates, and no vehicle tax. Then there are cars—but what is the use—I could go on indefinitely. The point is that if these violators were brought into court, with a penalty placed on "fixers" and with the full cooperation of the new traffic court, there would soon be funds enough to take care of the entire police department.

EARL M. ELAM.

British Columbia Will Strip Signs from Roads

Vigorous measures are to be taken in British Columbia to abolish all existing advertising signs along highways and those who insist on hiding scenic beauties of the road with new signs are to be prosecuted. Every kind of sign will be stripped from the highways, even including those of the forestry service. Only government signs erected to guide motorists will be allowed.

WOULD PUNISH HORN TOOTER BY TAKING LICENSE

Various punishments have been proposed for the car owner who abuses the use of the horn, but it seems to have remained for the editor of one of England's most famous automotive publications to suggest the most drastic. He writes:

"The insane sounding of horns during traffic hold-ups is now a punishable offense. This is a move in the right direction. No sensible being supposes that a policeman delays traffic in pique, and the mentality of the individual who make such stops still more irritating by blowing his horn ought to prove him instantly on conviction to be an improper person to hold a driver's license."

RAILROAD PLANS MOTOR HIGHWAY OVER ITS TRACKS

Toll Road from Detroit to Pontiac.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Early spring is scheduled to see the start here of actual construction of a toll speedway 26 miles long, above the rails of the Grand Trunk railroad, as part of an announced Grand Trunk $100,000,000 improvement program. A vote of the people in April will be a necessary preliminary, but little opposition to the project has been evidenced.

The toll highway, which will extend north as far as Pontiac, is said to be the first venture of its kind ever attemped. Its unique feature, from a financing standpoint, is that no purchase of property is involved, for the entire structure will stand above the right of way of the railroad.

40 Feet Above Rails.

Electrification of the rail line is also called for, and for this purpose it is planned to make an initial outlay of $25,000,000, according to C. G. Bowker, general manager of the Western Grand Trunk lines.

The motor speedway will be constructed on the columns carrying the overhead wires of the electrified system. It will be 40 feet above the rails and will be equipped with ramps at strategic points. The speedway, designed particularly for commuters, will enable motorists to cover the entire distance to or from Pontiac in 30 minutes, according to official announcement.

The roadway will be surfaced with asphalt and provide for four lanes of traffic, the outer two for slow moving vehicles.

The electrified train system will provide 40 minute service over a 4 traffic line. Completion of the first unit of the speedway, which will be from Detroit river to Royal Oak, is planned for the latter part of this year, and the realization of the whole building of the electrification project will follow quickly, Mr. Bowker said.

Detroit to Vote on It.

Another item in the $100,000,000 involves a new main terminal in Detroit, a 12 story building to be located in the downtown district. Joseph A. Bower, who last year completed the building of the Ambassador bridge which connects Detroit and Windsor, Ont., is promoting the speedway.

Pontiac has a population of 74,000 and is the largest city near Detroit. It is the home of large industries, and by way of Woodward avenue the driving time now over a 203 feet wide super-highway is only one hour.

The question to be submitted to the Detroit electorate involves primarily the granting of permission for the speedway to cross street intersections. Its details have been the subject of many council hearings, and most points of difference have been ironed out.

Bower Compromises.

The city, visioning the possibilities of the gigantic enterprise, at first wanted the right to cross the speedway. Bower compromised by putting into the ordinance the stipulation that any crossing speedway in Detroit should be at a different grade, he to bear half the expense this arrangement would entail.

A point not yet settled is whether Bower must reveal all contracts and understandings he may have with the Grand Trunk Railway company.

The Vanderbilt speedway is said to be the nearest existing approach to the projected Grand Trunk road, and it lacks the chief point of the Grand Trunk proposal—which is the utilization of the air above a railroad's private right of way.

TO MARDI GRAS

THE Mardi Gras will draw thousands of motorists to New Orleans. The annual festival starts next Thursday and lasts until the following Tuesday. This map, prepared by the Chicago Motor club, shows routes from Chicago to New Orleans, a trip of 1,150 miles that is easy to make in three days of steady driving.

BRITAIN PLANS TO RAISE SPEED LIMIT FOR CARS

LONDON.—A movement is under way to speed up Britain's traffic by abolishing speed limits for private automobiles and extending the speed limit for buses.

The new road traffic bill, to be introduced in the house of lords, will seek to abolish all speed limits for private automobiles and extend the present speed limit of 12 miles an hour for buses to 30 miles an hour.

The present private automobile limit is 20 miles an hour.

The present laws have been in effect for years, and although they have been broken freely in most cities they still provided a source of revenue to isolated communities through speed traps.

Air Schools ∴ AVIATION ∴ Air Traffic

EARLY EXPANSION OF CITY AIRPORT IS NOT BRIGHT

Negotiations Still Far from Complete.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Prospects for the expansion of Chicago's municipal airport before this spring are none too bright. Negotiations for the necessary transfer of property from the schools to the city have now more than a year old and the present dickering betwen the two bodies may carry on for many more weeks. After that at least thirty days will be required to see the measure through the city council.

And after that the city will have to scurry around to find some cash for starting off and draining new land, for extending runways and installing new lighting. All this, of course, depends on whether the school board agrees to terms which will make the expansion possible.

In the meantime the men who carry on the business of air transportation from the converted cow pasture at Fortieth street and Cicero avenue are wondering what is going to happen when warm weather brings scores of new ships into Chicago.

Longer Runways Needed.

The new ships will be bigger, heavier and faster than the planes which now use the field this year and the year before. They will require longer runways with smooth substantial surfaces. One soft spot in a runway or a dirt field may result in the loss of life and the wrecking of a plane. Airport experts agree that in order to insure the greatest degree of safety runways should be 3,000 feet long. Width should be between 300 and 500 feet. (400 feet are desirable, and the width should be betwene 300 and 500 feet. The runways should also extend in all directions, like the spokes in a bicycle wheel, for the commercial plane must fly no matter what direction the wind is blowing.

The municipal field has one runway of four which partially meets these requirements. The northeast-southwest runway is 2,200 feet long, but it must be accredited with its full length because airplanes approaching from either end must slide in over the tops of dwellings, and high tension wires and land some distance down the runway. Considering that the ends of a runway are not usable, the effective length of the runway is really much shorter than its actual length. Its width is 150 feet.

North-South Runway Short.

Because of the prevailing wind the most used landing alley is the one which stretches 2,900 feet from the row of hangars on the Cicero avenue side to the dirt road which bounds the field on the west. Here again the full length of the runway may not be used because the planes must come in over the power lines and hangars on the east rim of the field. The prevailing winds are southwest to northwest in the winter and northeast in the summer.

The north and south runway is 2,200 feet and is bounded on the south by high tension wires. A low railroad embankment is its northern boundary.

Because the board of education has not relinquished the 40 acres at the corner of Sixty-third street and Cicero avenue the northwest-southeast runway is only 1,800 feet long, and ends in the center of the field. Beyond the point in the unused plot which keeps the schools no revenue is a heavy growth of weeds and a large sign board proclaiming in tall words that the municipal airport attests the "enlightedness of "William Hale Thompson, Mayor."

High Water Halts Work.

For the last week thawing snow has formed large pools of water in front of the hangar on Cicero avenue because defective drainage was unable to carry it away. Spring rains will make it much worse. Last year National Air Transport was forced to halt operation of their repair and maintenance shops because of high water. More than 100 men were out of work for two days. Officials of the company traveled through windows to work. Tractors towed the planes through water in dry land in the center of the field in order to take off.

The trend in the design of the commercial ships is toward high powered planes of four motors or more, capable of carrying from 20 to 50 passengers at greater speeds. Boeing Air Transport has a fleet of 18 passenger transports in their hangars at Seattle and San Francisco waiting to start their in a 22 hour service from Chicago to the Pacific coast. Fokker is building a four motored transport which will fly with 30 passengers and several Air Lines is planning to use ships of this type in their service from Chicago and through Chicago to the west and southwest. Boeing postponed the beginning of their new service last fall, pending action on the expansion of the municipal airport.

In order to make connections with the mail and passenger lines these planes must use the municipal field.

PILOTS WILL BE SENT WEATHER CHARTS BY RADIO

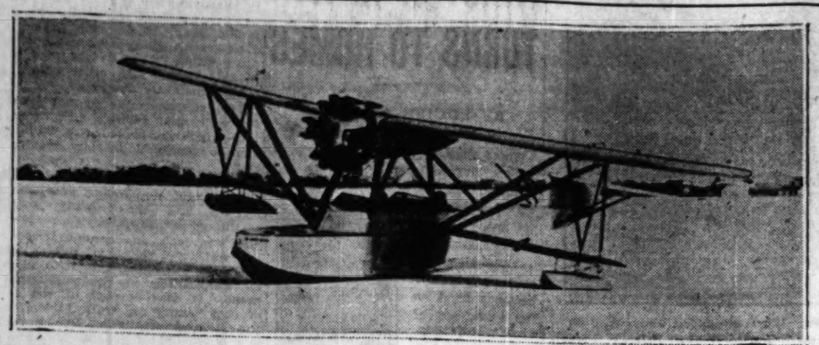
BERLIN.—Transmission of weather charts and maps to airplanes en route, which looms in the near future as a result of the successful experiments of the German Luft Hansa, officials here.

Some pictures were received by a ship in flight, depicting an approaching storm, an airport and a weather map. The pilot was able to determine weather conditions along his route from Berlin to Cologne. The speed of the storm and the point where it was to be encountered was easily plotted by the pilot.

Officials believe that the practical purposes of picture transmission will increase proportionately with the increase in commercial passenger carrying.

Transmission of the information can be accomplished in three minutes, technicians said. Officials of the company are insisting on installing the apparatus on the longer company routes.

SEAPLANE LANDING ON GROUND



A department of commerce inspector chopped this Eastman flying boat loose from the ice in the Detroit river, towed it onto smooth ice, and took off. Later he landed in three feet of snow on the Grosse Isle airport in Detroit, taxiing to a stop on the bottom of the hull.

8,000 TOWNS IN UNITED STATES ARE AIR MARKED

In closing up its various aviation activities as completed or on the road to completion, the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics reports that more than 8,000 towns of from one to ten thousand population throughout the United States have identified themselves by proper roof markings for the benefit of flyers. The fund's roof marking campaign was inaugurated in October, 1928, at the suggestion of Capt. Emory S. Land, shortly after he became vice president of the organization and was carried to completion by Milburn Kusterer.

Coöperation was given from many sources, federal, state, civic and private, the work being greatly accelerated in many instances by the fact that the person or group responsible for placing a marker received a certificate of appreciation signed by Charles A. Lindbergh as a trustee of the fund. A total of 7,800 such certificates was sent out. The present status of the campaign is that 4,074 towns and cities not previously identified are now air-minded, and nearly 2,000 other communities are completing their aerial identification.

N. A. T. TESTS NEW PLANE ON N. YORK TO CHICAGO RUN

Three Curtiss Carrier Pigeon mail and express planes, each with 2,000 pounds pay load capacity, are undergoing service tests by National Air Transport between Chicago, Toledo, Cleveland and New York.

With a capacity cargo these airplanes are winging their way over the 712 mile route at a cruising speed of 122 miles an hour. In speed tests with a full load the planes have attained a high speed of 149 miles an hour, according to E. P. Lott, N. A. T. manager of operations.

The new type Carrier Pigeon plane is powered with a single 625 horsepower Conqueror water cooled engine which is connected with a three bladed adjustable propeller by means of a two-to-one reduction gear. The reduction gear arrangement permits the propeller to revolve at only half the speed of the engine, thus preventing slippage.

The wing span of the Carrier Pigeon is 47 feet 6 inches and the overall length is 34 feet 6¼ inches. The height of the ship is 13 feet 6 inches.

MEXICO TURNS AIR MAIL OVER TO PRIVATE LINES

MEXICO CITY. — Following the course set out by the United States, Mexico has abandoned its government operated air mail service in favor of private contracts, it is announced by the postoffice department.

The six planes used on the government mail line between here and Laredo have been presented to Mexican schools of civil aeronautics. The government officials in charge believe that aeronautics will develop much faster without the restrictions of the subsidy plan or from the interference of the government.

All phases of aviation development in Mexico are being closely patterned after those in the United States, it is reported. Expansion for commercial air transportation is readily found in the country, named by some as "the country of vast distances."

CITIES URGED TO SUPPORT MODEL AIRPORT MEASURE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Declaring that the future of aviation rests with the various states in the manner with which they draft laws governing aviation, the department of commerce has urged that city officials actively support the model airport law drafted by the department of commerce.

Many states have already followed the advice of the government department, it is pointed out, thereby making for uniformity of aviation regulation. Copies of the bill will be sent upon application, officials announce.

A movement is also being backed by the department to urge the erection of adequate and model hangars throughout the United States. It is the plan to have at least one emergency landing field every 10 miles of airway.

Artificial Lake May Solve Hauling Problem in London

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

LONDON.—One of the chief difficulties in the way of extending the usefulness of commercial air transport—that of finding suitable landing space near the centers of great cities—may be solved for London by providing a landing for sea planes on an artificial lake. Two suggestions are made, one that the Thames should be broadened at a suitable spot, thus providing a landing near the heart of London and cutting out the hour's journey to Croydon, and the other that the Welsh Harp, an existing body of water on the outskirts of the city, be enlarged and deepened.

QUESTIONS

Q.—How can I obtain news of early flights and history to date?—R. M.—Chicago.

A.—Go to the your library and obtain a copy of Vehicles of the Air by Victor Longheed and that will bring you up to 1910. After that date there are several books, and I would suggest that you inquire of your librarian.

Q.—Do you have to have a college education to get into the National Guard flying branch to be a pilot? Can you enroll into the army and navy and serve a couple of years and then transfer to the aviation branch and become a pilot?—E. C.—Chicago.

A.—I would suggest that you write direct to Maj. M. Mann, National Guard hangar at Municipal airport, Chicago, Ill. Yes, if you can qualify at the end of that time.

Q.—How much can I learn by going to a technical school?—W. E. D.—Chicago.

A.—You will obtain a fair knowledge of aviation by attending a technical school.

Q.—Which of these two schools would you advise, Greer college or Curtiss Aviation school for a complete ground course not including flying?—A. J.—Chicago.

A.—I would advise you to first investigate both schools and see what they have to offer. Then write either the Chicago Association of Commerce, 10 South La Salle street, Chicago, or the better business bureau, 111 West Washington street, Chicago or the department of commerce, aeronautics branch, Washington, D. C., before you join any school of aviation.

Q.—Will you kindly tell me if there is at the present time, an aviation school in Chicago, doing business under the name of The Chicago Aviation school or if this particular school has changed its name?—H. M. B.—Wabash, Ind.

A.—There is no aviation school in Chicago doing business under the name of Chicago Aviation school at the present time. They have not changed their name but they are out of business.

MONTANA CLAIMS FIRST AERIAL SHEEP HERDER

GREAT FALLS, Mont.—First the name of Earl Vance was synominous with aviation in Montana; then it became in the last few years associated with sheep-raising, a high remunerative pursuit with prevailing wool prices.

Now the erstwhile Miles City, Mont., pioneer pilot has brought his two loves together, and he is an aerial-sheepherder.

Vance in his idle moments runs the principal air taxi service here. He also owns several flocks of "woolies." But his sheep, as all other good sheep do in the Rockies, have a habit of straying, so Earl hops in his single-seater biplane and goes a-hunting. To date he has recaptured three recalcitrant bands of sheep that strayed from their grazing grounds.

"They're the easiest things in the world to spot from the air," remarks Vance. "I don't know the especial ba-ba-ba of my bands, but if I see a bunch that is in a pocket of the mountains alone, I know darned well they are mine."

WATER GLIDER LATEST WRINKLE IN AERONAUTICS

Water gliding, a new link between the worlds of sport and aviation, has been given impetus by the execution of a construction contract between Air Associates, Inc., and a group of ten prominent aircraft executives and bankers, who have formed a syndicate for the purpose.

An experimental water glider, designed to take the air at low speeds when towed by the ordinary pleasure motor boat, has been designed by the organizer, Frederick W. Peel, and has been put into construction at Roosevelt field by the syndicate, headed by George M. Pynchon Jr. of Pynchon & Co., Frank M. Hawks, trans-continental record holder and glider enthusiast, and James B. Taylor Jr., president of Air Associates, Inc.

St. Louis Warns Pilots to Observe Air Traffic Rules

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The St. Louis office of the department of commerce has warned pilots in this district to observe air traffic rules pertaining to low flying over cities and other congested areas. An increasing tendency of pilots to fly low over football games provoked the warning.

CHICAGO WILL BE HUB OF NEW AIRWAYS SYSTEM

Time to New York to Be Cut One Hour.

Chicago is the hub of the air transport system of American Airways, Inc., the newly created operating company of Aviation corporation. James F. Hamilton, president of the company, stated last week that the new service will bring New York one hour closer to Chicago. The cities of the southwest will be within four to eight hours from here by plane.

The line operated by the Universal and Southern divisions of American Airways will serve Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Tulsa, Fort Worth, and Dallas with a total population of more than 7,500,000.

City Is Junction Point.

Chicago is the junction point on the Cleveland - Dallas through service. Here the line will split, with one plane going to Tulsa, Okla., by way of Kansas City and another going to Tulsa by way of St. Louis. At Tulsa the lines will converge and continue to Dallas over a single route by way of Fort Worth. The St. Louis-Tulsa loop is an entirely new service.

The new schedule provides over night train connections to and from New York, Boston, Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Houston, San Antonio, Shreveport, Little Rock, Memphis, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Omaha, and numerous other points by rail over the New York Central lines between New York and Cleveland and by air over American Airways between Cleveland, Chicago, and Dallas and intermediate points.

Passengers can now travel between New York and Dallas in 26 hours as compared with 48 hours for the all rail journey. Between New York and Kansas City the travel time is cut from 31 to 22 hours.

The announced schedule follows:

CHICAGO-ST. LOUIS-TULSA.

WESTBOUND. (Read down.)		EASTBOUND. (Read up.)
9:05 a. m. Lv..	Cleveland ..	Ar. 7:45 p. m.
10:50 a. m. Ar..	Chicago ..	Lv. 4:00 p. m.
11:00 a. m. Lv..	Chicago ..	Ar. 3:55 p. m.
1:25 p. m. Ar..	St. Louis ..	Lv. 1:40 p. m.
1:50 p. m. Lv..	St. Louis ..	Ar. 1:15 p. m.
5:10 p. m. Ar..	Tulsa	Lv. 10:15 a. m.

CHICAGO-KANSAS CITY-TULSA.

WESTBOUND. (Read down.)		EASTBOUND. (Read up.)
11:00 a. m. Lv..	Chicago ..	Ar. 3:55 p. m.
3:05 p. m. Lv..	Kansas City..	Lv. 12:15 p. m.
6:10 p. m. Ar..	Tulsa	Lv. 10:15 a. m.
5:15 p. m. Lv..	Tulsa	Lv. 10:10 a. m.
7:50 p. m. Lv..	Fort Worth..	Lv. 8:05 a. m.
8:15 p. m. Ar..	Dallas	Lv. 7:40 a. m.

Under this schedule, planes out of Cleveland leave nearly two hours later than under schedule of the coast-to-coast service, which was operated by the Universal Airlines System. Likewise the traveler has two hours and thirty minutes longer in New York than formerly. Instead of a 45 minute transfer period here, the travelers leave the Cleveland ship and board the Kansas City or St. Louis plane, both of which depart from the Municipal airport at the same hour for the runs to Tulsa.

Local Services Planned.

In addition to the through lines, local services are to be operated by the Universal division from Kansas City to Tulsa by way of Wichita, Kan., and by the Southern division from Tulsa to Houston by way of Oklahoma City, Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, Dallas and Waco.

The organization of the American Airways, Inc., was formed by The Aviation corporation. It took over the operating activities of all subsidiaries of The Aviation corporation which included the Universal Airlines system, Colonial Airways corp., Southern Air Transport and Interstate Airlines, Inc., and the many subsidiaries of these main operators.

American Airways planes cover more than 20,000 plane miles daily in scheduled flight. The new system is divided into three divisions, namely: Universal division, with headquarters in St. Louis; Colonial division, with headquarters in New York and the Southern division, with headquarters in Fort Worth.

The new company was formed to consolidate and centralize the operation activities of the companies for the co-ordination of schedules, and operating economies.

TINY BALLOONS WILL GATHER INFORMATION FOR WEATHER BUREAU

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Balloons carrying meteorological instruments which will gather important data to be used in forecasting storms are now being released in the midwest by the government weather bureau.

The balloons, which are three feet in diameter, and unattached to the ground, are expected to soar about 20 miles above the earth before they burst. A reward of $5 is to be paid those returning the instruments, which will descend to the ground by parachute.

Release of the balloons is being made at the Lambert-St. Louis field observation station; Topeka, Kas.; Sioux City and Davenport, Ia.; Amarillo, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark., and Cincinnati, O.

It is the desire of the weather bureau to obtain more complete data regarding the origin of southwestern storms. Forecasting of storms which originate in this territory will be extremely valuable to aviators.

"... In every way, the Viking has more than lived up to my expectations"

For ease of handling, snappy performance, and comfort, my Viking has more than lived up to my expectations.

The speedometer of my Viking turned the 10,000 mile mark in a little over five months. During this time, I had only the regular inspections and one brake adjustment. You know, I must have good brakes to control speeds above 80 miles an hour!

Judging from past experience with other makes of cars, I feel that I have received at least $500 extra value in the Viking.

John I Bennett
Architect
Plainfield, N.J.

"Extra value" is a mighty good expression to describe the Viking. Or, to phrase it in another way, the Viking offers, at medium price, many of the characteristics formerly associated with higher priced cars.

First, it is a 90-degree, V-type eight of advanced design—and gives you all the smoothness, quietness, and ready power for which this type of engine is famous. The Viking has performance—whether you judge it by speed, power, acceleration, or nicety of operation. Just ask any owner.

Second, the Viking is a beautiful car. Its lines are trimly tailored. It is low and fleet appearing. And its interiors carry out this beauty in their luxurious appointment.

Third, it is a comfortable car. The Viking is generous in size and unusually roomy inside. Seats are wide and deep-cushioned. Springs and shock absorbers are synchronized to provide splendid roadability.

Finally, the Viking Eight is built to last—built to deliver dependable, continued service month after month.

Viking owners are enthusiastic. And you'll be enthusiastic, too, once you know this car and drive it.

$1,250,000 IN NEW HOMES FOR ARLINGTON AREA

Bert H. Laudermilk Tells Plans.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Approximately a million and a quarter dollars are to be invested in new homes in the Bert H. Laudermilk Realty association's various developments in the Arlington Heights district during 1930, according to Bert H. Laudermilk, its president. These homes will be erected in the three Laudermilk developments, Stonegate, Scarsdale, and Arlington Park. Incidentally, it might be interesting to state now that two of these subdivisions, Stonegate and Arlington Park, are completely sold out.

This imposing building program for the three Laudermilk units is an interesting one in several ways. It involves, for instance, the construction of half a million dollars' worth of residences in the Scarsdale area by the home complete division of Hartman's. These will all be different architecturally, some being of English, some of Spanish, and the balance of Italian and French design.

Another Chicago builder, I. Jay and associates, is now completing the first of a number of English designed houses to be featured by that concern along the lines of fire safe construction. They will have concrete walls and reinforced footings, all masonry exterior wall construction, steel floor joists and structural beams, tile roof, all plaster on steel lath or masonry, steel casement windows, solid masonry partitions, and other fire resisting and fireproof features.

Promise a Reasonable Price.

In addition they will have a long and imposing list of house features about which the home builders' editor has been telling readers of her department for many months. There'll be an exhaust fan in the kitchen, cabinet radiators, a wood burning open fireplace, copper gutters and downspouts, rolling screens, steel door bucks and frame, washable decorating, built in ironing board, insulated exterior walls, heated garage, etc.

We usually don't mention prices of houses, for it's often a dangerous practice; owners oftentimes quote attractive prices before the buildings go up and then find they can't afford to sell them at the stated figure, owing to unexpected higher costs of construction. Anyway, Mr. Laudermilk states that these practically fireproof homes of seven rooms will sell for approximately $10,500. This will include the cost of the landscaped and terraced homesite. We believe this item is news, for many ordinary nonfireproof homes of the same size sell for much higher prices.

Other Builders Active.

This low price, Mr. Laudermilk states, is possible through quantity production. He adds that he believes a minimum of fifty of these homes can be sold at Scarsdale in the next few weeks following the completion of the first model house.

In addition to this extensive building program of fireproof homes another Chicago builder has started work on five other houses that will range in price from $12,000 to $18,000. These will vary in design and will include Italian, French and English architecture.

Then in addition to these two programs Mr. Laudermilk states that more than fifteen homes will be erected by individuals this spring in Scarsdale. Altogether he says the total amount to be invested in homes in Scarsdale during 1930 will be well over the million dollar mark.

Mr. Laudermilk also states that Hartman's will spend approximately $200,000 in new homes in the Arlington Park and Stonegate developments.

Has Ambitious Plans.

A few figures about Mr. Laudermilk's activities in the Arlington Heights area will show that he is by no means through with that region. For instance, Stonegate, his first venture, and perhaps his most ambitious, comprises 109 acres. Mr. and Mrs. Laudermilk, by the way, make their home in Stonegate.

Scarsdale, across on the other side of the Chicago and North Western right of way, has 151 acres. Arlington Park, across the tracks from the Arlington race track is eighty-four acres in size. That means that the total of the three projects is 335 acres.

In addition Mr. Laudermilk owns six good sized tracts in the Arlington Heights area for future development which total 529 acres. When these are marketed the Laudermilk banner will fly over 864 acres. And it's worth while calling attention to the fact that Mr. Laudermilk doesn't merely buy property, plat it and sell it. He puts in all the essential improvements and in addition others that many subdividers never think of.

WHAT CHICAGO AREA CITIES ARE DOING IN PARKS

Highland Park Leader; Chicago Ridge Last.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Interesting information showing what the cities and towns of the Chicago district are doing to provide park, playground and schoolyard facilities for their citizens of now and the future has been assembled by the Chicago Regional Planning association. A survey made by the organization covering eighty-four municipalities having an estimated 1930 population of 4,583,000 discloses that 12,187.7 acres have been set aside for the three aforementioned purposes—an average rate of 2.66 acres per 1,000 persons.

Ten of these communities have more than 20 acres per 1,000 inhabitants, eight have between 10 and 20, twenty-two have between 5 and 10, twenty-one have between 2 and 5, and twenty-three have less than 2. Forest preserve area is not included in the survey.

Highland Park Leads.

Highland Park appears to be the banner town in point of public lands, with a total of 497 acres, or 38.2 acres for each 1,000 inhabitants. This includes 250 acres for parks, 187 acres for playgrounds and 60 acres for schoolgrounds.

Somewhat illuminating are the statistics for Cicero, where the commission reports 48.6 acres for 68,000 people—a rate of 0.7 acres per 1,000 people. This is one of the lowest rates in the tabulation. But aristocratic Evanston does not hold a stellar position either, for it has but 143.5 acres for 67,000 persons—a rate of 2.1 acres per 1,000.

Cook County Rate High.

Chicago itself has 4,725.7 acres for 3,320,000 people—a rate of 1.4 acres per 1,000. However, Cook county, with its forest preserve, holds a better position. The 1920 figures show 28,228.32 acres of park for 3,053,017 people—a rate of 12.53 acres per 1,000. This does not include school grounds.

Oak Park, another distinguished suburb, also shows a low proportion of its land set aside for public uses. It has 144.4 acres for 75,000 people—a rate of 1.5 per 1,000. But Lake Forest, noted as a town of millionaires, does much better with 170.5 acres for 6,500 people—a rate of 26.2 acres for each 1,000.

Report in Detail.

But we'll let the complete figures speak for themselves. The heading "acres" includes parks, playgrounds and school grounds:

"It is recommended by the Regional Planning association that municipalities and park districts adopt the figure '10 acres for each 1,000 population' as a basis for acquiring parks and playgrounds, and that of each 10 acres approximately three acres be devoted to playground purposes."

As a basis of comparison, here are the 1920 figures for the three other of the nation's four largest cities: New York, 5,620,048 population, 10,178.5 acres in parks, or 1.82 acres per 1,000 people; Philadelphia, 1,823,779 population, 7,801.7 acres in parks, or 4.28 acres per 1,000, and Detroit, 993,678 population, 3,732.7 acres in parks, or 3.76 acres per 1,000 people.

W. H. MacLEAN BUYS 20 ACRES NEAR BARRINGTON

W. H. MacLean, vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, who recently built a residence on his large estate in the Barrington district, yesterday purchased a twenty acre tract adjoining it, fronting on the Spring Grove road, three miles west of Barrington. W. B. Frankenstein was seller.

WESTCHESTER'S FIRST SCHOOL

Here is how Westchester's first school building will look when completed. Work already is under way on the first unit; the section to your right. It will cost approximately $40,000, according to William Zelosky, head of the William Zelosky company, which presented the site to the Westchester school district. The property fronts south on Gladstone avenue, west on Hull avenue and east on Newcastle. The structure is to be known as the Gladstone grade school.

Pixley-Ehlers Concern Gets New Loop Site

Pixley & Ehlers yesterday leased the entire ground floor store and basement at 31-33 West Madison street, in the Chicago Bank of Commerce building, formerly known as the Union Trust building and prior to that as the Tribune building. They announce that they will spend $100,000 in remodeling the premises into one of the finest and most modern popular price eating places in the city.

ALBERT J. PIXLEY.

A feature somewhat unusual for this type of restaurant, at least so far as Chicago is concerned, will be an air refrigerating system which will keep the temperature less than 70 degrees during the summer months.

Architect Frank O. De Money, according to Albert J. Pixley, president of Pixley & Ehlers, will visit several of the larger American cities to get ideas on restaurant layout and decoration. Mr. De Money designed the Pixley & Ehlers restaurant at 68 East Lake street and other eating places of that concern. The space just rented fronts forty feet on Madison street, with a depth of 104 feet.

The new eating place will be quite a contrast to the original Pixley & Ehlers lunchroom, opened about three decades ago at 155 West Madison street, where Mr. Pixley and Mr. Ehlers personally installed most of the equipment. The cost of the first establishment did not exceed $1,000 and the number of customers they served daily did not exceed 200.

With the opening of the new restaurant, Mr. Pixley states, they will be serving in excess of ten million customers yearly. The latest addition to the chain will be the twelfth Pixley & Ehlers establishment. W. H. Ames of L. M. Willis & Co. represented Pixley & Ehlers. Fred McGuire represented the owners of the building.

STOVER OFFICES AND SERVICE DEPT. MERGED

Combination of the general offices and the shop, installation and service departments of the Stover company, the local distributing unit for the Frigidaire company, a division of General Motors, has just been completed with their installation in the four story building at 219-29 East North Water street. This property adjoins the Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. building on the east and was leased from them for eight years by Edward E. Levy, vice president of the Stover company.

The four story warehouse, which is 463½ feet long and 120 feet wide on the north, contains approximately 202,000 square feet of floor space. It has been entirely remodeled from plans by Graham, Anderson, Probst & White, with some of the space converted into attractive office quarters, decorated in light green.

The general offices of the Stover company have been moved north from Randolph and Michigan. The present display rooms, however, will continue to be maintained at that point. The other departments were moved from the North Terminal pier.

BENNETT AVENUE DEAL.

Mrs. Mary McGetrick has exchanged the three flat building at 7847 Bennett avenue for the two apartments owned by Mark P. Boyle at 7835 Bennett avenue. According to Harry Foreman of the Charles Ringer company, broker in the deal, the three flats were valued at $39,000 and the two at $16,500.

LABOR FAVORS "BUY ILLINOIS GOODS" POLICY

Spend Within State, Scheck Urges.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Harry E. Scheck, head of the Trades Union Label league, announces that the Illinois labor movement is supporting the program of the Buy Illinois Products commission which has been appointed by Gov. Emmerson to promote the sale of Illinois made goods.

HARRY E. SCHECK.

Scheck, who is a member of the commission, stated that every dollar spent for the products of labor created in Illinois helps pay the workingmen of the state for their services. He pointed out that the workers patronize Illinois business and professional men with their money.

"These men," said Scheck, "in turn spend it for products created largely by Illinois labor and thus is established a circle of beneficial activity of mutual good to industry, the professional men and labor alike.

"It is a fact there are some things we use that are not produced in Illinois. We want to establish a plan of friendly exchange that will be most beneficial to the people of our state. Our big market for Illinois products is the Illinois home market. The best way to spend Illinois money is to buy Illinois made products."

The Buy Illinois Products commission was created by the last general assembly to stimulate business by promoting the sale of all classes of home products. It has been indorsed by labor, the Illinois chamber of commerce, and the Illinois Agricultural association. When he appointed the members of the state commission Gov. Emmerson said:

"As long as I am governor, favorable consideration will be given all Illinois products in the purchase of material and supplies for the state."

LARGE RAIL BODY LEASES OFFICES IN BUCKINGHAM

Willoughby & Co. report the closing of a number of important leases in the new Buckingham building at 59 East Van Buren street. Office space has been taken by the American Railway association, one of the largest of its kind in the world. The association has a membership of 749 railways operating more than 350,000 miles of track in the United States, Canada and Mexico. The Vacuum Oil company also has taken an important amount of floor space for office purposes.

NEW YORK FIRM RENTS SPACE ON NORTH MICHIGAN

Another New York firm comes to Michigan avenue. The latest is the Skinner-Hill company, which has leased a showroom in the Decorative Arts building, Michigan avenue and Ontario street, for five years. The firm deals in lighting fixtures, mantels, glassware, silverware and pottery—practically all English merchandise. McMenemy & Martin, Inc., were brokers.

LAWRENCE AVENUE LEASE.

Samuel Bernstein has leased the store at 4407 Lawrence avenue, in the Lawrence-Kostner building, for five years, for a dry goods store. Joseph Sweeney of the Apartment Selection Service, Inc., was broker.

News of the Architects

Walter W. Ahlschlater, Inc., has moved from the building he occupied for several years at the southwest corner of Rush and Huron streets to the fifteen story Putnam building, 10 North Clark street.

ANNA SOCATCH LEASES STORE IN MICHIGAN SQUARE

Murray Wolbach reports a number of new tenants have been secured for the Michigan Square building, occupying the block bounded by Michigan, Ohio, Rush and Grand, with a number of leases now under negotiation. Among the latest leases closed is that with Anna Socatch, who sells de luxe eatables to gold coast residents.

Anna Socatch opened her bakery and confectionery at 3136 Broadway thirteen years ago and five years ago she opened a branch in the Allerton house to serve Streeterville and contiguous territory.

Hogan & Farwell, renting agents for the building, state that five shops have been leased on Rush street. Among the newcomers in the office part of the building they list the following: The Hedrich Blessing Studio, photographers; Illidela corporation, perfumers; John B. Baumgarth company, calendar advertising; Arthur O. Backen, commercial artist; Conner & O'Connor, architects; Benjamin Weiss, beading and embroideries, and the Western Railway association.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

AS SPRING NEARS FANCY OF NATION TURNS TO HOMES

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Home owners and prospective home owners the country over share one thing in common with the proverbial "lover." In the spring their fancy—and their whole souled attention—becomes fixed on the subject of their affection, which is their home or their home to be.

months plans and specifications will be drawn on paper, later to evolve into cherished creations of brick or frame, stucco or stone. Also at the same time many homes already standing will have lavished upon them various and sundry modernizations.

Today will be discussed a very modern and lovely type of wainscoting for the kitchen and bathroom.

Sometimes this finish is described briefly as structural glass. It is indeed a vitreous material, composed of rocks, silica, metals, and other mineral elements. These, melted under tremendous heat, are rolled into slabs of various thicknesses and then subjected to additional processes which give to them a high degree of hardness and density, combining the desirable qualities of glass and porcelain. This fire polished surface, of infinite durability, has colors which are permanent and resist changes from cleaning, acid staining, etc.

In Bright Colors.

So beautifully have our modern kitchens blossomed out in the gayest and loveliest of color schemes that it is hard to realize that drudgery dwells therein or that they were ever remotely related to the dreary, dingy affairs of the past.

The evolution of the bathroom has been quite as startling as that of the kitchen. Through a period of gleaming whiteness these two rooms have finally emerged to showy spots of really amazing beauty.

When we build our home or remodel our existing one our ideals of permanence and beauty are more or less crystallized according to our means and taste. This former is more or less a vexed factor, but the latter requires the substantiation of correct information regarding possible materials at our disposal.

Has Many Uses.

The cost of this vitreous material is approximately that of tile. Colors are now available in ivory, white, blue, orchid gray, black, jade green, and dark green. Many color combinations are possible, as can be imagined, within this range, and other colors are being constantly developed.

This vitreous material may be used for walls and ceilings and wainscoting—wherever, indeed, one would use the conventional marble, plaster or tile.

A splendid accompaniment this for the colorful equipment now on the market and the equally colorful plumbing fixtures everywhere seen.

If one feels one cannot afford entire walls and ceiling of this material its cost is low enough for it to be used as wainscoting in the very modest home. It also appears as top slabs of real beauty for work tables, bath tub facings, ventilating hoods, radiators, and radiator grilles. Immune to acid stains, it does not absorb odors or grow dull; its flintlike surface prepared to withstand any attacks save those of malicious destruction.

Used in Living Rooms.

This material is appearing in other rooms of the home than the kitchen and bathroom. Its richly gleaming surface reacts to more formal furnishings and decorations as well as to the informal. Incidentally, it is claimed that the new concealed radiation stands up with this structural glass covering.

If desired, the surface can be given distinctive decorations by sand etching processes in modern designs. In the entrance vestibule as well as in the sun parlor or breakfast room or dining room, this material appears. A practical and artistic possibility of real beauty and worth in the home today.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Getting Enough Heat

"Dear Mrs. Bargelt: How is boiler capacity and amount of radiation estimated by the heating contractor? We live in a suburb and have always suffered from insufficient heat in our house. We are going to have a new boiler installed and add some radiation and expect to burn oil. Just how are estimates made that one may be sure a house is warm enough?

WORRIED SUBURBANITE.

Answer—Where a certified heating installation is made the boiler capacity and amount of radiation necessary is checked by an engineer employed by the local association. So accurate and careful is this basis that contractors and engineers even go so far as to consult weather bureau records to learn the lowest and the average winter temperatures and the prevailing winds.

Then the cubic contents of the house is computed, room by room, necessary allowances are made for heat losses, and the chimney size and draft conditions are taken into consideration. With these facts the contractor arrives at the amount of radiation necessary—that is size and number of radiators—and from this figure also arrives at the size of the boiler which is necessary.

Science has succeeded guesswork in the installation of hot water systems. If there is no certified heating contractor in your neighborhood or community, choose a contractor with a good reputation and much the same method of procedure will be followed.

FARM and GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

SPRING IS TIME TO TRANSPLANT ALL EVERGREENS

Have Full Season to Take Root.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Spring is a favorable season for transplanting all varieties of evergreens. They can be moved with little setback up to the time when new shoots are starting, and even later, by experienced planters, though it is sometimes necessary to pinch off part of the new shoots which otherwise might wilt.

After being moved in the spring, an evergreen has a long period of favorable weather in which to become established. The hazards of the midsummer heat and drouth may be as great as those of a winter season, but it is easier for the garden owner to overcome them. The most common cause of loss in evergreens is dryness; and newly planted specimens should be watched during dry periods.

The roots of any newly planted tree or shrub penetrate a relatively small section of soil, which may easily become dry. Until the plant has had time to develop new and longer roots, capable of foraging for food and moisture to a considerable distance, it needs special attention, and sometimes frequent watering. This applies to deciduous plants as well as evergreens.

Evergreen should be dug with a ball of earth about the roots, and this earth should be kept well moistened throughout shipping and planting and after planting. The shorter the time between digging and planting the better. If it is not convenient to water frequently after planting, a mulch of hay or straw will retard drying out and lessen the amount of water required.

The permanence of an evergreen in a given location depends upon the variety, authorities agree. Too often varieties are purchased because the buyer admires their appearance without careful inquiry being made as to their hardiness in the locality where they are to be planted. This is a question upon which expert knowledge should be sought.

In some sections only the hardiest varieties can be counted upon to survive; while in others there is a much wider choice, owing to more favorable soil and climatic conditions. In the east and south the beautiful broad leaf and azaleas, are available, which seldom succeed in the north central states. But one can have beautiful and permanent evergreen plantings everywhere, if he chooses the varieties that are happy in his locality.

FOUNDATION PLANTINGS.

Will you please tell me what the term foundation plantings means?—S. H. L.

REPLY.

Any plantings about the foundation of a building may be termed foundation plantings. Some of their functions are to cover up unsightly foundations, to help to tie the building to the grounds, to secure some measure of privacy, and to minimize somewhat the effects of the sharp and straight lines of the building.

Listed Investment Trusts Experience Rise in Popularity

LONDON MARTS FIND NOTHING TO CHEER OVER

Get No Leadership from Wall St.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

(Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The atmosphere of the London stock exchange these days is not entirely conducive to cheerfulness. The market has been more monotonous and depressed, with pessimism peeping out of every corner. Public support is lacking, the brokers and dealers are asking one another ruefully where their friends of the good old days have disappeared to. Wall street was a disappointment in failing to provide any definite leadership, despite reports of recuperative power. This has been the poorest market week for a long time.

A fresh outbreak of liquidation in several directions discouraged the dealers, the investment market having to contend with a certain amount of throwing over of good stocks to provide for underwriting commitments of recent issues. The dealers now have very little stock on their books, consequently even the smallest amount of buying may cause the price to rise in some of the leading departments such as foreign bonds, the best of the rubber share group, and the Canada railway group. This suggests that the market position is favorable and, should a good buying position develop unexpectedly, intending purchasers may find that they have lost the last train.

Favorites Seem Grounded.

Prices on many speculative investment favorites appear about grounded. Although there is little on the financial horizon to indicate that a fresh general stimulus will materialize in the near future, reliable market interests insist that most of the sections are ripe for a recovery. But it is unlikely that the public will return to the markets until the intention of Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, are revealed on budget day in April. Business men appear to be more concerned over this year's budget than they have in many years past.

There are a few optimists, however, who insist that the budget fears are exaggerated, arguing that the conditions of Great Britain's staple industries, coupled with the increasing unemployment figures suggest that the Labor chancellor and his cabinet colleagues would regard it unpolitic to impose any fresh disturbance to industry now by adding fresh taxation burdens on the already overloaded industries.

See Further Bank Rate Cut.

There is some encouragement for the belief of a further reduction in the bank rate in the near future. At present this may appear to represent an unduly sanguine view, having a regard for the low level of the sterling-dollar exchange and the fact that for some weeks Germany has obtained virtually all the available bar gold on the open market. Germany, however, has only acquired the gold because the Bank of England shows a restraint from bidding above its statutory buying figure. But although Germany has bought large amounts of gold, the rate of exchange continues to favor that country. One reason for anticipating the possibility of a lower bank rate here is the belief that the British treasury desires to see the interest rates at a still lower level in order to assist the trade, which at present is badly in need of a helping hand. The idea is abroad, therefore, that a four per cent bank rate will come sooner than expected.

Weakness of Sterling.

The weakness of sterling in terms of dollars is attributed to the substantial sales of francs in the London market with the transfer of French balances from London to New York. How long this movement will continue is uncertain, but it has resulted in a marked depreciation in the value of francs in America, bringing the possibility of gold shipments from Paris to London very likely in the near future. The fall of sterling in New York has adversely affected some of the principal continental quotations, the rates of exchange in Belgium, Holland, Italy, and Switzerland having moved against London.

Despite the extremely easier money conditions, the gilt edged stocks are more than usually dull following scenes of forced selling. Consols and conversion loans were notably weak, while funding loan and Victory bonds looked friendless with a half year's dividend.

PARIS BOURSE GAINS

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The bourse commenced the week under the same old discouraging dispositions, but curiously enough the government crisis had little effect on prices and in fact the market seemed to regain strength on the ground that any new government would be willing to reduce taxes on French securities.

After successive declines, due largely to inactivity, the market was in a condition of apathy which fails to respond to a political crisis which ordinarily brings sharp reductions and on the other hand many traders were inclined to support the market as they believe the new finance minister will favor stock market operations by reducing heavy taxations.

The weekly statement of the bank of France made up to Feb. 14 showed a further increase in gold and silver holdings.

Finds Farm Relief Roots Overlooked

BY SCRUTATOR.

The strange thing about farm relief is not that it is being attempted, but that the methods used are not directed to the roots of the problem and are seemingly designed to destroy such advantages as agriculture has in the present marketing arrangements.

It has been pointed out here before that no cure can come from merely getting a few cents more per bushel for grain or per pound for animals. The real questions to be solved are: How many men, women and children can be economically used in producing farm products and how much land they require for the work.

Probably it will be conceded that there are more farmers now than the world requires. It is freely admitted by even the proponents of relief by artificial means that there is too much land of the poorer type in cultivation in the United States. Eminent economists like Prof. Richard T. Ely of the Institute for Research in Land Economics and Public Utilities recognize that the poor farmer farming poor land must eventually be taken from the land and put in other employment.

Recommend Land Transfer.

The federal farm board and the secretary of agriculture have recommended the transfer of much land of submarginal character to forestry. Our agriculturists have been warned by the board that they must decrease production of certain crops, notably cotton, to make possible better prices in the next year or two.

These cuts in production would of course result in higher prices if they were adopted, which all experience shows they will not be. There would still be the problem of finding something for the farmers who cut acreage to do. If they merely idled in the time they ordinarily would be working all society would be the loser.

It is, to be sure, argued that men who grow cotton should do more dairying and the men who are growing wheat should try some other crop. But there is evidence that dairying will soon be as overdone as it is now believed wheat and cotton are overdone. It appears now that it will be impossible to find any form of farming that will permit a high standard or even a good standard of living for all the farmers we now have, even if we could make scientific distribution of labor in agriculture.

In the last ten years the farm population shrunk three million persons in the United States. The workers among them went into other work. It was a harsh process attended by considerable suffering; comparable to that which a clothing cutter or a musician must undergo when improved machinery drives them from the old trades into new ones. But it is as inevitable in the one case as in the others—it is a price of progress.

Cites Futile Advice.

It is futile to advise farmers to cut acreages unless some outlet is found for their displaced labor. It is equally futile to urge them to abandon land unless some use is found for that land. Forestry does offer an outlet. The government could take the half billion revolving fund and purchase millions of acres of submarginal land and make it produce enough cellulose, if not of saw logs, to pay out in some way within fifty years. Then men who own that land and are barely existing on it would at least get some little capital to finance ventures in other lines that are looked on as more prosperous.

To urge the farmer to use good machinery that increases his efficiency and then tell him not to grow what he can has one of the elements of the absurd. The big remedy is to find something for the surplus farmers to do in the city and to move them in. Present methods lean to encouraging the opposite tendency; to keep farmers on the farm, contrary to economic destiny.

German Krupp Works Report Peace-Time Profits

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The Friedrich Krupp works, once the largest armament concern in Europe, reports peace time industrial profits for the year ending Sept. 30. Gross profits amounted to 38,160,000 marks and net profits to 10,920,000 marks, all of which was invested in new undertakings of the concern. The report said that steel production had been placed on a new and greatly improved basis by the construction of new blast furnaces at Borbeck. Among recent orders was one from a foreign country for 80 railway engines.

Note Big Shrinkage in Italy's Wheat Imports

One of the most significant pieces of news that the grain trade has encountered recently explaining why foreigners have been indifferent about buying North American wheat, is seen in the imports into Italy for the first six months of this season. The intake totals only 13,700,000 bu as compared with 47,900,000 bu last year, a loss of 34,200,000 bu.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $543,800,000, a decline of $15,300,000 from the preceding week, due to the fact that yesterday was a holiday. The total also showed a decrease of $124,700,000 from the corresponding week in 1929. Balances last week totaled $49,100,000, an increase of $5,900,000 over the previous week, but a decline of $14,300,000 from the same week last year. The figures for the week, day by day (with last three ciphers omitted) follow:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$117,300	$13,000
Tuesday	129,200	13,100
Wednesday	105,700	10,900

Friday	100,400	9,000
Saturday	Holiday.
Total for week	$543,800	$49,100

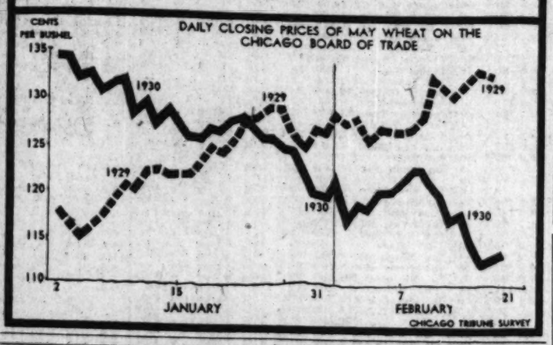
DECLINE IN WHEAT PRICES CONTRASTS WITH ADVANCE A YEAR AGO



STOCK MARKET'S RECOVERY NOW AT CROSS ROADS

Traders Hope Advance Will Be Retained.

BY FRED HARVEY.

(Weekly stock list on page 10.)

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 21.—From all indications the stock market has come to the crossroads in its long sustained recovery movement.

There is a feeling abroad that the list is not entitled to much further progress until it gets some new sign of really substantial business improvement. This is not generally anticipated before spring at the earliest.

Meanwhile the best that impartial observers seem to be hoping for is that the market will continue to hold the ground so far gained, as stubbornly as it has in the face of bear drives and liquidating that has developed from time to time during the last week or ten days.

Since Nov. 13 the main body of stocks has regained well over a third of the losses they sustained in the big slump of October and November, or more than 40 of the 112 or 113 points dropped.

Review Past Performance.

That the advance will be resumed in time no one doubts. Judged by the record of the past it will go a long way when it does start. It always has. In fact recoveries—belated though some of them have been—have invariably carried price levels back to higher averages than they were before.

It was the case in the 1903 break—the so-called "rich man's panic"—the forward movement continuing almost without a serious break for something like a year. It was the case after the world war crash of 1916-'17, although it took about eighteen months for stocks to get back to their old heights. It took even longer to come back after the break following the declaration of peace, but when they got going then they kept on steadily until last autumn setting new tops and ever new ones until the big boom that preceded the crash reached its height.

Maybe the market must go down a bit further before it can get "set" for any further recovery. Many believe that prices in the last few weeks have outrun the improvement in the fields of industry and business and that further readjustments are necessary. Others believe and still more hope that nothing worse than a mere marking of time until the procession can reorganize itself is in store.

Effect of Grain Weakness.

Weakness in the grain markets during the last week have had the effect of dampening bullish sentiment more effectively than any special development in weeks. In fact the commodity price breaks have been about the only genuine bearish happening in the market's news.

True reports from the steel centers of late have indicated that the somewhat roseate reviews of the trade journals have been a bit too encouraging and it is generally conceded that production in the automobile and other industrial fields has not measured up to the more sanguine expectations, but this feeling has been very materially offset up to now by a widespread belief that stocks were entitled to substantial recoveries from their October-November lows regardless of business conditions—that the breaks, in other words were too radical to stand.

START LIVE STOCK FUTURES TRADING NEXT SATURDAY

The Chicago live stock exchange has perfected plans for the inauguration next Saturday of a new form of "farm relief." Actual trading on the first organized market for contracts for the future delivery of live stock will begin at the stockyards exchange March 1.

Created as a merchandising rather than a speculative venture, the new futures market, goal of several previous starts in the same direction at other live stock centers, purposes to offer stockman and processor the chance to absorb the risks of price fluctuations by "hedging."

Charles A. Wilson, president of the exchange, said today he expects trading in hog futures to wipe out much of the heavy losses necessitated by the short sighted buying and selling for cash in the yards.

"At times you have seen thousands of underweight half fat hogs sacrificed at a ruinous price through fear of the future," he said, "while a preview of the next few months' hog markets would have prevented it. Also you have seen thousands of hogs fed out to excessive weights at a heavy loss when a future market would have plainly indicated the futility of wasting valuable feed.

"Under the plan adopted, every business day will be delivery day at the option of the seller, and by making this practical it is hoped to adopt the future trading system to function successfully on perishable commodities like hogs."

CHICAGO, AURORA & ELGIN ISSUES ANNUAL REPORT

Increasing automobile traffic has been an important factor in reducing the amount of profitable passenger business of the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin railroad, according to the annual report of the company.

Net income for the year ended Dec. 31 was $73,912, compared with $38,047 in 1928. Operating revenues for the year amounted to $2,807,829, against $2,802,845 in the previous year. Operating expenses and taxes for 1929 were $2,550,531, compared with $2,447,298.

Operating revenues of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad company for 1929 were reported as larger than for any previous year. The total was $8,020,762, an increase of $53,576 over 1928. Operating expenses were $5,313,692, a reduction of $14,732. The net revenue was $2,107,070, an increase of $68,308.

Farmer Not Badly Hurt in Grain Slump

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Producers of grain in the United States apparently suffered comparatively little loss as the result of the sensational decline in values that has taken place in the markets of late, owing to the fact that the break came after the bulk of the commercial grain, with the exception of corn, had been marketed and partially consumed.

As a result of the decline of 23c per bu, which has occurred in wheat from the close on Jan. 1, the loss to the producer of this grain is estimated to have been only $13,000,000, based on the quantities regarded on farms at that date, after allowing for seed requirements. On the other hand, speculators and holders of wheat that had left farmers' hands have sustained a loss of over $100,000,000 during the last seven weeks.

The farmer's loss has been limited because the stabilization corporation has been paying a fixed price much above prevailing levels, and this figure is expected to remain in effect the balance of the crop year which ends June 30.

Despite the liquidation in the corn market, the price at the close on the May delivery Friday was only about 9 cents per bu lower than it was on Nov. 1.

Speculator Takes Heavy Loss.

On Nov. 1, May oats closed at 54¾ cents or approximately 11 cents above the present price. Only 14,000,000 bu have been received at terminal markets since that date, showing that the bulk of the grain was marketed at far higher prices than at present. The same is true of rye, which has dropped 36 cents per bu during the same period, and as was the case in wheat, the speculator has taken the greater part of the loss on the grain.

All American grain market and stock exchanges were closed yesterday. Foreign markets were wide open, with a bearish feeling on grains. The close was at the inside prices with Winnipeg wheat 2⅛ to 3⅛c lower. Liverpool wheat opened ¼d higher on March, ¼d lower on May and unchanged for July. At the close net losses were ⅝ to ¾d, July leading. Expectations are that the Liverpool market Monday is due to come ¼d higher to ¼d lower on wheat. Buenos Aires wheat closed at $1.02⅝ for March, being unchanged for the day, May $1.04⅝, off ⅛c. Corn for March, 50⅝c, a break of ½c, May 60⅜c, off ⅝c; oats for March, 28⅜c, unchanged with weather clear. Winnipeg oats were off around ⅜c; barley, ⅝c to ⅞c lower; rye ⅞c to 1c lower.

Chicagoans Sellers.

Chicago operators were sellers of wheat in Winnipeg early and buyers later, but their operations were not heavy. The market had a draggy appearance.

There were no reports of export business, and, with American markets closed, Winnipeg advices said there was an absence of support coming from that direction, with very little news and export sales small and mostly from the Pacific coast ports. At the same time there were inquiries for different grades of cash wheat, but only occasional cars changed hands as holders maintain an indifferent attitude regarding present bids.

New York, Feb. 22.—An increase in the popularity of investment trust common stocks which are preceded by large outstanding issues of bonds or preferred stocks, was indicated this week in the movement of the issues of the twelve investment companies which are listed on the New York stock exchange.

The common stocks of trusts which have large issues of bonds or preferred stocks were generally in demand, on the theory that the capital represented by these securities would be working for the common stock if the American security markets should move higher during the next year or two.

As a result of the demand for these common stocks, the discount at which they were selling in comparison with their market price at the beginning of 1930 has been eliminated in many cases, and several trust stocks are selling at a premium.

Table Shows Gains.

The following table shows the gains made since Jan. 1 by the twelve investment trust common stocks which are listed on the New York stock exchange:

Some investment trust executives ascribe the premium at which their stocks are selling to a feeling among investors that the management of the company is sufficiently competent to insure large earnings over a period of years. During the investment trust boom of 1929, when many issues sold at two or three times their liquidating value, this explanation of the high prices was frequently advanced. Several bankers declared at the time that investment trust issues which had the benefit of eminently competent management should sell on the basis of earnings like industrial companies rather than on liquidating or asset values.

Valued on Asset Basis.

While several authorities have endeavored to revive this theory recently as a result of the advance of investment stocks, most bankers identified with the investment trust movement are inclined to evaluate trusts on the basis of asset value rather than on earnings. These bankers declare that only after a trust has demonstrated its ability to show exceptional profits over a period of ten years or more would investors be justified in evaluating its shares on the basis of earnings. In England, where investment trusts have been in existence for more than fifty years, investment trust common stocks usually sell within a range of 10 per cent of their asset value, some selling above this figure, and others below it.

Where the capital structure of a trust is considered to be unusually favorable to the common stock, however, there is a valid reason for the issue to sell above its liquidating value, the bankers declare. They cite several trusts which have large issues of bonds or debentures which bear interest at rates running as low as 4 per cent.

In contrast with the policy of most American investment trusts, which now make public the complete list of their investments, the Metropolitan Trust company, Ltd., a British investment trust, will adhere to its policy of not disclosing its portfolio, according to an announcement made by Robert Fleming, head of the company, at the thirty-second annual meeting of the company.

Offerings of Bond Issues Sag Sharply

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 22.—A sharp decrease in new offerings of bonds occurred this week in virtually all classifications. The aggregate for the week was $64,952,000, compared with $152,165,000 last week, and was the smallest weekly total for the year but one, the week ended Jan. 10, when only $46,582,000 of new bond issues were marketed. During the corresponding week last year the total was $116,717,000.

Net included in this week's total of new offerings is the issue of $50,000,000 United States government non-interest bearing bills, due May 18, 1930, which were purchased by the Marine Trust company of Buffalo but not formally placed on the market. It was said, however, a percentage of the issue was placed privately on a 3.164 per cent basis.

Largest Issue.

The largest single piece of financing this week was that of $16,000,000 Pacific Northwest Public Service company convertible debenture 6s, which were offered by a group headed by Harris, Forbes & Co. at a price of 99½. The next largest issue was that of $15,000,000, Shawinigan Water and Power company 5s, a Canadian corporation, which were brought out at 98 to yield 5.10 per cent by a syndicate headed by Aldred & Co.

Offerings by groups of this and last week follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Public utility	$ 24,500,000	46,865,000
Foreign	22,490,000	52,900,000
State and municip.	13,762,000	24,400,000
Industrial	2,500,000	3,000,000
Railroad	1,700,000	25,000,000
Total	$64,952,000	$152,165,000

Municipals Shrink.

There was a decided falling off in the number of municipal loans marketed this week, with the bulk of the new municipal financing consisting of a single issue, viz., an issue of $10,670,000 City of Newark, N. J., 4½ per cent bonds, due 1932 to 1970, and issued for various purposes. The issue was offered by a group managed by the Bankers' company of New York at prices to yield 4.30 per cent.

EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE HAS BIG ASSET GAIN

At the annual meeting of the directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, the seventieth annual statement was approved, including an appropriation of $50,620,000 for distribution to policyholders this year in dividends. In his annual report President Thomas I. Parkinson announced that the assets of the company as of Dec. 31, 1929, totaled $1,179,391,164, an increase of $102,267,531 over the preceding year.

The new insurance paid for in 1929, including group insurance, was $1,041,690,436. The total outstanding insurance on the books of the company on Dec. 31 was $6,760,922,525, an increase of $573,763,636 for the year. A little over $152,470,000 was paid to policyholders and beneficiaries during the year, $61,550,000 in death claims, and $90,920,000 to living policyholders. President Parkinson also reported that $114,950,000 was invested for policyholders during the last year at an average yield of 5.66 per cent.

SEE CHANGE IN ATTITUDE OF BIG RAILROADS

Merger Acceptance Would Note Break.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 22.—Acceptance by the managements of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific of the plan for merging their roads, devised by the interstate commerce commission, would mean that in both the west and east the consolidation plan of the commission had made a break in the attitudes of the carriers.

In the east, for example, the Baltimore and Ohio is prepared to accept the commission's plan, insofar as it applies to the B. & O., although the B. & O. naturally is opposed to the fifth trunk line plan of the Wabash.

The plan of the commission for the northern roads, presumably, will placate the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific. The Milwaukee would have access to Spokane, Portland and intervening points over the Spokane, Portland and Seattle, under the commission's plan.

Burlington Chief Problem.

The chief problem in carrying out the commission's plan for the Northerns, is the disposal of the Burlington. In his dissent, Joseph B. Eastman, commissioner, said:

"The practicability of really divorcing the Burlington from the Northern lines, is, in itself, a matter of grave doubt. Its stock is now pledged under the mortgages of both roads."

Mr. Eastman held that if a purchaser of the Burlington was found it would no doubt be a holding company, devised by a friendly interest. Stock in the Burlington could be distributed to Northern shareholders, but whether this method would suit the commission remains in doubt.

As to the east, it now appears that the Baltimore and Ohio and also the Chesapeake and Ohio will soon come forward with plans in conformity to the commission's consolidation plan. This does not mean that the two railroads are reconciled to the fifth trunk line headed by the Wabash which the commission devised. They are expected by railroad men to oppose this system, but meanwhile to accept what the commission granted them.

A definite move by the B. & O. is expected to be deferred until settlement of the Western Maryland case. The B. & O. now controls the Western Maryland, but under the Clayton anti-trust law, the commission has ordered it to divest itself of this control. The B. & O. was given six months to arrange this divestment.

Short Lines No Obstacle.

The short lines in the northern territory provide no apparent obstacle to the merger. The commission provided that they be acquired on the lines prescribed in the authorization of the New York Central merger. The New York Central has arbitrated or otherwise provided for most of the short lines in its territory and it recently put its merger into effect.

The plan of the commission for the northerns also meets the demands of shippers and other interests in the west and northwest. These interests objected to the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington all being united, the objection being that such an arrangement would reduce competition. The commission, apparently, had this in mind when it devised its system of consolidation, which placed the Burlington at the head of a separate system.

Demand Chicago Entrance.

The chief objection of the northern roads to non-inclusion of the Burlington would be the lack of a suitable entrance into Chicago. In the view of railroad men, provision of suitable trackage rights might cause the northern managements to accept the commission's plan. In this case, a system with road and equipment worth more than one billion dollars would be provided. Mileage would exceed 15,000 miles.

The Sheridan Trust Safe Deposit company will erect a twelve story bank and office building at the southeast corner of Lawrence and Broadway. As soon as it is finished the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank, now at 4738 Broadway, will move across the street and will occupy the entire second, or banking floor, and the Sheridan Trust Safety Deposit company will occupy the basements for vaults. The new building, designed by Marshall & Fox, will cost about $1,000,000.

John R. Thompson has sold to Catherine Feehan the property at the northwest corner of Central avenue and Washington boulevard, 150 x 178 feet, the consideration being given at $10, but the price is $15,000. This is to form the site for a high school for girls to be conducted by the Sisters of Mercy. The school building will be five stories high and will cost $100,000. Cremin & O'Connor negotiated the deal.

Pasquale Schiavone, the Italian banker, whose alleged loss of over $40,000 through the peculations of a crippled daughter was the subject of recent court proceedings, has sold two pieces of property owned in South Halsted street. One parcel is 75 feet south of Taylor street and the other is 75 feet north of De Koven street. The lots are 25x100 feet and are occupied by brick business buildings.

To Feb. 23, 1900; 30 Years Ago Today

The announcement during the week by the trustees of the Chicago institute, which Mrs. Maine is founding opposite Lincoln park at North Park and Belden avenues, that plans have been completed for the erection of the school buildings and that work will start at an early date, has had the effect of stiffening land values in that vicinity. Dunlap Smith, who negotiated the sale of the property, says that the new educational institution on the north side will attract people to that part of the city the same as the University of Chicago caused people to secure residences on the south side.

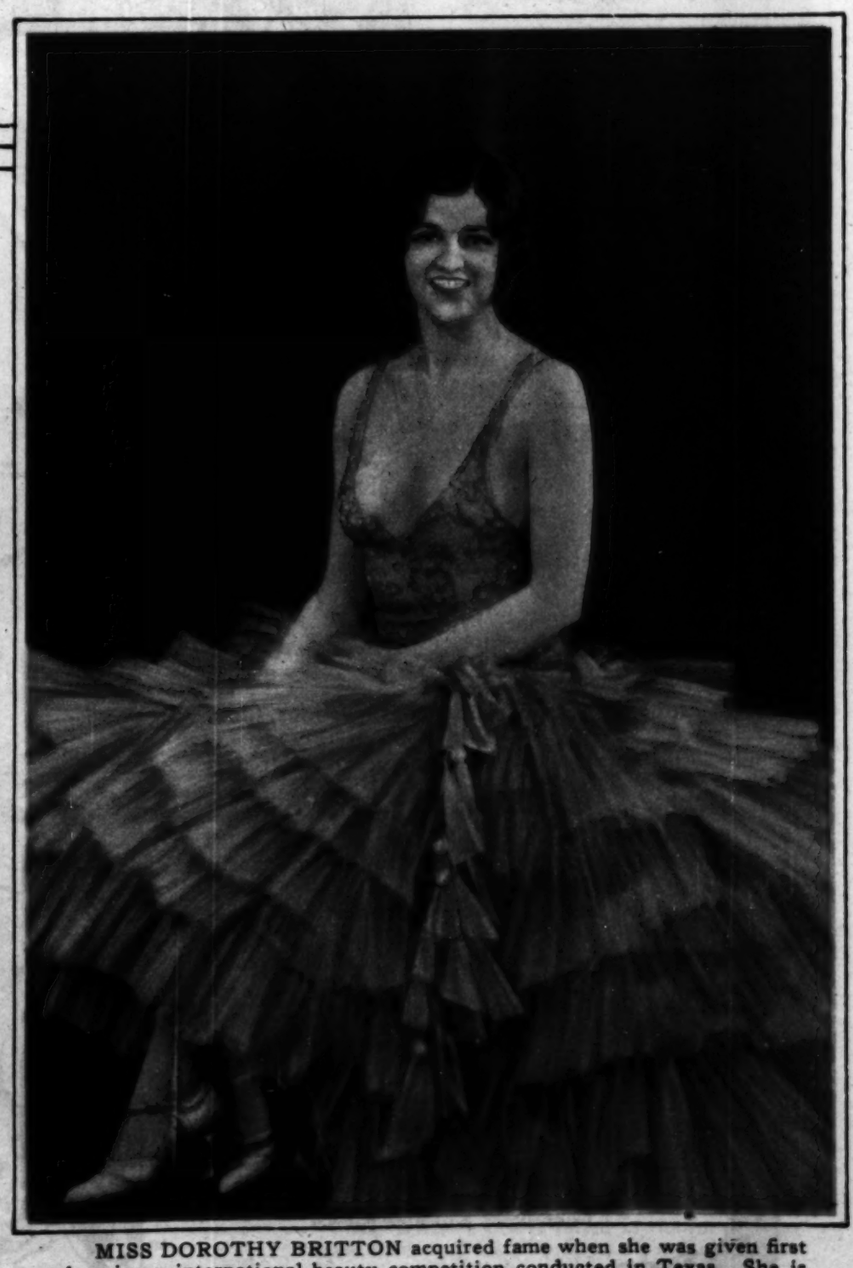
FROM THE BEAUFORT HUNT SET, giving a graphic idea of the thrills of the chase, is this one, entitled "Crossing the River Avon." Engraved by Henry Alken after the painting by W. P. Hodges, it is among the old English sporting prints on exhibition at Carson Pirie Scott's galleries.

MISS BERNA DEANE is now the prima donna of "Nina Rosa." She has sung in Chicago in recent seasons in "The Vagabond King" and in "The Love Song."

W. C. FIELDS is through with Hollywood for a while and is back where the critics think he belongs; that is, in extravaganza and revue. He has recently been in Chicago with Earl Carroll's "Vanities."



MISS DOROTHY BRITTON acquired fame when she was given first place in an international beauty competition conducted in Texas. She is now the leading woman of Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

Cremed magnesia beautifies the skin in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach

The newest discovery in beauty culture is that cremed magnesia beautifies the skin instantly, in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach. This is because skin impurities are acid. Doctors treat acid inside the body with milk of magnesia. And now, dermatologists are getting amazing results in banishing complexion faults with cremed magnesia. All you do is anoint your skin with it, massage and rinse with water. It's as simple as washing your face.

It reduces enlarged pores to the finest, smoothest texture. Being astringent, it drives away the tell-tale signs of age. It rejuvenates the skin so quickly that any woman can look lovely tonight, years younger.

And because it is so mild, it certainly is a blessing for fine, sensitive skins that soap so easily irritates and coarsens. It removes make-up and extracts impurities deep-set in the pores better than soap or cold cream. It changes dull, sallow skin to radiant clearness and fades out freckles better than a bushel of lemons.

Test it on those clogged nose pores that stand out so boldly. Let it whiten your neck. It will also keep your hands soft and white.

Until recently, cremed magnesia was used only by New York doctors' wives and nurses. But now the large druggists everywhere find it hard to keep enough on hand to supply the demand.

10-DAY TRIAL OFFER

To get genuine cremed magnesia, ask for Denton's Facial Magnesia. The regular price is sixty cents and one dollar. But, if you act promptly by using the Trial Offer Coupon below at once, a large demonstration size will be mailed you for only fifty cents. How do you choose your Face Powder

THERE are several things to consider in selecting a face powder—purity, odor, texture, tint, clinging quality and price. Elaborate packages and foreign labels may induce you to spend more money than is necessary, but they have nothing to do with complexion beauty—and the real object of a face powder is to beautify your complexion.

Plough's Face Powder is made of the finest ingredients and is soothing and beneficial to the skin. Soft and smooth in texture, appealingly fragrant, tinted with an artistry that accents Nature's flesh-tones, it clings for hours without renewing, and keeps the complexion smooth, clear and beautiful.

We ask you to try this fine face powder because we believe you will like it. It comes in three sizes, each having a distinctive odor and texture. 30c, 50c and 75c at all dealers.

The WORM that turned!

They say every worm turns . . . sooner or later . . . but the deed was never done more effectively than in the good story "WORM" by Lionel Brown. Sir Marrick Ponsonby had been a first-class worm for many years. But when his wife's relatives drove him to a right-about-face, the reversion was no ordinary battle. It was a rout . . . with the relatives on the run! You'll like very much indeed this story in the woman's section of today's Tribune.

How To Make a Child Drink 50% More Milk

. . . and Make the Milk Itself Doubly Nourishing

A Discovery From Switzerland That Not Only Enables Mothers to Increase a Child's Milk Ration From 50 to 100% But Adds a Complete Food in Itself, Including the Sunshine Vitamin D, to the Milk.

Accept 3-Day Supply

Watch Weight Increase, Nervousness Decrease

IT is not a flavoring for milk. But a complete food in itself that supplements over 18 vital food principles—including the Sunshine Vitamin D—to every glass of milk your child drinks! And makes that milk far easier and quicker to digest.

Its flavor is so different from any food-drink known to American children that it comes as a great and gay adventure . . . a new enticement to the childish appetite.

More milk is thus taken. More important food elements thus added to the diet. And both, without the child's realizing it or resisting it.

Let us send you a 3-day supply. What happens may surprise you. New to America, over 20,000 doctors are advising this new creation from Switzerland. Its use has spread over some 54 different nations.

What It Is

It is a food-drink called Ovaltine—utterly different in formula, taste and effect from any other known. Enticing beyond words to the childish palate, Ovaltine is a scientific food-concentrate; not remotely to be confused with powdered cocoa, chocolate, malt or sugar mixtures offered as substitutes.

Developed 38 years ago by a famous Swiss scientist, Ovaltine contains, in highly concentrated form, virtually every vital food element necessary to life, including, of course, the Sunshine Vitamin D.

Due to an exclusive process, employed by no other food-drink known, it supplies those vital elements in such easily digested form that a child's system will absorb them even when digestion is impaired.

How It Acts

Some of those elements in Ovaltine build bone and muscle. And thus create new strength. Others build firm flesh. And thus constantly increase weight. Others develop nerve poise; for, as weight increases, nervousness perceptibly decreases.

Other elements foster richer blood. And thus combat conditions of anemia. All are supplied in scientific ratio to meet the body's needs. That is why results are often astonishing.*

Digests Starches

Then, too, Ovaltine has high diastatic power. Which means the power of digesting the undigested starches from other foods eaten.

Thus, this scientific creation not only furnishes tremendous food energy in itself, but greatly increases the effectiveness of all starch foods your child eats. Such as oatmeal, bread, potatoes, etc., which comprise over half the normal child's daily diet. Consider what this means.

Results will delight you. Note the difference in your child's weight, in nerve poise, in greater strength and energy. Find out, for your child's sake, what this creation means to you and yours. Give at breakfast, always. Give at meals and between meals. Get Ovaltine at any drug or grocery store, or send coupon for 3-day test.

"Now, he drinks 4 cups of milk a day instead of his unwanted 2"

I sent for Ovaltine to see if I could get my three-year old boy to drink one quart of milk instead of his unwanted two glasses per day. Result, he does drink four full glasses and I am delighted.

Mrs. Anna Sandlofer, 1702 Clay Avenue, New York, N. Y.

"She gained 3½ lbs. in 3 weeks!"

My 4½-year-old daughter was alarmingly underweight for her age following an attack of mumps.

I naturally tried to give her milk to build her up but she refused to take it because she seemed to dislike the taste so much. I was looking around for some way to solve this very difficult problem when I read about Ovaltine and sent for a sample.

I have now been giving my little girl Ovaltine at every meal for 3 weeks. Now she's gained 3½ pounds in 3 weeks. That means that she takes a full quart of milk every day and likes to take it. In fact she asks at every meal for her mug of Ovaltine.

Mrs. Harold Pitts, 1006 G. Ave. W., Cedar Rapids, Iowa

(Note) Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. During the Great War, it was a standard ration prescribed by the Red Cross as a restorative food for invalid soldiers of all nations.*

A LUXURY CREATION—"NECESSITY-PRICED"

The Bird and Fish Store

By W. E. Hill

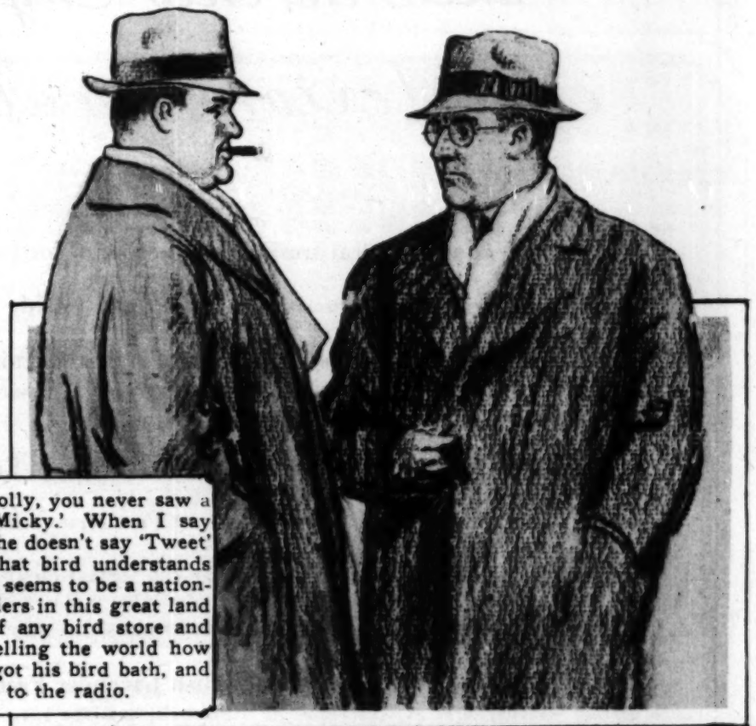
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Grim tragedy. Sarah is bringing her turtles, Daisy and Daphne, back to the fish store man and none too soon. The turtles lived happily at the bottom of Sarah's aquarium among the cute little castles and pagodas until it was discovered that Daisy or Daphne, or both, had eaten a good bit of the tail from off the fan tailed gold fish!

Canary trouble. "I just can't make Oliver take a bath in his bird bath. He hasn't bathed in two weeks and I am afraid he'll get moths or something! A friend of mine says I ought to butter his claws. Can you suggest anything, Mr. Grossbeak?" (This is a sample of what a bird store proprietor has to hear over the telephone from patrons of bird life.)

"Isn't he cute!" Most people who frequent bird and fish stores and crowd around the Brazilian marmoset are unaware that a Brazilian marmoset hates sham and cannot stand the sight of ladies wearing imitation fur. A collar of synthetic summer ermine, or printed leopard, or even reproduction Australian 'possum, will cause a sensitive marmoset to give way to a tantrum lasting for hours.

Outfitting the new aquarium. "If I were you, Laura, I'd have one less gold fish and one more of those dear little pagodas."



The proud owner. "By golly, you never saw a brighter bird than our 'Micky.' When I say 'Tweet' to him, darned if he doesn't say 'Tweet' right back to me. Why that bird understands every word we say!" There seems to be a nation-wide increase of bird fanciers in this great land of ours. Stop in front of any bird store and hark to big strong men telling the world how cute birdie was when he got his bird bath, and how he listens spellbound to the radio.

The parrot scare. Ida, the lovely clerk at the bird and fish emporium, is removing Roy, the parrot, to a less frequented part of the shop during the African parrot fever scare. Roy was born in Louisiana.

Love birds. "They don't seem to be the least bit loving. Only this morning she wouldn't even let him sit with her on the perch—and you sold them to us as certified birds!" Sentimental people who purchase love birds expect an awful lot from them. That is why most bird store proprietors hate to deal in love birds. They know that sooner or later the customers will show up and demand that something be done about making said love birds more affectionate.

Just a song at twilight. Aunt Katie is back at the bird store with a big load of sad tidings. It seems that her canary, Bo Bo, just won't sing a note unless they turn all the water on in the bath tub, and then only towards evening. "And," complains Aunt Katie, "we've fed him pounds of song stimulator."

"BEAUTY THAT RIVALED THAT GLORIOUS ENGLISH DAY"

"Both Dee and her youngest (and by the way, she is now eighteen) were in that inevitable top rail row that is usually dominated by our younger sisters. If she had only affected just a bit more adolescent boredom I should never have detected her. For, true to England, both mother and daughter had complexions that rivaled that glorious English day for clear, fresh beauty."

—From the letters of an English traveler at home.

There is a new and lasting freshness for your skin in this English complexion treatment

FOR THE clear and natural freshness of her skin, for her vibrant color, the English woman is famous throughout the world. It is significant that she uses only a few cosmetics. But it is more significant that those few are invariably the best—Yardley's.

Yardley's English Complexion Cream, Yardley's English Lavender Soap, Yardley's English Lavender Face Powder—here is her effective beauty treatment. Yardley's soap is for the initial cleansing of her face. Yardley's Complexion Cream follows, to coax out any lingering bits of imbedded dust. Then Yardley's English Lavender Face Powder to protect the new and lovely freshness of her skin. Soft, cooling, smooth, and delicately scented, it heightens the natural radiance of her beauty. English Complexion Cream is also a nourishing cream for use at night and a foundation cream for powder. Used as a powder base, it is to be put on liberally and then washed off in cold water. Just enough remains to retain your powder perfectly.

Use Yardley's faithfully. Your mirror will reveal to you a new beauty — sure and poised, but at the same time, unstudied, the sort of beauty that has always been the preference of the gentlewoman. You will find these three attractive Yardley toiletries at your favorite store. Yardley & Co., Ltd., 8 New Bond Street, London; 452 Fifth Avenue at Fortieth Street, New York City. Also Toronto and Paris.

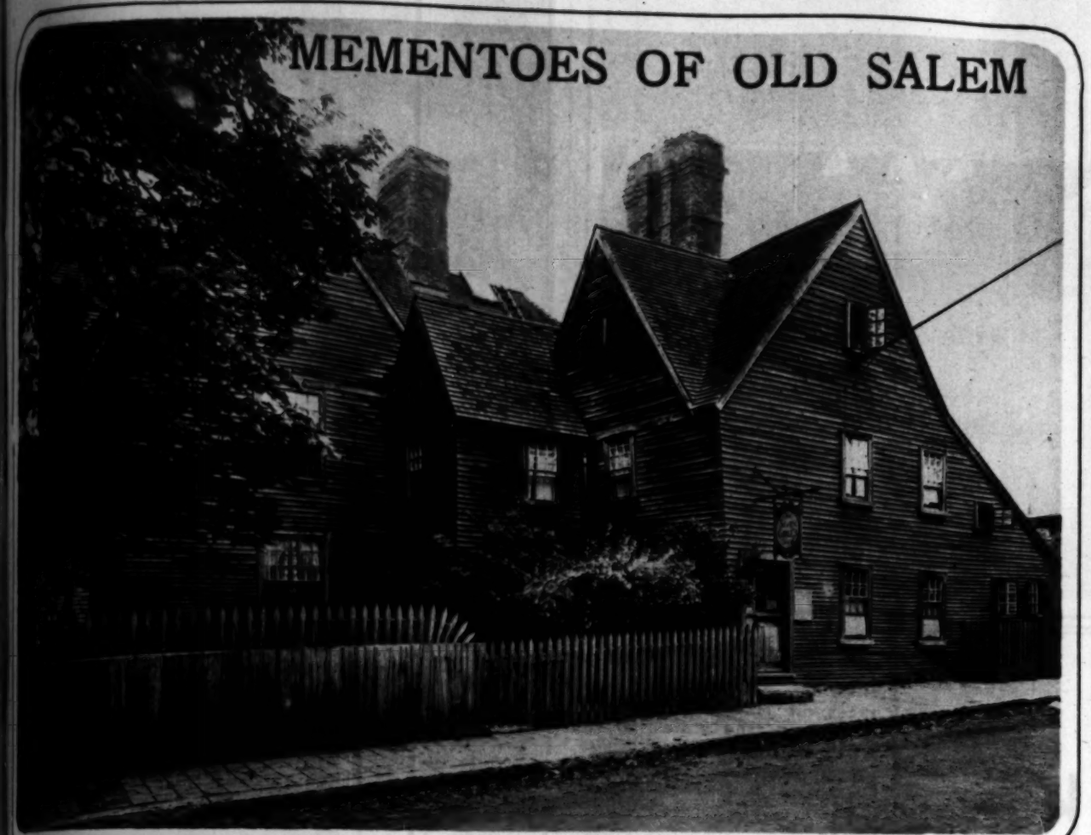
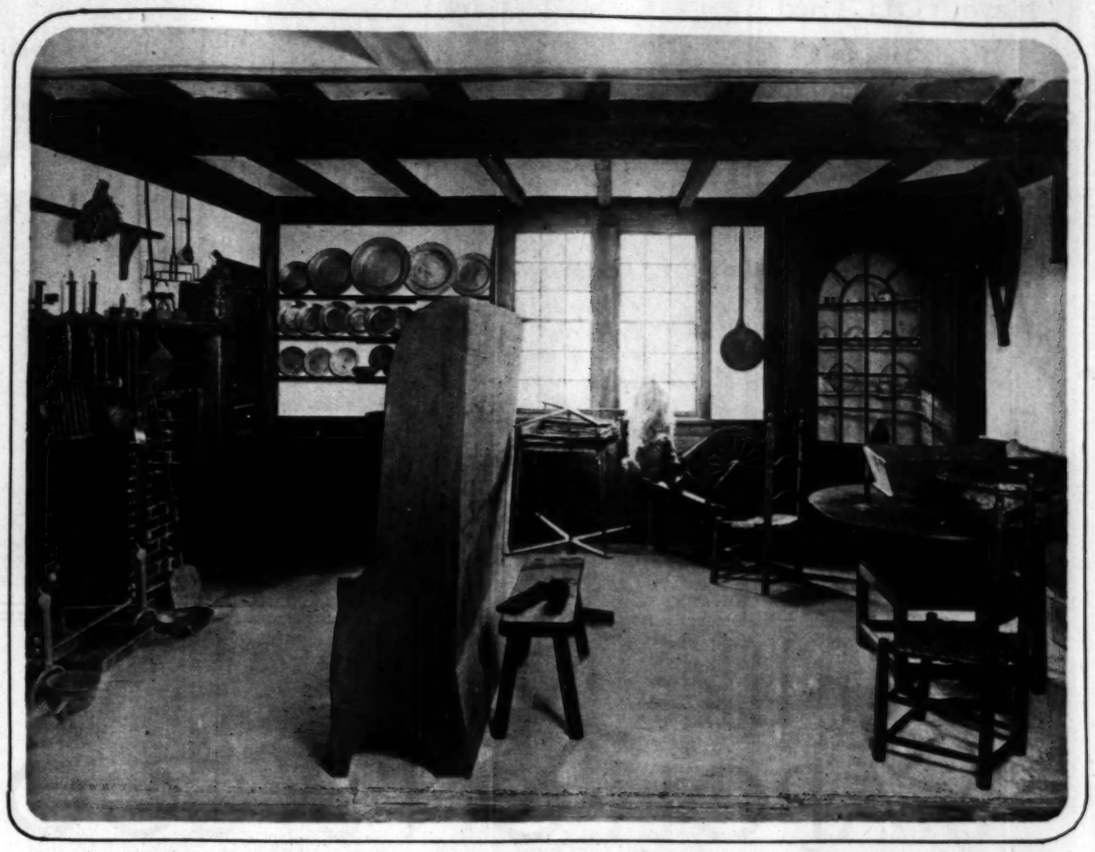
MEMENTOES OF OLD SALEM



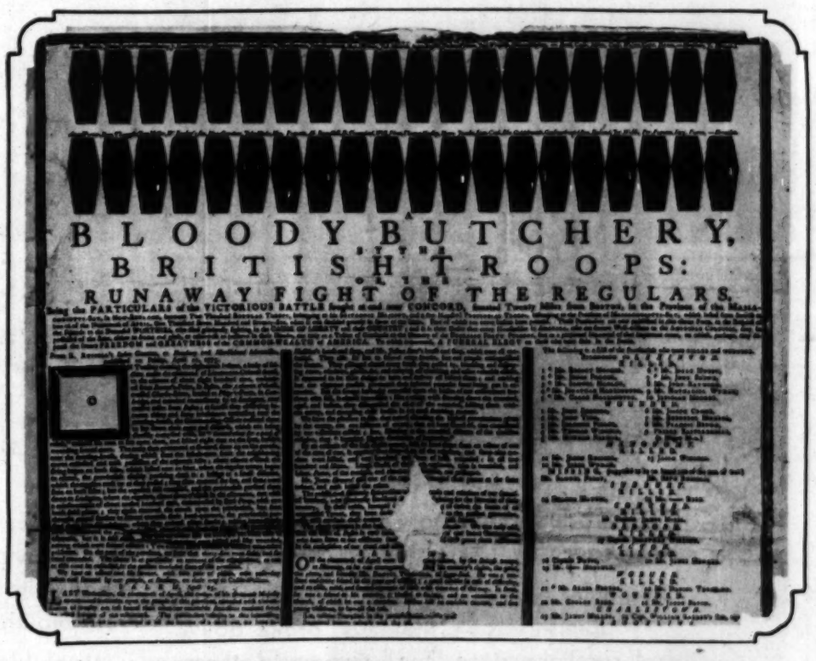
"THE HOUSE OF SEVEN GABLES," around which Hawthorne spun his brooding romance, is one of the meccas for visitors to Salem. The house, built in 1668, stands along the waters of Salem harbor, in which will be held on June 12, the pageant celebrating the 300th anniversary of the arrival of Gov. John Winthrop with the royal charter.



BACK TO COLONIAL TIMES—A typical New England kitchen of the middle of the eighteenth century. The assortment of pewter and utensils, as well as the corner cupboard and the high-backed settle, reflect an interesting arrangement. The picture was taken in the Essex institute's museum at Salem, Mass., and the room will be on exhibition this summer when Salem and its neighbors celebrate the tercentenary of the Massachusetts bay colony.

A TOKEN OF THE PAST, the Derby wharf, built in the eighteenth century and still visible through its ruins. Vast wealth—for that period—was brought in here by ships of the Derby and other fleets, and in the war of 1812 Derby's privateers made the wharf their base. The painting is by Philip Little.

INTERESTED IN ANTIQUES? If so, take a look at the Gov. John Endicott sun dial made by William Bowyer, London clockmaker, in 1630, and now celebrating its birthday anniversary along with that of Massachusetts. The timepiece, reputedly the earliest in New England, was installed by Gov. Endicott on his farm near Salem, but is now in the possession of the institute.



A RARE BROADSIDE, preserving the record of some of the earliest journalism in America. It reported the battles of Lexington and Concord and, at the top, ran the figures of coffins to represent the colonials who lost their lives in those two engagements. It is one of more than 3,000 broadsides owned by the institute in Salem.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY ATMOSPHERE is retained intact in this shoe shop, built in Lynn, ..., prior to 1800, and now standing at Salem. The cobbler's benches, tools, and materials have been ...disturbed, and they give an exact picture of the manner of handicraft practiced before the arrival ...chanized civilization.

THE LEISURED GRACE of old Salem is recalled by this New England parlor of 1800, to be found in the museum of the Essex institute. The mantelpiece was made by Samuel McIntire, and the spinet beyond it, probably the first of its kind in America, was the work of Samuel Blyth. So far as can be determined, the sofa at the right is a Duncan Phyfe example, while the chairs bear evidences of the hand of McIntire.

"Unlike NAPOLEON'S COOK—

I never have to weep over 'nothing new to serve' . . "

Corn Products Refining Co.
New York City

Gentlemen:

Napoleon's cook, they say, broke down and wept, because in all the world, there was "nothing new to serve"—no untried delicacy to tempt the jaded appetite of the master. But that was before Mazola was ever heard of, otherwise, she would have had no cause for worry.

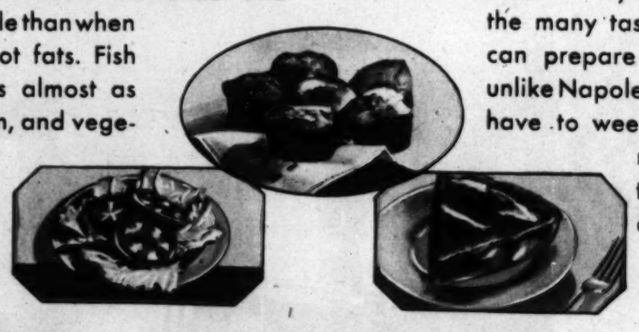
Mazola-made salads are tempting and tasty. Eggs fried in Mazola are tender and much more digestible than when fried in smoking hot fats. Fish fried in Mazola is almost as delicious as chicken, and vegetables sauted or fried in this oil cannot be surpassed—either in taste or appearance.

My biscuits, when made in the old way—"lay heavy on the stomach." Now, when made with Mazola—they simply "melt in your mouth."

My children used to eat the filling from their pie and the dog had the misfortune to get the soggy crusts. Now—with my Mazola made pies, the children eat every crumb of crust, and Pal, like Mother Hubbard's dog—gets none.

I use Mazola for every recipe which calls for butter and find it very economical. With the many tasty dishes which I can prepare from Mazola—unlike Napoleon's cook—I never have to weep over "nothing new to serve" to tempt my family's appetite.

Mrs. N. C. Andersen
Portland, Maine



This interesting letter quaintly describes the unusual adaptability of Mazola to 3 popular uses.

As an exceptionally fine salad oil that makes smoother, more delicious dressings, Mazola is equally fine for all frying. Mazola-fried foods are always tender, tasty and free from grease.

For shortening, many women prefer Mazola for its richness, convenience and economy as well as for perfect baking results.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PRINT PAPER CARRIER, the motor ship Thorold, rights buoyantly from the plunge of its launching in the River Humber at Hull, England. Built for the Ontario Paper company, Chicago Tribune subsidiary, the vessel is to be freighted with the rolls of paper which eventually reach Tribune readers bearing the news of the world. At the left, Miss Eileen Battle, who christened the Thorold. By winning the Thorold personality contest she qualified to break the bottle of champagne at the bow. THE OLD WATER TOWER HOLDS ITS OWN in contrast with modern architectural invasions of the near north side. FAST AND FURIOUS—In one of the most brilliant polo exhibitions ever witnessed at Los Angeles, Argentina's four horsemen of the pampas won the Pacific coast open championship by defeating the Midwicks of Los Angeles, 8 to 7, as 15,000 spectators looked on. The three COMMANDMENTS that Guide our Engineers

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company
Office of Vice-President
Operation and Maintenance

Baltimore, Md., July 1, 1929

FOR THE GUIDANCE OF ENGINEERS HANDLING PASSENGER TRAINS

SAFETY

1. The safety of the train and passengers should have first consideration at all times and in all places. Everything should be subordinated thereto.

COMFORT

2. The train should be handled at all times, and particularly when starting and stopping, so as to promote the comfort of the passengers.

ON TIME

3. Every practicable effort should be made to reduce delays and keep the train on time, but even this should be subordinated always to the safety of the train and comfort of the passengers.

A. Halloway
Vice-President

EVERY mile of our railroad has been scientifically studied, and we know the maximum speed at which a train can be run safely and with comfort around every curve.

But B&O engineers have instructions not to exceed certain fixed speeds. Posted in every engine cab is this general order. The engineer must first deliver his passengers in safety. He must deliver them in comfort. Speed must always be subordinate to safety and to comfort.

A recording device is connected with the engine wheels—locked at the start of each run, and examined at headquarters when the run is over. It shows exactly how fast the train has traveled at every point. If the engineer breaks the commandments, even for a single mile, the record shows it and he is asked to explain.

Our running time compares favorably with that of other roads. But you have the feeling always—at least we try to have you have it—that you are moving smoothly, quietly, seemingly without haste and with a little extra attention all the way.

This is the purpose of our engineers and of the rest of the 70,000 men and women who operate the B&O.

In addition, you may enjoy a good breakfast in the diner before arrival in Pittsburgh.

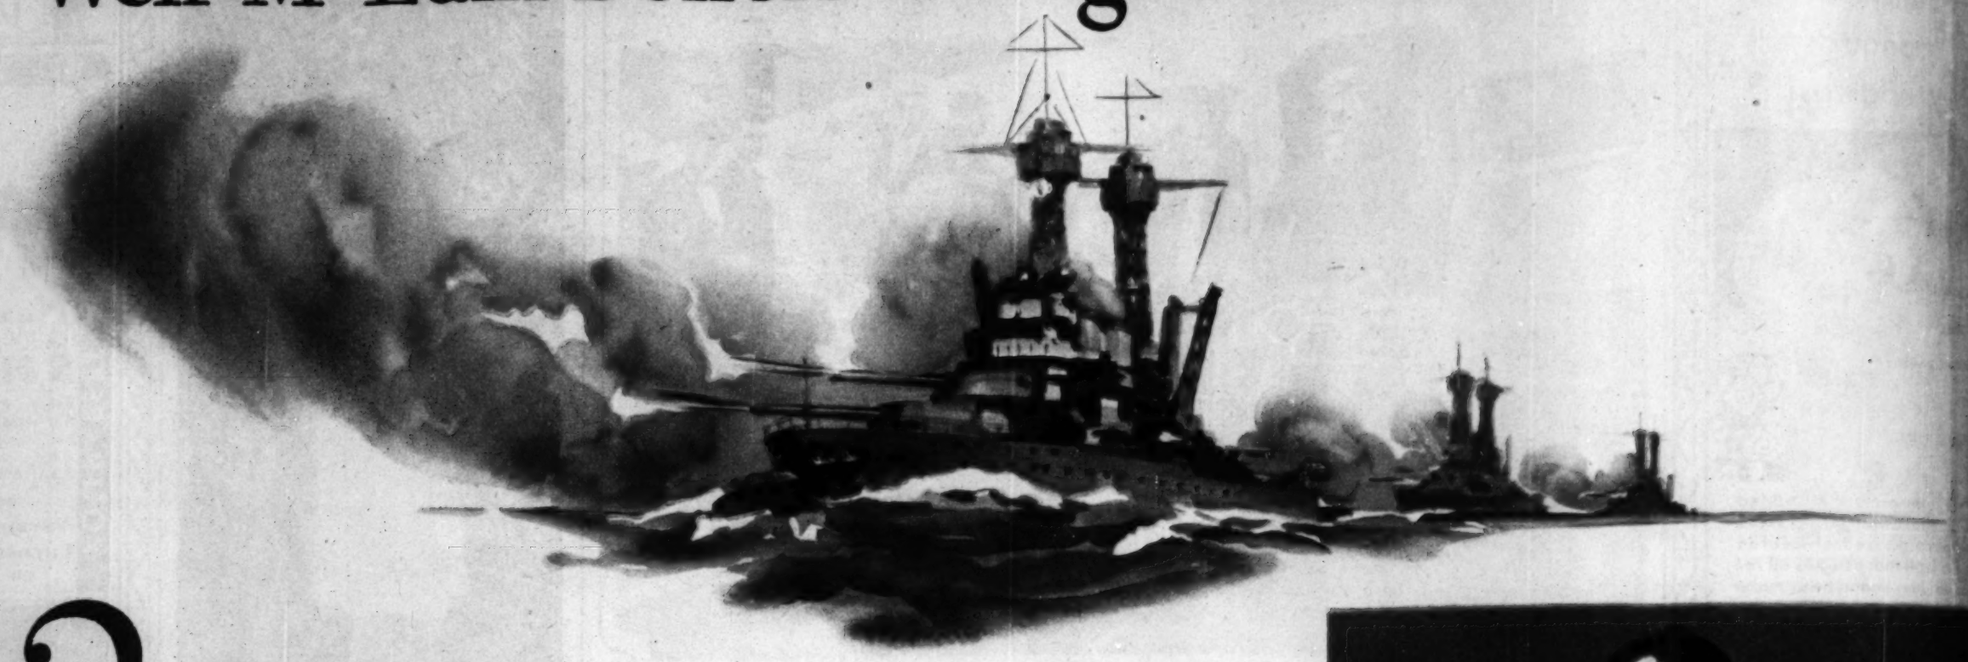
Weil-McLain Boilers are fighters, too!



2 features that fight fuel waste for home owners

Fuel-saving corrugations plus back-and-forth fire travel enable Weil-McLain Boilers to deliver more heat and reduce fuel bills

A battleship in action is a splendid example of man and metal in fighting trim—to defend the nation. Weil-McLain Boilers are fighters, too. They protect home comfort, and fight fuel and heat waste for home owners.

What Weil-McLain fighting features will do for you

A Weil-McLain Round Boiler in your basement will fight high fuel bills. Because its exclusive structural features enable it to fight fuel waste and deliver more heat, it stands guard over your health, your comfort and your pocketbook. It is convenient because it heats efficiently with a minimum of attention.

Fuel-saving corrugations like this ∿∿∿

As an example, Weil-McLain Round Boilers are able to deliver more heat because the heating surface is greatly increased by means of fuel-saving corrugations.

You can readily see that corrugations like this ∿∿∿ crowd 30 to 40 per cent more heating surface into the same space than an ordinary flat surface like this ——— would occupy.

Corrugations greatly increase the heating surface in the crown sheet section directly above the fire where heating surface is most valuable. In addition, all other vital heating surfaces have these same corrugations to absorb more heat and fight fuel waste.

Balanced back-and-forth fire travel

More heat is actually utilized in the Weil-McLain Round Boiler, because Weil-McLain fire travel is not only back and forth between all the corrugated heating surfaces but it is balanced as well. Apertures in the boiler sections through which gases must pass are curved with mathematical exactness, as shown in the diagram below, so that the hot gases travel the greatest distance through the center where the draft is strongest, thus balancing the fire travel and fighting fuel waste up the chimney.

Variations in the rate at which the boiler operates to compensate for changing heat demands do not alter the flow of gases through the flues. There are no short-cuts to the chimney at any time.

Others features that promote fuel economy

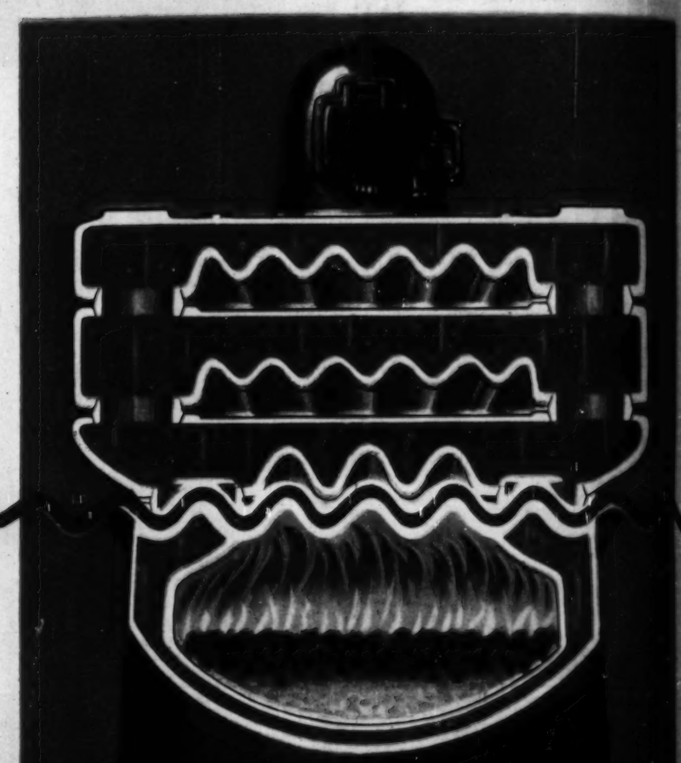
Scientific combustion is a feature common to all Weil-McLain Boilers. Scientific design of the combustion chamber provides more thorough final burning of the fuel. The fire burns bright and clean—and lasts longer.

By utilizing more of the heat in the fuel you burn, more heat is delivered and high fuel bills are reduced.

If you are about to build or are considering a new heating plant, investigate Weil-McLain Boilers. They have been designed not only for the efficient burning of the fuel you have been accustomed to use but with forethought for the burning of oil, coke, the smaller sizes of hard coal and for the smokeless burning of soft coal.

See your heating contractor

There are Weil-McLain Boilers to meet all conditions. For complete information see your heating contractor. Address our nearest distributor for new booklet. Weil-McLain Co., General Offices: 641 W. Lake St., Chicago. Factories and Offices: Michigan City, Ind.—Erie, Pa.



Fuel-saving corrugations absorb more heat from the fire

The fuel-saving characteristics of these Weil-McLain corrugations have been adapted to all Weil-McLain Boilers by placing extra heat-absorbing surface directly above the fire as well as in all other vital heating surfaces—adding materially to their fuel economy.

WANTED—MALE HELP.
Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

ANY MAN WE HIRE PRACTICALLY RUNS HIS OWN BUSINESS

Will you work eight hours every day? Can you sell? If not, we teach you. Have you a clean record? Do you want to put something aside for a rainy day? Do you want to enter work (no investment) that will be permanent for many years to come? Then we want to talk to you.

JOHN B. drove a coal truck; joined us last July and, convinced that he could sell, we taught him. In January he earned $621.

RICHARD D. was a bookkeeper, and decided to get into some other line, saw our advertisement and joined us six months ago. In January just closed he earned over $575.

MR. S. W. H. was a specialty salesman, started with us four years ago, but he was not only "broke," but was $2,100 in debt. He says he would not take $35,000 for his job now. He is out of debt, owns his own home, and recently bought his third automobile.

J. W. was a baker—a hard worker—no selling experience—was very timid about trying this work—now with us two years. His earnings in January just closed were $456.

MR. T. S. was in the employ of a railroad company until he read our ad, joined us less than three years ago and earned in January $583.

F. T. was a farmer with a large family, joined us three years ago, learned our easy method of selling in two days and started earning the very first week. Last month he earned over $300 and has averaged this for over a year.

Our work is different—we have no competition. Our sales plan is simple—easy to learn — no investment — our company a large manufacturer is rated in the millions. We have been in one building over five years, occupying the entire second floor and part of two others. Your associates will be high grade family men, many of whom have been with us from three to five years.

On next Tuesday we go on the air, broadcasting over Columbia network—also full page ads in leading magazines to make your selling easier.

WE WANT:
Office Men,
Machinists,
Electricians,
Special Salesmen,
Stock and Bond Men,
Electric Appliance Men.
Providing they have done good work in any of their lines and feel they can sell, if instructed, and want to make more money and be employed in work permanent the year round.

CALL MONDAY ANY TIME.
If out of city, write for nearest branch.

ANY MAN WE HIRE PRACTICALLY RUNS HIS OWN BUSINESS

Will you work eight hours every day? Can you sell? If not, we teach you. Have you a clean record? Do you want to put something aside for a rainy day? Do you want to enter work (no investment) that will be permanent for many years to come? Then we want to talk to you.

JOHN B. drove a coal truck; joined us last July and, convinced that he could sell, we taught him. In January he earned $621.

RICHARD D. was a bookkeeper, and decided to get into some other line, saw our advertisement and joined us six months ago. In January just closed he earned over $575.

MR. S. W. H. was a specialty salesman, started with us four years ago, but he was not only "broke," but was $2,100 in debt. He says he would not take $35,000 for his job now. He is out of debt, owns his own home, and recently bought his third automobile.

J. W. was a baker—a hard worker—no selling experience—was very timid about trying this work—now with us two years. His earnings in January just closed were $456.

MR. T. S. was in the employ of a railroad company until he read our ad, joined us less than three years ago and earned in January $583.

F. T. was a farmer with a large family, joined us three years ago, learned our easy method of selling in two days and started earning the very first week. Last month he earned over $300 and has averaged this for over a year.

Our work is different—we have no competition. Our sales plan is simple—easy to learn — no investment — our company a large manufacturer is rated in the millions. We have been in one building over five years, occupying the entire second floor and part of two others. Your associates will be high grade family men, many of whom have been with us from three to five years.

On next Tuesday we go on the air, broadcasting over Columbia network—also full page ads in leading magazines to make your selling easier.

WE WANT:
Office Men,
Machinists,
Electricians,
Special Salesmen,
Stock and Bond Men,
Electric Appliance Men.
Providing they have done good work in any of their lines and feel they can sell, if instructed, and want to make more money and be employed in work permanent the year round.

CALL MONDAY ANY TIME.
If out of city, write for nearest branch.

Chicago folks have lots of time to read on Sunday!

...and the Sunday Tribune reaches 76 per cent of them!

TRIBUNE readership represents the Central West. Because it serves and reflects the swift-moving public so well, the Chicago Tribune has become the world's greatest newspaper. And in that simple, familiar statement there is nothing of arrogance. Rather it is but a well-deserved tribute to the Tribune's far-flung staff of picked and seasoned newspaper men and women, because the Tribune is their handiwork.

And the Sunday Tribune is the high spot of their week's endeavor.

Manufacturers, advertisers, and agency counsel seeking entry or entrenchment in Tribune Town need search no further for a medium to carry their messages. The Chicago Sunday Tribune, with its 76 per cent coverage of Chicago, its 71 per cent coverage of the 40-mile suburban area, and its 1,140,000 circulation throughout Tribune Town, is adequate to any merchandising task.

Without the Tribune the job in Chicago and the Chicago territory simply cannot be well done. With the Tribune alone, success is definite and profitable.

Great Ladies Sponsor Many Smart Modes

Paris Is the Mecca to Which Duchesses and Princesses Make Their Pilgrimage for Beautiful Clothes.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—This is forecasting time and many prophets are getting their ideas on what spring fashions are going to be off their chests or bosoms, as the case may be. It's tricky business, this forecasting, and the only sure way to do it is the scientific method. That is, the minimum of prophecy from the maximum of proof.

You get your proof of fashions, like that of the pudding, by consumption thereof by people in a position to discriminate and disburse. This always means women of social prominence who can "talk back" to the grand couturiers in Paris, and who can have materials designed for them by the greatest fabric makers, women who are the power behind the whys and wherefores of hats and other accessories. In short, fashion in the social swim, adopted by such ladies, has an assured future. If any Paris style is early enough to get a general wearing in such circles, it has the maximum proof of fashionableness.

The following forecast is based on this best-of-all-proofs. Fashions in the social swim, for instance, show a great leeway in the matter of waistlines and hemlines, and you can be mighty sure that such leeway will be allowed in the spring styles of the grand couture in Paris. For sports, Parisiennes, native and foreign, place their waistlines well above the hipline, and somewhat below normal. Their hemlines are about a hand's length below the knee—no more, no less. Comfort controls the sports mode, and no closely fitted clothes are worn. Lots of jersey and tricot waistcoats replace blouses with sports suits which are made of tweed and tricot.

Afternoon fashions in the social swim abandon all hope of any return to short skirts and straight lines. No skirts end above the ankleward incurve of the calf, and many of them are longer, at least in part. Waistlines for the afternoon begin just above the hipbone and continue an upward way just to the path of the Empire line. Many of the smartest women wear their afternoon waistlines at normal, but there is no fixed rule about this.

There is a tendency in smart circles to avoid settling the waistline definitely with belt or girdle. It is, rather, marked by back blousing at the waistline, and by fitting in front, in many of the smartest frocks. Afternoon coats in the smart set are getting away from the wrap-around. Many of them have modified Cossack lines, so keep this coat style in your mind for spring. Capes and cape coats have a social present and a style future.

Lace and lingerie trimmings are hung around the necks and clasp the wrists of the social world. Brimmed hats shade the smartest faces seen around the southern resorts. Fancy shoes and even strap slippers are no such favorites as plain pumps in the finest leathers and antelopes. Gloves are not allowed to go to all lengths, but remain at eight to ten button lengths in social circles, and black gloves are in the discard, while white and pale beiges and grays are worn every where.

Social fashions are material-minded, as it were. A sharp line is drawn around the fabrics that smart women like and wear. They are already wearing prints, a fact which will be useful to you and me in planning our spring clothes. The grand favorites are prints on a black or other very dark ground. French fabric makers endorse these prints by telling me they have on order thousands of meters for early spring. The rule of the design is very large motifs or very small. There aren't many in-betweens. Satins are going to be good, judging by their unmistakable social prestige, and a great favorite for afternoon and evening is gray satin in one of those false tones of which I have already written, which is mixed with pink, lilac or some other pastel shade. Other smart materials for afternoon and evening are faille, moire, crêpe de chine, crêpe georgette, marquesette, chiffon, tulle and marocain.

Colors in society are greens in springy nuances, navy and purply-blues, white, yellow, gray, pinks and old rose, Pompeiian red and burgundy, and black and white combinations. The royal wedding in Rome recently revives the interest in Savoy blue—a cross between sapphire and ordinary sky blue.

A success silhouette of the season is the Chanel one that can be traced without difficulty to the Greek. The two-tiered skirt with its classic folds might have adorned Diana or Aphrodite, and is adorning their modern sisters. Our sketch illustrates a Chanel dress made in this silhouette, especially for the duchess of Sermoneta, lady in waiting to the queen of Italy, and herself descended from the royal house of Colonna. The Duchess chose for this dress a pale gray satin, with pearly highlights. The blouse is really bloused and knotted at the center front of the almost normal waistline.

There is a fitted hip-yoke that descends in back, and a circular tier reaching almost to the knees. The lower circular tier begins from a fitted foundation that distinctly curves inward from hips to knees and then flares. There is a trailing panel at the center back of this lower tier.

Our fourth sketch illustrates the Jean Patou frock worn by the Princesse d'Orleans, with the lace veil and tiara of her rank. This frock is made of sapphire blue satin and has the new Empire waistline that tall, slender women are wearing, indicated rather than fitted by the deep pointed yoke. From this line four silver, tasseled cords suspended from rosettes hang almost to the bottom of the ankle-length skirt. There is a softly ruffled collar of white lace at the V-shaped neckline, and a court train of blue is attached to the shoulders at the back. The princess lines of this frock are achieved by fitted gores that flare toward the knees.

The second frock is worn by Princesse Paul de Serbie and is made of Pompeiian red and gold lamé. The dress is cut princess and bias bands from the shoulders cross on the blouse-front, the one from the left shoulder ending in a point at the waistline, under which the material of the dress is shirred. The skirt is a fitted tube, which is flared below the hipline by pointed godets, and the two back godets trail slightly. The sleeves are long and closely fitted, a sleeve type that continues to be smart for afternoon. The Princesse wears her court veil of rare lace under her diamond tiara.

The third sketch illustrates one of Lelong's new printed afternoon frocks in dark blue and white, with large flower pattern. The bloused waist falls over the top of the fitted skirt, thus indicating a high waistline, and at the same time making it easy to wear. A scarf of the printed silk crosses the nude throat in front and is tied in a bow on the right shoulder. A wide bias band begins from the fitted hip-yoke in front and descends in a V to the kneeline in back. From this yoke and band floating panels hang, the two in front reaching almost to the ankles and the two in back making a double train. Formal afternoon dresses often have this hemline.

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

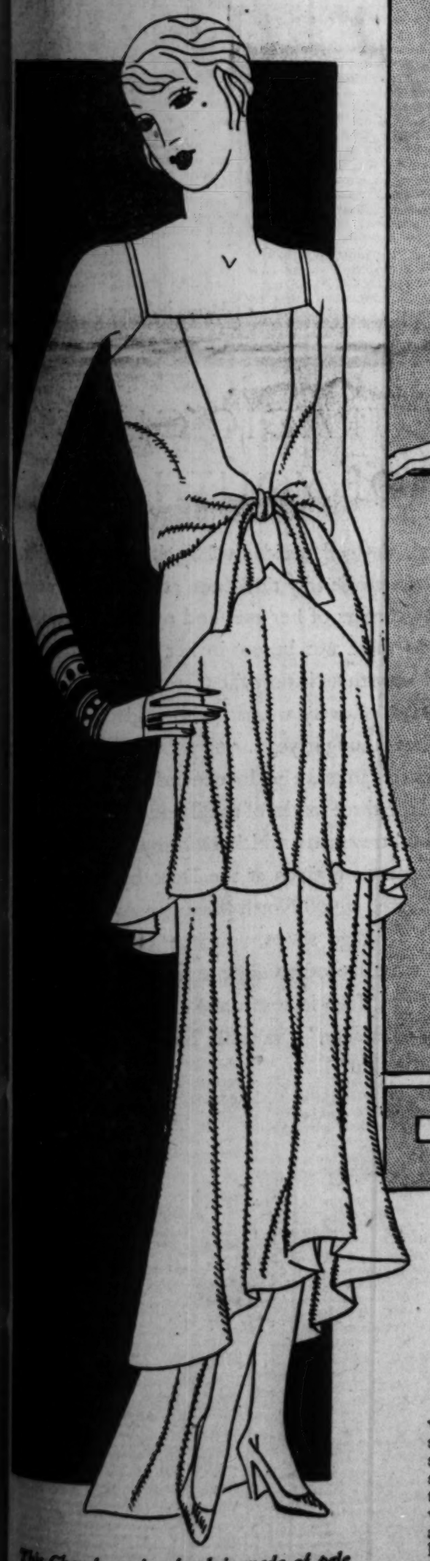
Heim is preparing spring coats that barely reach to the normal waistline, to be worn with long dresses.

Navy blue, matching the midnight Mediterranean, is worn all along the Riviera for evening.

Short capes, of reversible woolen, with slits for the arms, are a feature of Lucile's spring fashion show.

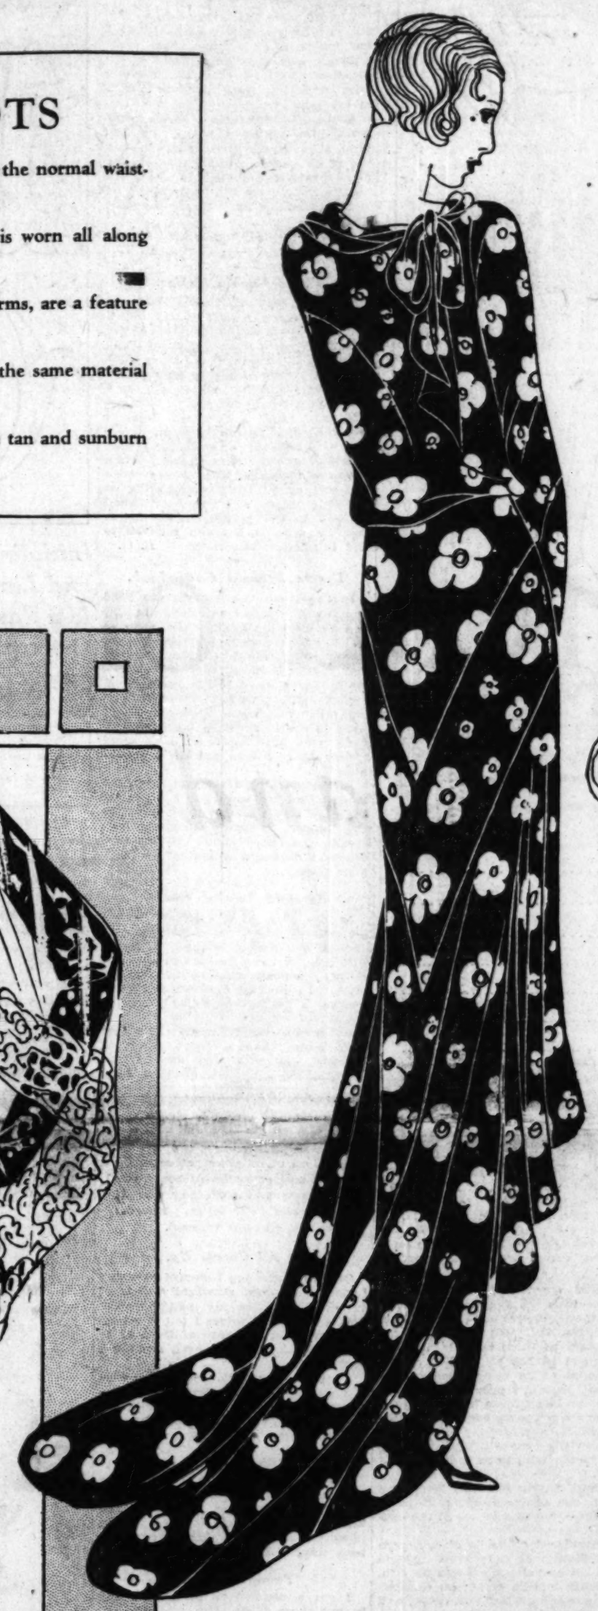
Plaid taffeta blouses with tailored collars and ties of the same material are shown with tailored suits chez Lucile.

Reports from the azure coast show the passing of the tan and sunburn craze. Lily white skin is coming back to its own again.



This Chanel evening frock is made of pale gray satin, and is plainly inspired by the Greek.

From Jean Patou comes this red and gold lame dress worn by Princesse Paul de Serbie. The long tube of the upper silhouette is broken by flaring godets placed low on the skirt.



Madame Fabre Luce wears this Lucien Lelong frock of navy blue and white printed material, with its paneled skirt and bloused waist.

Jean Patou designed this blue satin frock for the Princesse d'Orleans. The empire yoke and silver cord and tassel trimming are interesting details.

PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

2906—Women's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 40 inch material.

2776—Women's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 to 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 40 inch material.

2882—Women's and misses' shorts and bandeau. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 1¾ yards of 39 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THE open V neckline, with its flattering rolled collar and long tie of pattern No. 2906, is one that is generally becoming, while the beautifully molded bodice, with tucks giving a narrowing effect through the shoulders, the snugly fitted hips, and the low placed fulness of the circular flared skirt all combine to make this dress one of the smartest.

The full length sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow, fitted bands, and the narrow belt is placed at a normal waistline.

This is a dress that can easily be made at home, and will be useful for all-day wear, shopping, the office or classroom. The bodice is cut in two parts, and the first thing to be done is to put in the shoulder tucks. Fasten the threads securely and press the tucks flat before doing anything else. Then baste the seams together on the right side, for unless the material is heavy, French seams will be best. After the fitting is satisfactorily done, finish and press these seams. You can then make the collar and sew in place. The sleeves can be made and put in after the skirt is attached to the bodice.

In joining the skirt to the bodice, pin together at the side seams, and then pin the middle front and back of the skirt to the corresponding places on the bodice. You can join the skirt and bodice in a right side seam, and baste over the seam a half inch wide bias binding the same color as the dress. Stitch it in with the seam that joins the two parts, then baste the binding down over the seam, and stitch the upper edge to the bodice. When the belt is finished tack it in place over the binding.

The dress will have to be hung up for several days, then the lower edge evened off before setting the applied band on. The upper edge of this band is prettily shaped, and if you take time to do careful work you won't have trouble with it.

Navy blue crêpe satin, using the dull surface for the dress and the shiny surface of the applied band on the skirt, belt, collar, cuffs, and tie, is chic. Dull black silk crêpe with the collar and tie of white silk crêpe; purple Canton crêpe self-trimmed; printed silk crêpe with a plain, harmonizing shade for the contrast, and tomato red crêpe de chine with matching sheer velvet are all as smart as can be.

Tailored shorts and bandeau are favorites with the smart set for wear under their general daytime clothes. Pattern No. 2882 will be found very satisfactory as there is no bulky fullness to get in the way. The shorts are laid in plaits either side of the front and back and provide ample fulness, so as to serve as a slip beneath the every day sports costume. A fitted band with a deep point at the front provides a smooth hipline. These shorts fasten with buttons at the side band.

The well fitting bandeau is shirred through the center front, dart fitted under the arms, and closes at the center back.

Flesh colored crêpe de chine, cross barred dimity in pale blue, printed chiffon cotton voile in a floral pattern, crêpe satin in Nile green, an eggshell shade in washable flat silk crêpe, and batiste in white or pastel shades are all appropriate materials.

Pattern No. 2776 is for a stunning dress that shows the Spanish influence in the important scarf neckline. The dress is suggestive of the princess, with its beautifully molded bodice and flaring skirt that shows a novel up in the side movement. It will be just the thing for town or immediate wear.

The circular skirt is cut in two parts and attached to the two piece bodice. If you carefully follow the directions given with the picture chart you won't have any trouble in putting it together.

The collar is laid in two plaits or tucks at each end, and the scarf or jabot is plaited and attached to the left collar edge. The seam should come at the shoulder. The right edge of the collar is stitched to the front, small perforations showing just where. First sew the collar to the dress from the left shoulder to the opposite end, and finish the seam with a bias facing. The jabot hangs over the left edge of the neck, which should be invisibly faced.

Black crêpe satin, using the dull surface for the collar and scarf, and featherweight tweed in beige and brown with the collar and jabot of brown silk crêpe showing beige polka dots are smart suggestions.

BOOKS ON CHILDREN

by Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

A booklet by Mrs. Bevans on "Books to Be Read to Children or by Them" will be sent free on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FROM time to time fathers, mothers, young married people without children, and young men and women not yet married write me asking for the names of books which will enlighten them on this whole general subject of understanding children, or give them practical help, or both.

In suggesting books to individual persons one is often puzzled, though the character of a letter may in itself reveal much to serve as a clew. The busy, practical person who has almost no time and little energy left at the end of a day needs one sort of reading matter. The person of the student type of mind with plenty of time can gain best from another kind of book. The man or woman with a university training, or the one with a knowledge of psychology, or the naturally deep thinker needs another.

As a result of these evidently various requirements, a comprehensive bibliography is in the process of preparation to appear in future booklets, but it has gone slowly, so far. To meet some of these requests in a limited way, a group of books will be noted today, with a brief word about each. Full reviews may appear at a later date.

Points of Judgment.

The following books seem to me to stand out among the new publications as fulfilling these requirements for layman's use. In my opinion a book for parents in general should be: Well written, readable, enlightening, sound, stimulating to thinking and a fresh viewpoint, advanced, but not extreme, either practical in itself or capable of practical application.

We might start with "Parenthood and the Newer Psychology," by Frank Howard Richardson, A. B., M. D., published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Dr. Richardson is father, doctor, and psychologist and he has written an essentially human book setting forth the fundamentals and practice of the newer psychology in the everyday language of your home and mine. The book is encouraging and constructive and as such it is a most valuable contribution to literature on children.

"Youth in a World of Men" is a rather short book by Marietta L. Johnson, published by John Day of New York. Mrs. Johnson has done a wonderful piece of educational experiment work in Fairhope, Ala. Her book, however, is not an an exposition of her work, but an interesting discussion of what childhood does have and what it should have in this world of adults.

One of the simplest, finest, and most practical of all the new books for mothers is "Child Care and Training," by Faegre and Anderson, published by the Institute of Child Welfare, University of Minnesota Press, Minneapolis. This book is as nearly complete in detail as such a book could be and will be reviewed fully later.

Older Girls and Boys.

For reading in connection with the understanding of and the problems concerned with older girls and boys is "The Psychology of the Adolescent," by Leta S. Hollingworth, published by D. Appleton and company of New York. Written by a person with great technical knowledge and wide experience at her command, this is done in an interesting, readable style for the average intelligent person to enjoy and profit from.

"A Mother's Letters to a Schoolmaster," by Rita Scherman, published by Alfred Knopf of New York, is an unusual book. If you have never thought much about schools and your child in connection with them, these flowing, intimate letters of the mother of a young son will be quite fascinating to you.

Of a different character is "Better Schools," by Carlton Washburne and Myron M. Stearns, published by the John Day company of New York. Its first appeal will probably be to those who have a practical concern with schools, though parents who have a flair for things educational in the school sense will find this an enlightening and interesting book. Mr. Washburne, as you probably know, is one of our leading progressive educators.

On Creative Education.

"New Schools in the Old World" is quite different in its approach. Mr. Washburne, whose Winnetka work is well known, visited the progressive schools of Europe and with Myron M. Stearnes wrote this short, interesting description of what he saw. It is a fascinating book just to read. And if, as Mr. Washburne says, "you read each chapter in terms of your own child's schooling, the descriptions become important." The book is published by the John Day company of New York.

Insist upon the genuine, imported Carlsbad Sprudel Salt. Not like other salts—pleasant to take, at all drug stores.

Told of Friend's Injury.

About 15 years ago I had a young man friend who went west for his health and became a cowboy on a ranch.

I heard from him every two weeks, but one time a month elapsed and I had not received a letter. One night I awoke with a dreadful sense of depression and fear. The man's name kept repeating itself over and over in my mind.

About ten days later I had a letter from him telling me that he had been sent to get the money to pay the ranch hands. Returning with the money, robbers had beaten and thrown him to the side of the road, where he lay unconscious until found the next morning.

This happened the night of my dream. J. M. T.

Found Napkin Holder.

While I was visiting a widowed friend I used a napkin holder which had been given her at the time of her marriage years ago. Her husband had used it practically all their married life, so she prized it highly. One day it was missing and as long as I stayed did not show up.

Shortly after I returned home I dreamed that I was back in J——, putting on an old apron, in the pocket of which was the silver holder. When I awoke I recalled that I had worn that old apron while rummaging in the attic one day. I wrote my friend to look in the pocket of the apron and we were both much relieved to find the dream was true. L. G.

Dream Brought Good Luck.

In the north the winters are hard and work scarce, especially in my line as auto mechanic. The shop in which I was working expected to get a number of cars to overhaul from a taxi company of another town. We mechanics were to drive them back.

The night before I dreamed that the order had been canceled; that I went to the foreman of the taxi company, who gave me a job with more money than I was getting where I was.

In the morning I was not surprised to find that we were not going after the cars and that my services were no longer needed. Following my dream, I at once applied to the taxi company and got a better job with more money. W. E. B.

Foretold Sale of Books.

At the close of the school year I planned to leave for a distant city and did not care to take all my books with me. I gave the school an offer of my encyclopedias at a reduced price. I dreamed one night that I received a twenty-five dollar check for the set of books.

My dream was fully realized a few days later when a check for that amount was presented me by the school. J. H.

Pet Economies

Tell us about your pet economy or an odd economy of some one you know and we'll pay you $1 if we print your letter. Address Economy, Sunday Tribune.

It All Counts Up.

Seven months ago I started to watch for sales on good standard brands of groceries, etc., in my neighborhood. At these reduced prices I put in a supply, saving at the rate of from $7 to $12 a month. In the seven months I saved $71.

I combine my walk for exercise with my shopping tour each day, thus giving me an opportunity to familiarize myself with prices and merchandise along the way. L. D.

For Birds and Dogs.

I save every crumb of bread or cake to feed the birds who sit expectantly every morning. Also bones and bits of meat, which I place in the alley for any stray dog or cat that may wander by. F. E. B.

Young Financier.

I am a sophomore at school, and in my room there is a girl who always seems to have plenty of paper and ink. Sometimes we run out of paper, ink or need an eraser, and then go to her for the supply. She charges us one cent for every sheet of paper, every pen full of ink, and even when we use the eraser.

She says that she uses this amount for buying her supplies. Whatever she has left, she puts into the bank. In this way she saves all of her spending money. H. P.

Use for Old Hose.

A friend of mine always keeps her own and her two daughters' old silk stockings and saves them for cold days.

She cuts the foot part of the stocking leaving just the heel in and these old stockings she wears underneath her other ones. She says this keeps her quite warm and still the old stockings do not show. H. J.

"We are enthusiastic about Angel Dainty Dyes, and were particularly impressed with the beauty of the colors and the variety of shades that could be secured by diluting or concentrating the dye bath, and by varying the time.

"These dyes are instantly soluble, and easy to use. Used with ordinary care they produce even shades with no streaking."

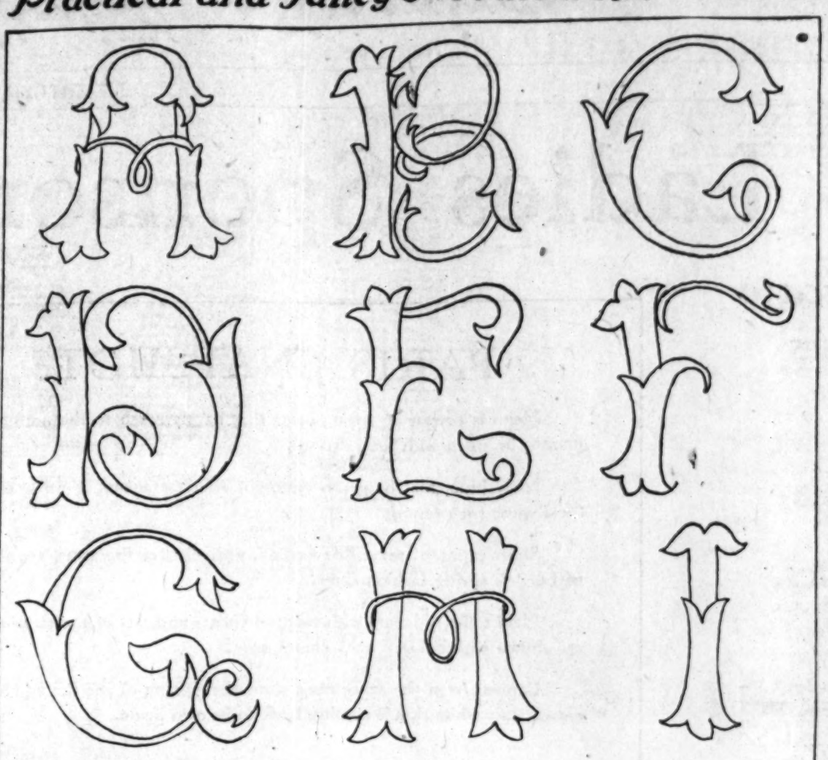
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

by Clotilde



Initialing Linens and Lingerie Is a Fascinating Occupation.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

EMBROIDERING initials on household linens, lingerie, and on sports clothes has never been seen more than now, and it is a delightful fashion. There never was a more fascinating form of needlework than embroidering, and it is well worth while, if you aren't an adept at the work, to practice carefully on some piece of material until you are satisfied with the evenness and perfection of your stitches.

To copy the letters shown in this article, use some transfer paper. This can be bought at any artist's supply store, or the work can be done without it. Lay a smooth piece of tissue paper over the letter and go over every part of it accurately, using a soft, well sharpened pencil. Then lay the penciled side of this tissue paper down on another piece of paper (writing paper is good), and then go over each part again. Lay this second tracing on your material, traced side down, and go over the letter for the third time. This last work will transfer the marking to the material. The reason for doing the second tracing is that the letter would be reversed if the first tracing were transferred to the cloth.

The paper should be carefully pinned before tracing, so it will not slip.

Outline the letter with a single strand of darning cotton. These letters are done entirely in the raised satin stitch, and of all the different stitches this is the loveliest.

In the first work of outlining a letter use a small running stitch. These stitches must be accurately taken, so as to follow perfectly the shape of the letter.

The next step is the padding. This is done by taking a couple of strands of embroidery floss and taking chain or running stitches, keeping the stitches short on the under side. The filling should always be heavier in the center of a space, thinning down as the outlines are reached.

In the satin stitch, an over and over stitch, the stitches are always at right angles to the edge. This work must always be done in a frame, and it must be done slowly so as to be done evenly. Where there are curves the stitches are taken unusually close together on the inside, and on the outer edge there must be no space, but try and have them just meet. Never let them overlap.

A little practice will make it possible to do beautiful work; and where one is inexperienced time will be well spent in practicing first on an ordinary piece of cloth as was suggested in the beginning of this article.

It is one of the most fascinating forms of needlework, but unless it is well done there is no beauty in it.

The second installment of this alphabet will be shown next Sunday.

THREE TRAGIC GHOSTS OF YOUTH

SHE looks middle-aged, decidedly. Her chin is droopy, her throat is criss-crossed by tiny lines, and there are deep wrinkles at the corners of her eyes and mouth. Just a few short years ago there was beauty in her face, her throat, her chin—and now there is only the tragic ghost of beauty.

Such is the fate of every woman who neglects her skin, even though she is young in years. And yet anyone who gives her skin a little care can make her loveliness last, and increase. You can avoid the three marks of age if you will follow the simple, successful treatments which Dorothy Gray evolved.

These treatments are given at the Dorothy Gray salon, conveniently located at 900 North Michigan Avenue. Here, and at leading Chicago shops, you may obtain for your home use the same Dorothy Gray preparations used in the salons. Won't you drop in tomorrow and let us give you "Your Dowry of Beauty," a valuable booklet on scientific home care of the skin?

HOME FURNISHING AND DECORATING

In the Colonial Spirit By Edith Weigle

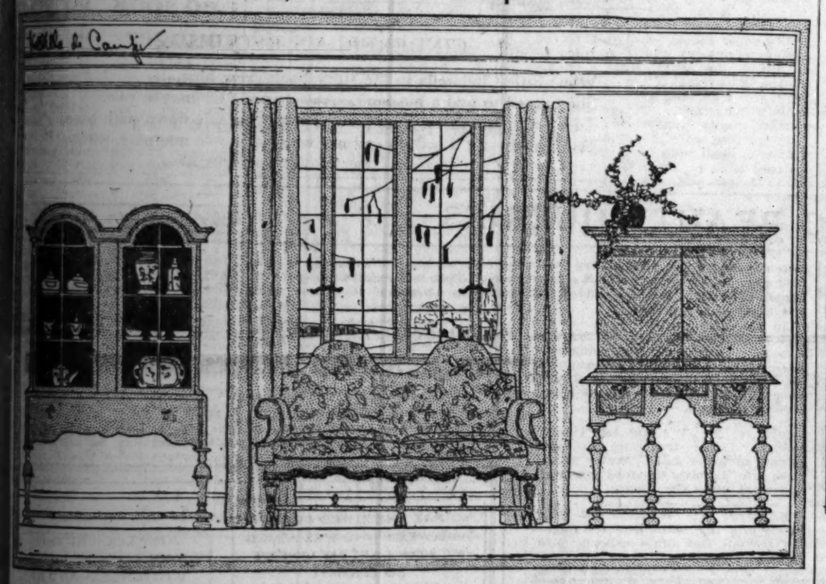
A corner of a small living room done very simply in the early American manner gives a delightful sense of cheerfulness. No attempt is made at luxury; everything is absolutely unpretentious and therein lies personality, a quality that many more elegant rooms lack. A ship's clock hangs on the wall above a maple butterfly table. The maple chairs are Windsor and ladderback and a quaint hooked rug is used on the floor. Glazed chintz curtains in a ship design hang from beneath a wooden cornice at the window. The wall-paper has fascinating little scenes on it, reminiscent of Kate Greenaway pictures.

Any one of the articles pictured here would make an appropriate addition to a colonial room. The mahogany corner cupboard is simple and effective and when papered on the inside with an old fashioned scenic paper makes a delightful place to display old lustre ware or delicate other bits of china. The wing chair is upholstered in figured English linen. A drop leaf table of mahogany, a quaint low rocker and a Heppelwhite sofa complete the picture.

These beds would be ideal in a cottage, small house or apartment done in the early American manner. They look exactly like the old spindle beds, so common in New England to this day, but are made of metal and boast luxurious box springs and mattresses. A gayly flowered chintz is used for the bedspread. The night table between the beds is also metal.

The William and Mary Period

By WillElla de Campi.



The popular double hood is seen in the china cabinet and settee, and trumpet and ball legs are evident.

Dutch Influence Was Marked in This Era and Walnut Began to Take the Place of Oak; Lines Were Curved Instead of Straight; Colors Were Brighter.

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problem pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

AFTER the brief and inglorious reign of James II., William and Mary ascended the throne of England in 1688. With their reign English furniture design underwent marked changes, developing into a style much lighter, more comfortable and simpler than that which had been produced during the preceding era.

When William arrived in England he found Dutch workers and a prevailing trend in taste already established. The many Dutch courtiers accompanying him, too, greatly influenced furniture styles toward Dutch taste by importing pieces from their native country.

In addition to this Dutch interest there was a strong leaning toward French taste resulting from the influx of Huguenot refugees who had fled from France to England after the revocation of the edict of Nantes. Among these refugees were many skilled joiners, carvers, cabinet makers, silk workers, and textile weavers. They helped to advance in England a school of craftsmen in all branches of the arts they represented, so that the quality and quantity of domestic furniture were vastly improved.

Straight forms of construction, previously characteristic of English decorative furniture, gave way to curved and undulating lines typical of the continental Dutch style. Marquetry continued to hold favor, but carving was much more sparingly used than it had been in earlier periods.

Characteristic features of pieces made during the days of William and Mary were: Turned legs with inverted cup or bell shaped feet, supported by trumpetlike legs; curved or shaped stretchers between the legs; arched or rounded hoods to cabinets, backs of chairs and settees. These "hoods" occurred in single, double or triple forms. Toward the end of the period cabriole legs, with hoofs, cloven goats' feet or club feet, made their appearance.

Walnut was the most widely used wood, though oak, chestnut, and beech were also used. For veneer, which was used extensively, burl walnut, acacia, olive wood, and laburnum were favored. Different kinds of woods, many of them imported, were used for inlays. Marquetry was often inclosed in panels, outlined by parts of circles, frequently combined with oblongs having rounded ends.

Chairs were the most interesting representatives of the transition from Restoration to Dutch type. Those rectangular panels in the backs which are hallmarks of the preceding period dropped out of use altogether in William and Mary's age. Chair backs, instead of being stiffly upright, were tilted backward and were often shaped to fit the body. They were usually high and were caned, carved, upholstered or balustered. Carving and upholstery, or caning and carving, were frequently combined. Tops of upholstered backs were either straight across or curved like the tops of hooded cabinets. Seats were still approximately square with a slight narrowing toward the back.

Various forms of tables were in use, most of them comparatively small, and designed for special purposes, such as for cards, writing, dressing, tea, etc. They were made with round, oblong, square, or scalloped tops. Many of these, in larger sizes, were used for dining, though gateleg tables continued to be popular.

Chests of drawers were made in two styles having one or two sections. Those of one section had from three to five drawers. In the two section chests (progenitors of the highboy) the upper section was slightly smaller than the lower, and the division was marked by a heavy molding. Tops were either straight or hooded. Flat surfaces on the fronts were usually embellished with beautifully proportioned molding panels, veneering, or elaborate marquetry. Cabinets and secretaries followed the same general lines.

Beds made at this time had tall, slender posts, round or octagonal, and testers with elaborately molded cornices. Curtains of brocade, velvet, satin, or silk, as well as chintz, were used with these tall, imposing bedsteads.

Mirror frames of pine or limewood were beautifully carved by Grinling Gibbon or men of his school. They displayed exquisite festoons, flowers, Cupids, and other fragile devices in a manner which proved that the master craftsman had perfect command of his material and tools. Plainer frames of walnut were sometimes decorated with marquetry. In addition, there were small swivel mirrors, and mirrors were used in the panels of cabinet and secretary doors. The glass was usually beveled.

Clocks were made in both tall case and bracket types. Marquetry, veneering, and lacquer were freely used in their decoration. Tops were frequently hooded or arched and dials were generally of engraved or chased brass.

Color and delicacy of form became more important than massive substantiality, resulting in a style admirably suited to modern use. Love of color, sponsored by Queen Mary, increased the importation, and eventually the domestic manufacture, of lacquered pieces and of wall papers in oriental patterns. In homes of the very wealthy walls were often covered with tapestries or japanned panels full of vivacious color contrasts.

Gay colorings, too, predominated in upholsteries, curtains, and hangings. The stuffs principally used were needlework or petit point, damasks, brocades, velvets, and figured chintzes, for which there was an increasing demand.

Though this period was comparatively short, lasting only from 1688 to 1702, it embodied a definite formation of style which endured and influenced much of the furniture made during successive periods throughout the eighteenth century.

In the accompanying illustration are shown three pieces typical of the William and Mary style. The glass door cabinet holds an interesting assortment of china pieces, the collection of which was greatly popular at that time. The settee with its double hooded back, two separate seat cushions, and needlework upholstery is an excellent example. A characteristic cabinet with veneered doors and drawers and "cup-and-trumpet" legs may be skillfully used to conceal a radio in the present day living room.

H. W. K.: If your hall is too long and narrow you can make it seem wider and shorter by using a good looking striped or diamond patterned wall paper. Soft green and ivory make a pleasing combination.

This 18th century English chair is aristocratic in line and design. Its fluted legs, arms, and striped satin brocade with which it is covered show a French influence.

This extremely delicate and graceful chair is known as the Tidewater chair, as the original from which it is copied came from the Tidewater district of Virginia. Almost all the work on it is hand labor.

Niceties of Feminine Hygiene

To Be Deserving of the Adjective "Charming" a Woman Must Give Great Attention to Physical Details.

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Women are getting to be a real treat again. If they keep it up they may even become a mystery!"

The remark was made by one of the sex that wants its women just like that! Not too obvious, not too revealing. Provocatively femme, as it were!

The occasion of the remark was a benefit performance at which everybody seemed to be out in 1930 tight bodiced, long skirted frocks, and many of them wearing long gloves.

Now that we are in the thick of the long skirt wearing we hear less from the opposition, whose voices were anything but muted at their first appearance. That women are getting to be a treat again rather sums up the now current attitude toward the new styles by women as well as by men.

All of which is rather a roundabout way of introducing a subject we never seem to be able to plunge into directly. The new girl with her ultra feminine lure does seem to provide a good approach to a subject that concerns fastidiousness, daintiness, and refinement of person as it is met in women about whom whispers are never raised in connection with odors.

Need for Vigilance.

More than ever this adorably lovely looking 1930 model of femme needs to be on the watch against the faintest breath of suspicion in this regard. Not that it was any less becoming in flapper style days, but somehow this new illusion that women are introducing, with their intensely feminine mode calls for nothing short of sweet perfection.

It is true that the unfortunate condition of unsavory body odor may not be due to personal carelessness. There are conditions peculiar to the nervous system that provoke and exaggerate it. In this event medical aid should be sought so that one may know how to go about properly restoring the tone of the system.

However, carelessness does claim a large number of victims. Again it may not be carelessness about baths. It may be that common careless habit known as constipation, from which the faulty skin odors spring. It may even be due to carelessness about drinking water, for water drinking is a well known solvent of the odor that is thrown off with normal perspiration.

Faulty diet is yet another thing that needs to be investigated. In gross eaters the perspiration is likely to be unpleasant. Testimonials could be secured on the relief that has followed reformed diets when a reduction fare was substituted for gross quality and quantity of foods formerly indulged in. Then, certain foods that have striking odors will undergo marked putrefactive changes in the intestines and tincture excretions disagreeably.

Good Old Soap and Water.

Cleanliness, however, excessive, fastidious cleanliness is not too much to ask of one who would be absolutely sure. Nothing wages so helpful a battle as soap and water and more soap and water. Warm, sudsy baths at night, and every night without fail, and showers in the morning to rid the body of any possible perspiration odor that may have occurred at night are necessary.

Salt water baths are recommended both for the unstable nerved and for those whose skin needs a refreshing sweetness. You can use common salt or sea salt, the latter purchasable at drug stores. You can throw a large handful or two into your tub or rub the salt on your wet body under the shower.

Then the area that is overactive should be locally treated. Good astringents that close the pores are available in the market and commended for use. For the armpits and excessive sweating of the feet you may use a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Daub this on gently and allow to dry thoroughly on the skin. Keep the clothing away until the drying is complete. Two or three applications twenty-four hours apart serve the first week. Then one application a week afterward is a preventive measure.

Many Panaceas.

There are most agreeable powders and deodorants for use after the bath which ought not to be ignored for their "silencing" value. In fact, the trade has been strongly coöperative in relief work for the particular embarrassment of which we speak. No one should be a whispered-about person when there are so many panaceas that can be found with little investigation.

The soles of the feet often are the most overactive centers, in which event especial precautions should be taken. In extreme cases a salicylic soap is recommended, or the feet may be soaked nightly in a 1 per cent solution of formalin in water. Then, after the feet are dried, powdered boric acid should be dusted on.

IN THE FEMININE REALM.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads—Dissolve Them

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin and there is only one safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of Calonite powder—sprinkle a little on a hot wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.

Let your tooth paste buy you a good tie

Buy yourself a new tie with what you save by using Listerine Tooth Paste instead of dentifrices in the 50¢ class. The saving averages about $3 per year per person, assuming you use a tube a month.

See how quickly this modern dentifrice makes teeth white—lustrous

YOU are urged to try Listerine Tooth Paste, made by the makers of Listerine and in every way worthy of the Listerine name.

We ask you particularly to note how swiftly it removes stubborn discolorations, tartar plaques and fermenting food particles.

Note, too, after a few brushings how white, lustrous and brilliant your teeth become. Such results are due to modern cleansing and polishing agents present in this unusual dentifrice. Many years of study preceded their selection. Their purpose is to cleanse speedily but with absolute safety. They do this because they are harder than tartar and consequently remove it. But they are softer than the precious enamel, and so are harmless to it.

Listerine Tooth Paste not only gives you ideal cleansing but definitely improves the hygiene of the mouth, for it also contains the antiseptic essential oils of Listerine with their marked potency to inhibit the growth of dangerous bacteria in the mouth.

Incidentally, at 25¢ Listerine Tooth Paste saves about $3 per year per person when compared with dentifrices costing 50¢ or more. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

THE WHOLE DUTY OF WIVES

(After reading Doris Blake on how to keep your husband's love.)

The third floor bath has sprung
a leak,
The youngest baby sprouts a tooth;
The car froze up—third time this week—
How can one drive to school for Ruth?

The sullen maid, in love again,
Has burned a new aluminum pan;
The house grows chill, we note with pain,
The absence of the furnace man.

No groceries—and dinner near.
Did Jimmie punch his sister's head?
Ruth says her throat feels hot and queer—
The dog is lost; the phone is dead.

The nurse feels faint, she's lying down.
Two unexpected guests now call
And Junior whacks his kiddie-car
Against the mirror in the hall. . . .
But press your frock—the latest style;
Paint on a smile and don't be late—
To keep a modern husband's smile—
A wife must seem a fashion plate.

DEMOCRACY

The king was in the counting house,
A-counting out his money.
The queen was in the parlor,
A-eating bread and honey. . . .
The maid was in the garden,
Hanging out the clothes,
Which was, of course, conventional,
As ancient copy goes.

Democracy has changed the scene;
Few kings have ready money
And any churl who has the price,
Now dines, like queens, on honey.
And in the night club-melting pot
All neat distinction fades,
You cannot tell which dames are queens—
And which ones are the maids.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

CINDERELLA'S REQUEST.

When little Cinderella in the story book grew blue,
She prayed to find a husband. Any prince. Or maybe two.
Today a prince is less than par. Thrones tumble down with ease;
One breathes: "Lord, to end my wait—a movie magnate, please!"

The Telephoning Habit

by Doris Blake

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Parent Says It's Pretty Hard for Boys to Have a High Opinion of the Other Sex When Girls Make a Nuisance of Themselves by Constantly Calling Them Up

If you have a boy, 15, 16, or 17, in your home, you may appreciate the plight of a certain parent and his appeal to young girls to stop telephoning boys, during exam weeks, at least.

The complainant is not one of the hard fisted, hard driving fathers of the old school, as you may guess by the continuance of the telephone ringing. He is not out of touch with his boy of 16 nor with the ways of his boy's generation. He is simply distraut over the schoolboy's constant study hour interference from young girls. The telephoning, of course, is preliminary to "dates." The 'phoning might be tolerated if the too frequent party invitations were not so insistent.

"But even the incessant ringing of the phone gets on your nerves," the father confesses, "if you happen to nurse any illusions about women. You try to teach your boy respect for the other sex, and his normal inclinations run that way. But after a girl he isn't very keen about calls him up night after night coaxing for a 'date,' and other girls ring up and keep on ringing up, it's darned hard for a father to protest when his son turns from the phone and says, as mine did the other night: 'I wish those bums would stop calling! They make me sick!'"

Whether they actually made the youngster sick or not was a question in the dad's mind, for he heard his brave boy bragging to a couple of other fellows about Betty's calls, and the other boys exchanging names and confidences just as freely. Dad did notice, however, that the name of the girl his son likes best is kept discreetly out of conversations. She is not one of the telephone addicts. He calls her up.

It's the Old Story.

"Isn't it the old story?" dad asks. "Man and boy, aren't we all the same? A little reserve—and you like the girl better."

Dad confides that he works hard at trying to get the viewpoint of this younger generation. He realizes that there are discrepancies that cannot be bridged. BUT, listening in on the younger ones, he is not so sure that boys have changed much at heart. He is even inclined to think that as girls have become bolder in their approaches the desire becomes keener for the girl who is not too easy to get.

The hard boiled, man of the world attitude toward one girl is so quickly supplanted with an almost childish sweetness of manner in the presence of the "nice girl" type that dad is convinced over again, through his son's response, of woman's gracious influence. Only he wishes there was more of it; that his son would be favored less with approaches from the aggressive young moderns. During exam weeks, anyway, both father and son could do with a lot less telephone answering.

Chance for Wrong Ideas.

"Aside from his school progress," dad reports, "I don't want the boy getting wrong ideas about girls. I mean about his duty toward them. I don't want him getting to think that taking a girl out is her expense; that her car (or her father's) is his to commandeer for any emergency; that he has no responsibility in the matter of entertainment, or that he hasn't any responsibility toward girls.

"I want him to respect them, but gosh, how can you ask him to respect some of them? Just brainless, silly youngsters too free in their manners to exact more than free-and-easy behavior from the boys. I haven't any daughter, but, believe me, if I had one I'd educate her along the lines I'm speaking on. No boy would turn away from the phone with a phrase on his lips such as my boy used the other night. And don't think I didn't sail into son for that remark! And what I didn't say his mother added!

"Don't misunderstand me, Miss Balke!" the father adds. "My boy's just a regular kid, no better, no worse than the rest. I'm not trying to protect him from girls. I only want him to respect women. Can't you help line the girls up for 'respecting'?"

I'm not convinced but the girls are already lining themselves up for "respecting"! A mother of two girls, 15 and 17, reports a conversation overheard from the next room. The younger one said, "I'm going to call up Jimmy."

The older one replied, "Don't be old fashioned! Let Jimmy call you!" And Jimmy wasn't called up. Mother could have talked for hours on the value of telephone reticence to that young bud, but it took sister's withering comment on old fashionedness to turn the trick.

Outlook Is Brightening.

I think the young ones are veering around in the right direction. A miss of 18, whose mother couldn't wrestle with her daughter's smoking habit because she herself was an inveterate consumer, had to listen to this from her child's lips recently: "Better give them up, mater! I did. Men like you better with the odor of flowers clinging!"

Women, being a pliant sex, will get around to the thing that men admire most, whether it is a matter of their figures, their dress, or their behavior. And word has got about that a little more of the quality of elusiveness would be appreciated in girls. Some will be slower to act than others, just as some are slower to adopt a new style of frock or coiffure—but they get around to it, if given time.

Mothers, if their own conduct permits them the indulgence, can do a lot toward bringing up their girls to see the value of a certain amount of reticence. Not prudishness, nor awkward or formidable reserve, but enough of the elusive to tease.

Girls can telephone boys, even to just call up and say "Hello!" But not too often. And NOT unless they know the boy could not or would not make a flip remark about the call. It still remains much the nicer thing if the boy does the calling. It's much more flattering to a girl's pride than to have to admit she forced the conversation. And a thousand times sweeter balm to romantic young girls to know that a boy asked of his own free will to escort them to a party than to realize he was the escort because he was asked to be.

As for the very young misses, 13, 14, and 15—their telephoning habits ought to be regulated strictly and according to the etiquette of their tender ages. If parents cannot do it, then they are not good parents and it is doubtful if any one else can make the youngsters see the folly of their ways.

MRS. C. M.: WATER ISN'T FATtening. Drink from six to eight glasses of water daily. Water is necessary to dissolve the food materials and wash away the waste.

ESTHER S.: WARTS ON THE hands may be treated with the following lotion: One dram salicylic acid, one ounce flexible collodion. Mix well. Apply with a tiny camel's hair brush for four nights. Then soak in hot water. This will take away part of the horny covering. Continue until wart has disappeared.

C. L.: I HAVE A FORMULA FOR a bleach which you may have for a stamped, addressed envelope. You'll find it most effective. Ask for my booklet on the skin.

MARY D.: YEAST IS NOT FATtening. It has been found helpful in relieving constipation by many people. Eat plenty of green vegetables and fresh fruits, and drink from six to eight glasses of water daily. If possible take a three or four mile walk daily.

MRS. L. McN.: WHEN IT IS NEcessary to plunge the hands into strong soapy water, apply plenty of grease afterwards. Olive oil, cold cream or a hand lotion may be used.

MISS P. H.: STUBBY FINGER tips may be improved by wearing the nails longer and by pressing out the tips toward the extended nail tip.

The BACKSTAGE MYSTERY

by OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

The Story in Brief:

TERRY MOONEY, young reporter, "makes the front page" of the Evening Record with the story that Wylie Thornton, matinée idol, is to leave the local stock company and take a train that night for New York for a Broadway engagement. Terry is engaged to Anice Garet, ingenue of the company. Unknown to the adoring public, Thornton is a drunkard and a wastrel. In one of his most recent escapades, when disgracefully intoxicated, he has knocked down John Norris, real estate operator, on being ordered from the Norris home. He has, however, superficial attractions which have dazzled Doris Manning, an amateur member of the stock company, who is the daughter of Maj. Manning, influential banker. He has persuaded Doris to elope with him, promising to marry her after divorcing his wife, Mrs. Thornton threatens to kill him to prevent the elopement. Norris and Maj. Manning go to the theater separately, the former to exact an apology, the latter with the hope of frightening Thornton off. Visiting the actor's dressing room with her fiancé, Carey Weldon, Doris finds Thornton shot to death and her father standing by. Manning enlists the aid of Jim Hanvey, detective. Chief Marty Gallagher is in charge of the investigation. The Record assigns Ken Johnston and Terry Mooney to cover the case. Hanvey and Gallagher carry their inquiry to the Norris home.

INSTALLMENT VII.

Third Degree.

THEY saw Mathilde Norris lean limply against the veranda rail as she stared at her husband with horrified eyes.

Hanvey spoke quietly.

"You have been in the country most of the evening, haven't you, Mr. Norris?"

"Yes."

"Then how did you know that Thornton was dead?"

Norris was cool: "Because it happens that I visited his dressing room and saw his body."

"I see . . . And when was this?"

"About eight o'clock this evening."

"You were alone?"

"Backstage—yes. Mrs. Norris accompanied me downtown in the car."

"May I ask why you visited his dressing room?"

"You may. I went there with the intention of forcing him to apologize for something which occurred in my home last night. Perhaps you have heard . . ."

"Yes. We heard. But to return to your visit to the theater: Were you armed?"

"No."

"I see . . . You went to his dressing room. What happened?"

"Nothing. He was dead when I got there."

"And you were surprised?"

"Of course. And also unnerved."

"Because you yourself had been willing to kill him to avenge your honor, eh?"

"Put it that way if you care to."

"What did you do when you saw his body?"

"Nothing. I waited long enough to be reasonably certain that no one had followed me to the dressing room, then I looked carefully up and down the corridor, and left abruptly."

"Did you see any one backstage?"

"No."

"Did you see Maj. Manning anywhere about the theater?"

Norris frowned. "I told you that I saw no one."

"And you hurried out because you were afraid of being seen?"

"Yes."

"Why were you afraid?"

"Because I realized that the story of what happened here last night must be known to every one at the theater."

"Then you took Mrs. Norris for a long ride?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"To establish an alibi in case I had not been seen at the theater. I wished to avoid unpleasant publicity if that were possible."

Hanvey chewed reflectively on his stogie. "I'd like to congratulate you, Mr. Norris, on your frankness. You have been of considerable help to us."

The little man looked up at the big one out of half closed eyes. His poise was magnificent.

"Am I to consider myself under arrest?"

"Gosh, no! You didn't kill Thornton, did you?"

"Certainly not."

"Then there's nothing to arrest you for. And now we'll say good night to you and Mrs. Norris. I'm sorry we had to trouble you, and I hope you won't mind if we are compelled to question you again later."

"That will be quite all right. And thank you."

Gallagher followed Hanvey down the steps to the street. Once he looked back over his shoulder and saw John Norris staring after them. As they turned toward the corner, Hanvey chuckled.

"Cool baby, ain't he?"

"Seven degrees more so than a block of ice."

"I kind of surprised him, didn't I?"

"Hell! You surprised me even more than you did him. Why didn't you make a pinch?"

"I want him to feel safe. And I'd like you to have him tailed."

They had reached the corner, and in the glow of the arc light Hanvey produced a newspaper.

"Here's a trophy I got off their porch, Marty," he grinned. He glanced at it and nodded with satisfaction. "It's their copy of the Evening Record. Looks like Norris has clipped out the story about Thornton leaving town."

Marty Gallagher gazed at the big man in amazement.

"Durned if you don't beat the Dutch, Jim Hanvey. Fooling around with papers . . . Maybe all that sort of delicate clew stuff is good in your bank line, Jim—but in murders it is the bunk. Won't you ever get it through your head that Wylie Thornton bought a paper between the hotel and the theater and that that was the one you found on the floor of his dressing room? And I'll bet you're nursing a bunch of other dinky clews, aren't you?"

"Maybe, Marty. I always was a durn fool for paying attention to little things and letting the big ones take care of themselves."

"That's swell," agreed Gallagher, "in your line. But it don't catch murderers. Murder itself is crude, and the guy with the crude tactics is the one who catches the guilty person." Then he grinned good naturedly: "What, I might say, is handing myself all the best of it, ain't it?"

AN air of hushed solemnity hung over the theater when the detectives returned. They passed through the house and went backstage via the boxes on the left.

Members of the company and crew sat around on property furniture, discussing the ghastly occurrence. The body had been turned over by the coroner to an undertaker.

The curtain was up and only two or three lights illumined the cavernous place. Inside the house could be seen two uniformed policemen, and, sitting in a corner of the stage was a plain-clothesman, whose costume might as well have been the conventional blue and brass for all the chance there was of mistaking his profession. Another plainclothesman was in the corridor, and this one came forward for orders when Marty Gallagher arrived.

Gallagher assembled the company and spoke briefly.

"There's a whole lot to this thing we haven't found out yet," he announced frankly, "but there ain't any use keeping all of you worried. I'm going to let you go home, but before you do, please everybody leave address and telephone number with Mr. Samuels so we can get to you tomorrow if you're needed. I'm going to ask you not to leave town until this thing is cleared up, and I also want to know from any of you if you saw anything unusual tonight before we found Thornton's body?"

There was a chorus of negation.

"Did anybody see Maj. Manning backstage?"

Two or three said that they had, but declared that they paid no attention since, because of Doris's participation in a number of productions, they took him for granted.

"Did anybody see Mr. Weldon back here?" asked Gallagher.

Lola Gresmer's eyes flashed to Martin Vance, the stout little character man. Hanvey saw the look and he also saw Vance frown and shake his head.

"Didn't you see Mr. Weldon?" he inquired, nodding toward Vance.

The actor flushed.

"What makes you think that, Mr. Hanvey?"

"Did you see him, or didn't you?"

Vance shifted awkwardly from one foot to the other.

"Honest, Mr. Hanvy, I don't want to get mixed up in this thing, and——"

"Say, listen here; you!" broke in Gallagher sharply. "You'll be a darn sight better off if you don't try to withhold anything from us. Now, come clean: did you see Carey Weldon backstage?"

Vance shot a troubled glance at the tall, erect figure of Carey Weldon. That young gentleman smiled and nodded.

"Yes sir," said Vance. "I saw him."

"When?"

"Just a few minutes before the body was found."

"That was when he was with Miss Manning?"

"No, sir. He was alone."

"It was when I came back to speak to Maj. Manning," interrupted Weldon, but Gallagher silenced him.

"We'll talk to you later, young man."

"Very well." Carey's face grew white, but he did not argue. Gallagher turned back to Martin Vance.

"Did you see Mr. Weldon when he came backstage with Miss Manning?"

"Yes, sir. I passed them in the corridor."

"And you also saw Weldon backstage before that?"

"Yes."

"He was alone then?"

"Yes."

"Where did you see him?"

Vance looked utterly miserable.

"I saw him coming out of the dressing room corridor," he said weakly. "But I don't think——"

"I didn't ask you to think, Mr. Vance." He gestured toward the white-faced assemblage. "Go home, all of you. Maj. Manning, I'll ask you and Mr. Weldon to come downtown with Mr. Hanvey and myself. That will be all."

IT was a queer procession that went to the police station: Gallagher with Maj. Manning and Doris and Max Rose. Hanvey with Carey Weldon, Terry Mooney and Ken Johnston. Just as they stepped into the taxi, Lola Gresmer and Anice Garet emerged from the theater alley and Mooney begged Hanvey to wait.

"Honey," he said. "I'll be around in the morning to see you."

The pretty little blonde smiled gamely. "I'll be watching for you, Terry."

He pressed her hand. "Keep a grip on yourself. I know tonight has been pretty tough."

"I'll get over it. And don't you work too hard."

He laughed shortly. "I'll only be worried about whether you're asleep or not."

"I'm dead tired . . . so forget it." She extended one firm, warm hand to Jim Hanvey and her eyes sparkled up at him. "Good night, Mr. Hanvey."

"'Night, Miss Garet."

"I just want you to know that I think you're a peach."

"Hmph! Pay me a few more compliments like that and you'll have me trying to spike Terry's guns."

"It'd be a cinch—for you."

"Yeh . . . ? It ain't even decent to kid a fat old codger like me."

"Try me!" she challenged.

"Yes—try her," cut in Mooney. "All that will happen to you will be that you'll get burnt—like I did."

Jim chuckled. "I judge that she's still keeping you guessing, ain't she?"

"And I always will," she flashed, "even if I'm sap enough to commit matrimony with him at some very future date."

She waved gaily to them as the car drove away and Hanvey leaned back against the upholstery and emitted a vast sigh.

"Gosh!" he murmured, "just to be young and in love—and thin!"

At headquarters Gallagher addressed Maj. Manning and Carey Weldon.

"Gents," he said, "I can either make this pleasant or unpleasant. You can write your own ticket."

"'Here's a trophy I got off their porch, Marty."

"What do you mean?" asked the major.

"Just this: I'd like to have you agree to stay with us for a couple of days. If you say no, I can hold you under a murder charge."

"If we stay voluntarily, there will be no charge formally docketed against us?"

"Not till we get some more dope. That ain't a promise, of course, but it's the way I think things will work out."

"I'll stay," said Carey Weldon promptly.

"So will I," agreed the major.

GALLAGHER turned to the desk sergeant. "Private room for each—and they're to talk to nobody without orders from us."

Doris, pale and drawn, touched Hanvey's sleeve.

"May I go in the room with my father?" she pleaded. Jim looked at Gallagher and the latter nodded.

"All right with me. Sergeant, I'm turning 'em over to you.'

The inspector, Jim Hanvey and the three reporters adjourned to Gallagher's private office. Ken Johnston spoke.

"Chief," he said, "I think you kind of slipped with Maj. Manning."

"How so?"

"Unless I'm mistaken, we've already shoved an extra on the streets saying that he had been charged with killing Thornton."

Marty shrugged.

"Let it go," he grinned. "If you need protection on it we'll make the charge. He'll be getting off light enough with just that anyway."

"You don't think he did it?"

"Hell, no! I ain't saying this for publication, but I'm betting my badge Mary Thornton bumped him off."

Terry Mooney leaned forward. "How about Mr. Weldon?" he asked, "and John Norris?"

"Bunk! Murders are all the same. There's always a lot of funny circumstances that look important just because a guy has been croaked. Suppose I got busted on the dome this evening and drew a ticket for the cemetery; why, first thing you know, the dicks would have rounded up all you birds and everything you've said and done tonight would look awful keen when really it wouldn't mean anything. You got to sift out what's important and what ain't."

"Yes, I know," agreed Mooney, "and I know I'm just a kid, and green at this sort of thing; but surely there isn't any more against Mrs. Thornton than there is against these others."

"O! there ain't, ain't there? Listen, youngster—wait 'til you've been hitched for twenty years and you've worn your wife down to a half crazy skeleton with mistreatment . . . and then you let her find out that you're giving her the go-by for a nineteen year old cutie . . . and see whether you change your mind. Why, this dame was cuckoo—she said so herself." He turned to Hanvey. "Don't you think I'm right, Jim?"

The big man moved his head slowly from side to side, and blinked sleepily.

"I ain't got but one definite idea on this case," he confessed.

They sat forward eagerly.

"What is it?" asked Johnston.

"I'd bet my hat," breathed Jim, "that it wasn't suicide."

"Funny, ain't you!" scoffed Gallagher. He touched a button on his desk and the uniformed orderly answered. "Dean," he snapped, "bring Weldon in here." And, as the orderly vanished, he turned to the newspaper men. "You boys can sit in, if you want—but don't print anything without talking it over with us."

"Holy smoke!" ejaculated Johnston, "all we get is exciting news and orders not to print it. Why, this town will be cockeyed in the morning."

"All right! All right! I'll see that you get a good story. Just wait till we finish with Weldon"

Carey entered the room and stood just inside the door; tall, erect and dignified. He met Gallagher's eyes levelly.

"Just a few questions, Mr. Weldon. As I understand things you had been riding with Miss Manning just before you went backstage the first time. Is that true?"

"Yes."

"What caused you to go riding then?"

"I was trying to talk Miss Manning out of going backstage."

"Why?"

"Because I knew her father was there—and I knew why he was there."

"Did you have a pleasant ride?"

"No."

"Why not?"

Weldon's thin face flushed.

"Because Miss Manning broke off her engagement to me during that ride."

"Ah . . . Broke off her engagement, eh?"

"That is what I said."

"I know you did. Did you ask her whether she intended eloping with Thornton tonight?"

"Yes."

"What did she say?"

"She said she was eloping with Thornton. She said she was going with him to New York to accept a part in the play in which he was scheduled to star very soon."

"Mmmm . . . Did she happen to mention whether she was in love with Thornton?"

WELDON was trembling, but he controlled his voice.

"She said that she was."

"Did she say anything about marrying him?"

"Yes. She said that Thornton intended to divorce his wife and marry her."

"And then she broke off her engagement to you?"

Carey nodded.

"Yes . . ."

"And all of that happened just before you returned to the theater, didn't it?"

"Yes."

"You were pretty upset?"

"Naturally."

"You were really sore, weren't you?"

"I suppose I was."

"Don't you know?"

"I was."

"That was when you went backstage, presumably to speak to Maj. Manning, wasn't it?"

"That was when I went backstage to speak to Maj. Manning. It was not presumably."

"I see . . . Did you speak to him?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"I didn't see him."

"Where was he?"

"I don't know."

"Weren't you surprised at not seeing him sitting where he was supposed to be?"

"Yes."

"What did you do then?"

"I looked for him."

"Where?"

"Everywhere backstage."

"In Wylie Thornton's dressing room?"

"No."

"You went down that corridor, though, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Didn't you have reason to believe he might be in Thornton's dressing room?"

"I didn't think he was there."

"But you should have thought so—under the circumstances, shouldn't you?"

WELDON'S eyes blazed. "If this is a third degree, it will get you nowhere, Gallagher I am trying to tell the truth."

"O! surely you are." Marty's voice was heavy with sarcasm. "It just fortunately happens that the truth isn't hurting you a bit. That's fine . . . You hunted for Maj. Manning because you wanted to see him. He wasn't where he was supposed to be, and there was only one logical place to look. You went almost to the door of that logical place and then just happened not to go in. Very thoughtful . . . for yourself."

"Are you accusing me of killing Thornton?"

"Not yet, I'm not. But I'm getting pretty damned interested in that idea. Now you say you're telling the truth. All right—answer me this—weren't you sufficiently sore at Thornton to have killed him?"

"I don't know."

"Your girl had just ditched you for him. She was going to elope with him. You thought he was a rotter. Now listen, Weldon—I'm no fool. I can imagine what happened on that ride and just how you felt about things. It don't sound reasonable to me that you went right to Thornton's dressing room door and didn't go in. If you had really been serious about hunting for Maj. Manning, you'd have gone in, because you had every reason to believe he was in there. But my idea is that you didn't want to see the major at all. I believe that you've got enough red blood in your veins to have wanted to have it out with Wylie Thornton. And what's more, I think you did precisely that little thing."

Weldon bowed.

"I don't blame you for thinking as you do, Gallagher. But I had nothing to do with killing Thornton and didn't know he was dead until I reached his dressing room with Miss Manning."

"Which is exactly what everybody claims," snapped Marty. "I suppose the next person I talk to will try to make me believe that Wylie Thornton is still alive."

The orderly escorted Weldon back to his comfortable barred room. And when the door closed behind him, Marty Gallagher rubbed his hands.

"I've got a hunch," he declared, "that he's the baby who bumped Thornton off."

"Why so?" inquired Hanvey softly. "What has made you forget Mary Thornton so suddenly?"

"Just one thing," said Gallagher. "If it hadn't been for that wallop on the jaw I'd have been sure it was the wife. But she couldn't have done that with her fist, and most likely it wasn't done with a gun butt. And looking at Weldon, it suddenly struck me that there was a baby big enough and mad enough to have poked Thornton good and hard. Sore: see? Scrapper. Zowie! Right on the button. Thornton goes down and hops up. Grabs the prop gun with its silencer and real bullets. Weldon wrestles it from him and—bango! he has killed Thornton." Marty beamed pridefully on the crowd. "Ain't that a reasonable hunch?"

"It's perfect," applauded Hanvey. "There's only one more thing to be explained:"

"Yeh—Killjoy! What's that?"

"I want to know what this young multi-millionaire did with the four hundred dollars he stole off Thornton's body after he had done the killing?"

KEN JOHNSTON telephoned his city editor and dictated a story which met with the approval of Marty Gallagher and Jim Hanvey. Then he and the other two newspaper men returned to their cane chairs, tilted them against the wall, lighted cigarets and commented on the undiminished intensity of the heat. Jim Hanvey uttered a groan.

"You boys don't know nothin'," he declared, "and please goodness! you'll never learn. Think of weighin' almost three hundred pounds and having to stand this."

"I ain't got that much imagination," declared Marty. "I couldn't even think of weighing that much." His eyes crinkled. "And the trouble with you, Jim, is that all the fat ain't on your mezzanine, either."

"Not making any dirty cracks about my dome, are you, Marty?"

"Well, it might be taken that way."

"Because I suggested that maybe Carey Weldon didn't have any reason for swiping four hundred dollars off Thornton?"

"Yes." Gallagher was frankly worried. "This is a queer case, Jim. Of course there's always a lot of things about every murder that look queer for awhile, but this is the funniest ever. We get suspect after suspect and the case against each is perfect. Except."

"Except what?"

"One thing. Seems like there's always just that one thing to keep you from being sure it's the bird it ought to be."

"Right-o. And everything you said about Weldon sounded good. But figuring Weldon, Manning, John Norris or Mary Thornton you've got to explain that money. None of them stole it—or if they did, it must have been Mary Thornton."

"Or somebody who wanted to make it look like robbery. Manning and Norris said they went in the room, saw the body and did some heavy thinking. They could have thought that as well as anything else, and they had plenty time. Weldon most likely had time enough, too."

"But," broke in Terry Mooney excitedly, "if Mr. Norris told the truth about Thornton being dead when he got there, then Carey Weldon couldn't have killed him, because he didn't go backstage until after Norris had left."

Hanvey looked admiringly at the youngster, but Gallagher was skeptical.

"So Weldon says. How do we know he ain't lying to save his own skin? How do we know he hadn't been backstage before that?"

"Maj. Manning says he hadn't, and the ushers saw him sitting out front."

"But they can't swear they saw him every minute. And as for the major—remember he's a suspect, too. Besides, Carey Weldon is his friend, and maybe his future son-in-law."

"Did it ever occur to you, Marty," Hanvey asked, "that maybe everybody you've talked to has told the truth?"

"Hell, No!" answered Gallagher.

"Why not?"

"Because somebody killed him—that's why."

"Why wasn't it the person who stole that money?"

"You mean you think there's somebody else mixed up in this that we haven't uncovered yet?"

"Well, I wouldn't go on record as saying that I really thought that . . . but it certainly is as easy to believe as that one of these suspects stole two-thirds of a pocketbook content, ain't it?"

"Hmm! I'll tell you what I think, Jim—I think Maj. Manning and John Norris are telling the truth and that Carey Weldon killed Thornton. All I need to make me positive sure is one more tie-up. If I could connect Weldon with that pocketbook in any other way except on a robbery motive, I'd let the others go and call it a settled case. He had the motive, the chance and the youth and power to give Thornton that bust on the jaw. Some time soon I'll connect that bozo up with an interest in Thornton's pocketbook and then . . . curtain."

Jim hoisted himself from his chair with a great physical effort.

"And I'm ready to call it a night. Gosh! I'm tired. Any of you boys going my way?"

No one moved and Hanvey waddled heavily from the room. He walked through the downtown section, still brilliantly illuminated for the benefit of late Saturday night crowds, and came at length to the Mountain House.

He reached his room and disrobed slowly, eventually encasing his elephantine figure in pajamas done in lavender and cerise impressionistic design. Gaudy pajamas constituted Jim's secret vice, and now he cast a furtive and somewhat admiring glance at his mirrored self before climbing into bed.

He did not immediately go to sleep. He picked up a bar of chocolate from the tabouret near the bed and carefully unwrapped the tinfoil. Then he opened a detective novel entitled "The Mystery of Alley B," adjusted the pillows under his bulbous head, took a large bite of the chocolate and sighed with luxurious satisfaction. And an observer would have noticed that the exploits of Jim's fictional detective brought a light of enthusiasm into those fishy gray eyes which no contact with a real murder mystery could do.

JIM slept gloriously late the following morning. He waked to the chiming of church bells. A gentle breeze drifted in through the open window and fanned his big figure caressingly. For perhaps a half hour he lay in gorgeous comfort, then telephoned downstairs for a modest breakfast of grapefruit, oatmeal, scrambled eggs, bacon, hot biscuits and coffee. The noon hour was near at hand when Jim had completed his breakfast, his bath and his dressing.

At twelve-thirty the telephone rang. It was Marty Gallagher.

"Anything new?" inquired Jim lazily.

"Nothing important. I've talked to a few members of the company, to Doris Manning, and also to a bird who runs the garage across the way from the Edwin Booth theater."

"Yeh?"

"This gimmick says that he thought he saw some one hanging around that alley—the one that leads to the stage door—early in the evening: just when it was getting dark."

"Most likely Carey Weldon."

"That's what I thought. But I was passing the dope along to you because there is a chance it might have been somebody else and if it was it would tie up with your idea that none of the birds we have so far would have copped Thornton's money."

"Attaboy, Marty. You don't want me today, do you?"

"Not specially, Jim. If I do, I'll call."

"And meanwhile, I'll take it easy. Today is sure gonna be another scorcher."

Hanvey immersed himself once again in his novel. The plot had thickened, and Hanvey was utterly bewildered by the puzzle. He read with the eager avidity of a kid on his first mystery story . . . and he didn't stop until three o'clock when he reached the end of the last page. He placed the book aside reverently.

"Gosh!" he murmured, "who ever would of guessed that that bird done it!"

He sat staring out of the window. The sky was of azure; a solemn hush hung over the city. Save for the honk of automobile horns and the occasional clang of a street car gong, few noises came to him from the street below. It was a perfect Sunday. He closed his eyes and dreamed of the green countryside, of bathing pools and of golf courses . . . and at first he didn't even realize that the telephone was ringing. He reached for it unhappily, believing it was Marty Gallagher. But instead it was a fresh cool voice, a voice which brought a smile to Jim's lips and a warm glow to his heart.

"Mr. Hanvey?"

"Yes?"

"This is Anice Garet."

"The bumping of my heart told me that."

She laughed. "I am being kidded by an expert, am I not? Listen: You busy this afternoon?"

"Please gosh—No."

"How about a ride through the country in a Push-It-Yourself?"

"O, golla . . . Sure!"

"I'll meet you in the hotel lobby in ten minutes. Can I bring the boy friend?"

"Young Mooney?"

"Himself, in person."

"Surest thing you know. 'We'll play triangle. That's a swell game—before you're married."

Hanvey actually adjusted himself with eagerness. He liked the young couple: the fresh-eyed, eager, pretty little blonde ingenue, and the thoroughly boyish Terry Mooney. He was standing at the curb when the rented car whirled up and Anice leaped out to greet him. She surveyed him enthusiastically.

"I thought I had dreamed it," she announced, "but I see it's real."

"Now listen, Miss Garet—if you start kidding me about this tummy, I ain't gonna play."

"Just the same," she observed critically, "you ought to be good-natured, and that's something Terry always isn't."

"Only most of the time," grinned the young man at the wheel. "Hop in, Mr. Hanvey."

"I'll get in," said Jim. "But I'm hanged if I'll hop. It'd wreck this vehicle."

He settled himself in the back with Anice, and the car rolled slowly through the city and then headed for the countryside.

The afternoon was perfect and the roads which wound through the valley on the other side of West mountain were jammed with cars. It was obvious to Jim that the young folks were trying to shake off the pall which had settled over them from the tragedy of the previous night, and he entered into their mood. They talked of things in general, and then of themselves and their plans.

"Terry's a playwright, ain't he?"

"I'm trying to be," answered the youngster. "But I've got a heap to learn."

"I'll say he has," interrupted Anice. "And it's mostly about women."

"Aren't you teaching him?" inquired Hanvey.

"She's not," said Terry positively. "If women were all like her there'd be no clinches at the end of plays. They'd all wind up with the heroine saying 'Maybe' and the hero remarking 'O, Lord! When?'"

"Aw, now, Anice—that's no way to treat a young man like Terry. If you handle him that way, how do you ever expect him to write the Great American Drammer which will make him rich and you a great actress?"

"If he can write a play that'll make me a great actress he will be a wonder."

TERRY took his eyes off the road long enough to glance at Hanvey.

"The kid really is clever," he averred stoutly. "She's young and hasn't much judgment, of course . . . as is shown by the fact that she isn't yet Mrs. Terry Mooney—but honest, Jim—Jed Samuels says she's got a whale of a lot of stuff, and believe me, Jed isn't a bit loose with his compliments."

"What we need," broke in Anice, "is a break—and maybe you can give it to us, Mr. Hanvey."

"Any way I can help . . ."

"You can. Terry works like a dog. He's a good reporter and they pay him thirty-five a week which sounds fair but doesn't take into consideration all the feature stories he does, and also the fact that he is dramatic critic for the Evening Record."

Terry laughed gaily. "Fat lot of importance to the critic's job in a burg this size."

"It's kept me from getting panned," she declared. "But this is the way of it, Mr. Hanvey—they know that Terry has hung around the theater all the time——"

"For reasons!" interrupted Mooney.

"——And so they've taken him off all his other work and turned him loose on this Thornton story. Ken Johnston is in charge, but Ken is really on the morning paper staff. Now I know there's going to be a lot of good dope uncovered, and I know that Jim Hanvey will be the man to uncover it—not that conventional Marty Gallagher. What I want to know, Mr. Hanvey, is this: Won't you try to give Terry a break by handing him some good stuff? That'll make them realize that he's a first class reporter and not just a sort of man of all work."

Jim was smiling.

"And if I give him some good stuff and he gets a raise—do I get a wedding invitation?"

"Some day . . . maybe. Even if I marry some one else."

"If you're thinking of that—count me I'm out."

"All right then," she dimpled. "Just to please you, Mr. Hanvey, I'll promise to marry Terry Mooney . . . if he'll have me."

"Try me," challenged Terry. "Any minute from now on."

"There's your chance," whispered Jim.

She smiled up at him. "I should be a fool," she said. "Terry may not be a great playwright, but he's certainly impetuous."

Terry spoke without turning.

"Nothing new on the case today, is there, Mr. Hanvey?"

"Not that I know of."

"Spoken to Marty this morning?"

"Uh-huh. But there's nothing stirring."

"When there is," begged Anice, "You'll protect Terry, won't you?"

"I sure will. If I get hold of anything good, he'll have it first crack. And now . . . I'm getting hungry. I didn't eat hardly any breakfast."

Terry turned back toward the city and on the way in they discussed restaurants. Eventually they discovered a mutual passion for chop suey and within fifteen minutes were seated in a little booth at the rear of a disreputable Chinese place which they declared served the best meals in town.

Jim felt good all over. He looked at the two young, eager faces opposite and suddenly he asked a queer question.

"You two kids are awful crazy about each other, ain't you?"

"I am about her," answered Terry promptly.

"And I——," she said, "I guess I'm just crazy."

But at the same moment she reached over and took Terry's hand in hers, and the eyes she turned toward the big detective were filled with pride.

"He's a great kid, Jim Hanvey. In spite of my better judgment—I'm for him."

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

WORMS

By Lionel Brown

Young Sir Merrick Ponsonby, Master of Castle Caereinion, Was Known by His Wife's Relatives as "Worms," but, Like All Worms, He Had His "Turning."

The rod bent double, then straightened again as the line came back empty.

CAPT. LORD waved a lemon gloved hand towards the heavy battlements of Castle Caereinion.

"Was at school with the chap who owns that little lot, we christened him 'Worms' first term and it stuck to him through Cambridge."

His companion's hazel eyes shot a glance at the half hidden pile of frowning stone rising like a gray wraith through the trees.

"Worms'? Why?"

"O, it is fitted. He's one of those abhorrent souls every one treads on."

"Why doesn't he turn and bash them?" flashed Miss Blundell whose own soul was a turbulent thing.

Capt. Lord laughed.

"What's the good of a worm turning, it only gets on it's bally back——" his words ended abruptly, "I say—look out!"

In the emotion of the moment Beatrice had trodden heavily on the accelerator, then realized too late that Gibbon Hill has elbows worthy of respect. With a cobblike rush the long car skidded across the smooth worn rocky surface of the mountain road and subsided comfortably in the soft bosom of the off side ditch.

"I knew you'd mess us up!" Norman Blundell sprang angrily from the car. "Why the blazes will you insist on trying to talk and drive?"

"Cyril's fault!" opined his sister lamely. "He was bleating about Worms."

Norman clambered morosely into the driving seat.

"Push, all of you, before she sinks! Look up, father!"

With the "lowered resistance" of the modern parent Mr. Blundell senior promptly obeyed.

It took five minutes feverish effort on the part of every one—including the engine—to prove that the car was there to stay. The culprit, sensibly abstaining from the ways and means argument that followed, leaned her elbows on the parapet of the old bridge and stared despondently at the river below. A tall man in a shabby homespuns was wading with upstream skillfully plying a fly rod, his high featured face wore a rapt expression, a battered brier was clenched tenaciously in one corner of his good natured mouth. Though city born, Beatrice was a sportsman and her interest awakened as the fisherman cleverly steered his fly under an overhanging willow. A sudden swirl was followed by a splash—for a moment the rod bent double, then straightened out as the line came back empty.

"Damn!" said the fisherman heartily.

"Damn and damn and damn——" A dislodged pebble from above cut short the monologue and he looked up startled.

"Sorry!" he stammered. "Thought you alone!"

Beatrice laughed.

"Damn him again if you like—I expect he deserves it."

The fisherman's brown face lit with a smile.

"So does really, the old brute beats me every time—I've been after him for hours!"

The speaker's gray eyes reflected the purple of the mountains, his deep voice had a tune in it.

With a twinge of irritation Beatrice noted Cyril Lord was helping her up on the bridge.

"Well—this is luck!" he vociferated. "See how goes it, Worms?"

The bronze of the fisherman's face changed to dusky red.

"Oh—hello!" he responded uneasily. "Cyril—where have you come from?"

"Raining. Car ditched up here." Explained the captain cheerfully. "Any place to lend?"

With slow strides the fisherman ascended to the road and was duly introduced. Yes he could send men and cars—in the meantime would they come up to the house for a drink?

That the drink should develop into a meal was inevitable, for Worms had taken into Beatrice Blundell's gold flecked eyes and realized that the sun was not the only light of the world.

The other members of the party by situation also had its effect. Capt. Lord quickly decided that though master of the lower fourth was a fitting subject for kicks Sir Merrick Ponsonby of Castle Caereinion was a plant worth cultivating. He confided this opinion to Norman Blundell and, as they were in complete accord.

"Jolly place for a week-end," observed Norman. "Needs gingering up though."

"Rather!" agreed the captain. "Plenty of sport, too—without working for it!"

The old Blundell rested from his labors with knife and fork and glass—and the latter—Merrick showed to explore the curiosities of the antique fortress, at least he started to do so, but unnoticed the party dwindled to two and he found himself done with Beatrice on the circular top of the fighting keep. Below, Norman rolled the smiling Shropshire plain, gold studded with ripening corn; to the west rose the rugged outline of Wales, jagged as a shark's jaw; immediately beneath, multi-colored woods crouched like kneeling battalions round the old castle, while here and there between them flashed the silver hurrying river, its million eyes winking in the clear sunlight.

Beatrice stood, her copper head thrown back, reveling in the scene.

"Glorious!" she whispered. "Just glorious!"

"That's what I think," responded the delighted Worms, "but I've never known it looked quite so splendid before."

CHILD that he was in affairs of the heart he could not know why the familiar scene was suddenly metamorphosed into a new and wondrous fairy land; but he did not know that his blood was tingling strangely, that this creature of grace and color by his side possessed the most maddeningly kissable mouth in the whole world.

"I like a little of everything," confided Beatrice. "London is——'life.'"

"Yes," he admitted a shade reluctantly. "But life here is as easy as a dream, and 'to dream is to live' you know. I always feel such a fool in London."

"O, that's just shyness!" she laughed. "You are dreadfully shy, aren't you?"

"Horribly! But it's not altogether my fault. I'm the last Ponsonby and they kept me in a glass case as a kid till I suppose I grew to like it——" he broke off suddenly. "Sorry, I didn't mean to bore you, but you—you're different, I've never talked like this to any one before."

"I understand," she murmured, the gold in her eyes darkening to copper brown. "But I think you ought to give outside things a run occasionally. The world's moving, you know."

"Yes," he grinned. "Like goldfish in a bowl—round and round to nowhere. You live in London, don't you?"

His frank interest pleased her.

"Yes, Hampstead. I'm coming of age next month and we're having a 'do' at the Savoy—will you come?"

"I—I," he stammered. "But your people don't even know me."

Beatrice hid a smile.

"It's MY coming of age—not theirs!"

"I'll come!" said Merrick, taking a deep breath.

In January they married. By June, Merrick was known to his wife's relations as "Worms."

Bit by bit Castle Caereinion became the Blundell family's country club; clannishness was a fetish of their tribe, fifth cousins claimed close relationship, in their legions they clamored and swarmed with their attendant friends and favorites till the ancient fortress hummed with their presence. And, of course, there was Capt. Lord, always Capt. Lord, friend of the family who stuck closer than any brother; always beautifully tailored, always the life and soul of the party, always eager to anticipate Lady Ponsonby's every wish.

By nature Beatrice was loyal, but loyalty cuts two ways and the inborn loyalty to her people was too strong for the later growth, born of her love for Merrick. For love him she did, in a passionate, inconsistent way, and had there been more iron and less gold in his character she would have made him an excellent wife. But somehow his very niceness separated them; he was so easily pleased, so diffident, that imperceptibly he faded into the background till he became as unimportant in the scheme of things as the stone watchman who had stood for centuries on the fighting keep. As the months sped the old order vanished, and the new—daily more assured of it's footing—made life a hectic whirl.

Merrick, uneasily aware of the trend of things, tried to call a halt, but the very reasonableness of his appeals provoked Beatrice to unreasonable resentment—the pace was tearing her nerves to shatters. She would argue fiercely that life was meant to be lived, and Merrick would sigh and give way. These easy, empty victories left Beatrice oddly dissatisfied, while Merrick, with love eating out his heart, wrapt himself in that impenetrable reserve of the sensitive too often mistaken for apathy.

And so the rift widened.

THERE came a week-end dinner—arranged for the benefit of Blundell Sr., who was promoting a new company—when things reached a climax. Just as dinner was announced two cheery carloads of "hopefuls" arrived unexpectedly and turned the sedate gathering into a hilarious riot.

Old Blundell, irritated at the miscarriage of his plans, attended rather more closely than usual to the Caereinion wines and badly overstepped the mark. Norman, egged on by a bevy of giggling youth, conceived the big idea of giving the local snobs a "shake up"; dressed in somebody's frock, he treated the company to a song and dance then charming the more daring cabarets of Paris.

Lord Cleobury—the acknowledged local leader—was the first to leave. His example was followed en masse till, of Merrick's friends, none remained. Sick with shame the owner of Castle Caereinion stole up to bed leaving the revelers in possession. But the events of the evening rankled—the worm was beginning to turn.

Morning found Merrick for the first time in his life thoroughly fed up. After luncheon he sought out Beatrice; she had admitted to a headache beyond the reach of aspirin, he would suggest a breezy run to the coast, alone together, far from hypnotic Blundell influence, their old understanding of each other would put everything right—he might even persuade her to stay a day or two, and let the crowd shift for themselves.

The idea hot upon him he ran whistling downstairs. Through the open hall doors came the purr of an exhaust; he reached the steps in time to see his wife's new two seater—his latest gift—disappearing down the drive. His idea had been forestalled by the ever thoughtful Capt. Lord.

With wrinkled brow Merrick turned into the library. Old Blundell, in two armchairs, was sleeping off the effects of the night before. Merrick averted his eyes from the snoring mass of obese tissue and reached up for a book. His elbow caught a tall vase of flowers—down it came, bringing a deluge on the sleeping man.

There followed a startled bellow and much spluttering.

"Damnation! What the——!"

"Awfully sorry, sir," apologized Merrick. "It was an absolute accident."

"Accident?" stormed the other, his face ludicrously powdered with pollen. "Accident be hanged—you did it on purpose! Every one in this cursed house makes me the butt for their fool jokes!"

Still spluttering he stamped out vowing vengeance.

An overpowering desire seized Merrick to be alone, absolutely alone. On the river he might find peace.

As he passed through the billiard room Norman and a pimply faced cousin were playing a languid after luncheon game with a couple of noisy flappers. In the gun room beyond, Merrick collected his tackle and reached down his rod—for ten years it had stood high amongst his cherished gods—it felt strangely limp. He drew it from its ease. The top joint was broken!

He fingered it unbelievingly, dull anger smouldering in his breast, then flung into the billiard room.

"Look!" he cried. "Look at my rod!"

Norman, in the middle of a break, glanced round casually.

"I did that—it was rotten."

Merrick swallowed hard.

"How?" he managed to ask. "You don't fish."

"O, Kitty here wanted some plums and I couldn't reach them with a rake."

"And you used my best fly rod?" Merrick's voice cracked with emotion.

Norman leaned over the table to play.

"You can get another."

"Not like this!" choked Merrick. "I've never felt one half so good."

Norman flung down his cue.

"O, for God's sake, don't whine. I'll pay for the beastly thing."

Blind fury seized Merrick. Snapping the broken joint to fragments he flung them in the other's face and stamped from the room.

In the cool woods by the river Merrick strove fruitlessly to regain his wonted calm. His mind leaped back to his homecoming from Cambridge on his father's death and his lazy acceptance of his mother's rule. He had never troubled to assert himself, the line of least resistance had been so easy. The line of least resistance—he laughed bitterly—that's all I'm fit for, I've taken it till it's damned me! I AM a worm, a rotten, crawling worm, and I'll never be anything else.

He walked till the dipping sun turned him homewards fagged out and morose.

The dressing gong sounded as he gained his room in the far west wing. Beatrice entered in a jade green frock; her copper head held high shone like a halo above her pale set face.

"Have you apologized to Norman?" she demanded.

"No," he frowned. "Why should I?"

Her pretty mouth had hardened of late, it was hard now.

"Because you insulted him—and father. You must apologize to both of them. I had to beg Norman not to go."

He turned away with a shrug.

"If you'd begged him TO go there'd be some sense in it. Anyhow, I'll not apologise."

Her lip curled.

"My relations are not good enough for you?"

Merrick swung round, exasperated.

"You know I don't mean that. But I can't stand them any longer."

She drew closer, her eyes points of accusing fire.

"You mean you can't stand ME any longer!"

Merrick choked; even in that hateful moment her beauty held him enthralled.

"You? My God, I want you, you alone, more than I've ever done, and they've taken you from me—you've no time for me now."

She laughed provocatively.

"How thrilling! The good old feudal baron with his pretty chattel safe in his castle. You'd like to keep me laid away in lavender—something to play with as a change from the dogs and horses! I'm to have no life apart, no likes and dislikes of my own, I'm to be bored, bored, bored, while you mince round and play the perfect gentleman!" She broke off breathless, her taut nerves aquiver.

Merrick's face was stiff and white.

"I only want to make you happy," he said huskily. "They—they're damning you and I can't stand by and see it happen!" Desperately he seized her arms, "Beatrice, for God's sake——"

"Stop!" she wrenched herself free. "As long as I stay here my people will be welcome. That's final!"

He ran his hand wildly through his hair.

"But I tell you I can't stick them any longer! I can't, I can't!"

"Then you force me to choose!" Her quiet was suddenly deadly. "I choose them."

As the door closed he sank hopelessly into a chair. The worm was crushed at last!

MERRICK sat numbed and rigid till the last details of the room were lost in the shrouding darkness. His head throbbed agonizingly, he felt dreadfully tried. The situation had suddenly, unbelievably, become impossible, but, short of ordering his servants to turn his wife's relations out of the house he could see no solution. It he did that Beatrice would keep her word and go with them—that was unthinkable; he could not tear Beatrice out of his heart.

He rose at last and opened the door. Dinner was over, a waft of carefree dance music filtered up from below mingled with carefree laughter. His absence made no difference! Trembling impotently he shut out the sound and crossing to the long window opposite flung it open and stepped out on to the narrow balcony. A breath of heather scented wind stole soothingly through his rumpled hair; the harvest moon was rising above the mountains, their sleeping indigo bulk breathed of freedom and peace. His burning hands clenched white on the cool stone coping. On the spur of the moment he made up his mind.

. . . . . .

It was nearly midnight when a contrite Beatrice stole into her husband's room. The bed was empty, silence answered her call. She looked round perplexed; an envelope protruding from the mirror caught her eye. She tore it open and read:

Dearest: I can't believe the choice you made this evening is your real choice so I'm going away to give you time to make sure. If you still love me as once you did, and as I shall always love you, you'll change your mind. But if you really meant what you said we must part—I can't live with that crowd any longer. MERRICK.

Beatrice crushed the note into a crumpled ball. Once again Merrick made her feel a fool!

Her contrition vanished, her cheeks burned resentfully. How they would all laugh over this and make idiot jokes about worms and their ways—about her husband!

She flung herself passionately on the empty bed and scalding tears filled her eyes, the bitter tears of humiliation.

. . . . . .

"Got a fag?" asked a cheerful voice.

Sir Merrick Ponsonby opened drowsy eyes; the ditch was deliciously comfortable and he felt disinclined to move, but already he had learned something of the communal ways of the road. He produced a yellow packet and proferring it took sleepy stock of his disturber; a man of middle height with the chest and shoulders of a giant swelling beneath his tight blue jersey.

"Ta!" The newcomer stuck a cigaret between his lips and secreting a second behind his ear dropped his bundle and lowered himself on to the grassy bank with a friendly grin.

"Padding it?"

The question was justifiable. A week's sunshine had deepened Merrick's brows to chestnut; his old tweeds were crumpled; determined to do nothing he disliked he had omitted to shave. The net result was astonishingly dissolute.

"My name's Johns," announced the man, tilting his leather peaked cap to the Beatty angle. "I'm making for new water works at Llanguenog—I'm done with the blinkin' sea!"

Merrick emitted a noncommittal grunt.

"Yes," continued the sailor expansively, "clean fed up I am, with roaches in me bunk and snakes in me bread, an' running here and there at the beck an' call of a parcel of lazy swabs forrard puffed up with brass buttons an' impudence. You're a landsman, ain't you?"

"Yes."

"And a blinkin' good judge, too. Only fools foller the sea. With—

"'Rocks an' fogs an' shatterin' storms,
An' breakers right ahead,
An' work o' nights an' work o' days,
Enough to strike you dead.'"

Merrick sat up startled: the familiar quotation sounded so incongruous up there in the mountains.

"Do you read poetry?"

Mr. Johns laughed. "I heard a fella spout that bit once an' it's about the only true thing was ever wrote about the bloomin' ocean. My idea o' life is to muck up enough money to buy a little pub an' live 'appy ever after—I don't mean selfishlike, I'd share it with other folk. Not like a sailorman I knew wot come in for a fortune and bought a pub; when opening time come an' folks got knocking on the door 'e shoves his 'ead out of a winder and asks them wot the 'ell they thought they was at. 'An't you goin' to open?' says one. 'You bet your sweet life, I ain't!' 'e says. 'I've bought this 'ere pub for meself!'" Mr. Johns frowned darkly. "I don't hold with that! 'Live an' let live' is my motter." He looked Merrick over. "Where are you heading for?"

"O, nowhere in particular."

The other spat contemptuously.

"A loafer, eh?"

"No! Out of a job."

Blushes like a gal! summarized Mr. Johns, eyeing him restlessly.

"A soft job I reckon. You don't look as if you'd ever done a day's work in your life."

Merrick rose resentfully.

"It's my business what I do."

The sailor sprang up.

"Steady on, mate, I ain't faulting you—but you looks flabby like. Wot do you work at?"

"I was in service," Merrick smiled faintly. "A valet, you know."

Mr. Johns forehead wrinkled.

"That's a sort of he-housemaid, ain't it?"

"That's it."

The sailor slung his bundle over his shoulder.

"Comin' my way?"

"I don't mind if I do," agreed Merrick. "My name's Smith."

Towards sundown they entered a tiny village nestling in a cleft of the mountains.

Before the first inn Mr. Johns stopped and tentatively wiped his mouth.

"'Ow about a pint? I've a bob or two left."

Merrick shook his head.

"No thanks. I'm not thirsty."

"Wot's that got to do with it?" demanded the other hotly. "You ain't a beast o' the field, wot only drinks when it's dry. Come on and 'ave one."

"No thanks, really I'd rather push on."

The sailor's broad mahogany face clouded with suspicion.

"'Struth, you're not a teetotal, are you?"

"No! O, no!"

A huge hand clamped itself on Merrick's arm.

"Come on then—to show there's no ill-feeling."

In the bar they met a navvy, also heading for the new reservoir, a dark negroid fellow with a squint. From him the sailor learned that Llanguenog was still twenty miles away and that hands were badly needed. He promptly ordered two quarts of beer for himself and the navvy. Merrick had a small whisky. Mr. Johns eyed it unfavorably.

"It's them small drinks makes all the drunkards," he declared. "You don't know you've 'ad one till you have another, and then you ain't sure."

Merrick in his turn ordered, and stood marveling at the ease with which his companions emptied their second quarts almost at a gulp.

When they left the inn the navvy attached himself to the party. "There's a good place to doss," he volunteered. "'bout a mile up the road—an old quarry."

Mr. Johns halted and contemplatively counted his money. "'Bout three pounds of 'am and a clutch 'o eggs is my mark," he announced, "but it won't run to it."

"Could we cook them?" questioned Merrick who had hitherto fed at cottages he passed.

"To be sure," affirmed the sailor. "I've a pan in me bundle. Which will it be—'am or eggs?"

"Both," said Merrick, leading the way into a grocer's. He gave an order that took the grocer ten minutes to pack and made Mr. Johns breathe heavily.

"'Struth," he muttered. "They must pay you 'valleys' mighty well. I wonder now, would they make me one?"

As Merrick gathered up his change he saw the navvy's broken nose flattened to a greenish blob against the window, his eyes hungrily devouring it's contents.

"We've enough for three," he invited, when they were on the road again. "Where's the quarry?"

The navvy led the way to a secluded spot on the edge of a big wood. A fire was built and Mr. Johns did wonders with his frying pan; Merrick never remembered having eaten so much in his life. Later, stretched by the fire they smoked and yarned till sleep claimed them.

LIGHT was graying into morning when Merrick was awakened suddenly by a stealthy movement—some one was bending over him. With premonition of danger strong upon him he lay very still, watching through half closed eyes. The navvy, one hand gripping a length of lead pipe ready to strike, was feeling cautiously through his pockets. With unbelievable delicacy of touch the wandering fingers found the note case and deftly abstracted it. For a moment the thief peered intently at his victim the lead pipe raised menacingly. Merrick let his breath flow naturally and waited till the navvy straightened up satisfied and turned to slip away, then his hand shot out and caught the fellow's ankle bringing him down with a crash! Spluttering oaths the man writhed round and struck—Merrick felt his arm go numb, fingers lose their hold.

Too late Mr. Johns awoke and charged; the navvy, doubling like a rabbit, fled up the narrow neck of the quarry into the dense wood beyond.

After half an hour's fruitless search they gave it up and returned to camp.

"'Ow much did 'e get?" demanded the sailor.

"All except eight shillings—the ungrateful swine!"

Mr. Johns drew a deep breath and consigned the navvy, his heirs and descendants, to eternal perdition.

"What will you do now?" he asked when he felt there was nothing left to be said.

Merrick was asking himself the same question. He had brought enough money to last him a couple of months and had made no provision for getting more. To go home now meant admitting defeat on the very threshold of his experiment. His faith in Beatrice was deep rooted, given time he felt she would sicken of the crowd, then, but not till then, would she be really his.

He sank onto a stone and stared blankly at nothing while the sailor bustled about preparing breakfast.

"Why not come along o' me?" suggested Mr. Johns through a mouthful of ham, "and get a bit o' muscle on them shoulders of yours."

The idea of working with pick and shovel for a weekly wage made a ludicrous appeal to Merrick. Why not—he thought, and his head went back in a peal of laughter.

"I'll try it!" he said.

Mr. Johns stretched out a huge hand.

"Put it there, sonny—you're not as soft as you look!"

LIFE at the new water works was incredibly rough. A thousand men of all sorts and types were engaged on the work; they ranged from absolute tyros—like Merrick—to skilled old timers who had spent their lives going from one new reservoir or railroad to another.

At first Merrick thought each day would be his last, that he would die from sheer fatigue. At night, too tired to speak, he would fall into his bunk "all standing," every untrained muscle in an agony of protest. Had it not been for the indefatigable Mr. Johns he certainly would have broken down under the terrible strain; but the sailor—who's cure for all ills was good food and plenty of it—would drag him protesting to the mess house and keep him awake till he had eaten enormously, then Merrick would stagger blindly back to their hut, to lie in dreamless torpor till the hooters screamed their summons to work next morning.

Bit by bit the weariness wore off, his blistered hands hardened, he found himself competing with the other men for his ganger's nod of approval. His companions were rough and tough and uncouth but he found more than one good heart among them; and on the whole he was popular enough.

The days slipped by uncounted till they ran into weeks, and still he worked on, a healthy carefree animal at peace with God and man. He had developed the queer ambition to stick it out till the job was done; he wanted to see the water trying conclusions with the dam he had sweated to build, to see it rushing imprisoned down the channels his pick had helped to excavate, and, above all, he did not want to leave Mr. Johns. Word had gone round the camp that Merrick had been in service and this was accepted as explanation for his different manners and speech, though at first he had to endure endless gibes and was nicknamed "Gentleman Smith."

One evening in the mess house he so far forgot himself as to say "please" to a new arrival, and was promptly called a flunkey.

"'E ain't!" roared Mr. Johns. "'E's a better man than you are!"

The newcomer—a hulking pitman—replied with a volley of unprintable abuse.

"Sock him!" ordered the sailor.

Merrick obeyed to the best of his ability, and received a thorough thrashing

Thereafter when work was done Mr. Johns—who had a science of fighting all his own—would take Merrick to a secluded spot and pummel him soundly, until one evening Merrick, who was quicker, knocked out his instructor. The sailor rose, holding his jaw, and shook hands.

"Now you go an' get that swab wot called you a flunkey!"

On the morrow—which was Sunday, the hallowed day for settling grievances—Merrick challenged his former opponent and turned the tables conclusively.

In the weeks that followed he had two more fights and gave such a good account of himself that the camp began to eye him with respect mingled with affection, for he was no shirker and was more than open handed with his money. Had Beatrice not been shut out of his life he would have been completely happy.

. . . . . .

There came a fateful day in October when a hundred pounds was stolen from the pay house while the clerk was answering a telephone call. Two men swore they had seen Dave Johns coming out of the place with a bag, and when it was proved he was not in attendance on his winch engine at the

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

The Art of Cake Making Requires Care and Attention That Is a Discipline in Itself.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

IT has been the custom of this column to recommend the making of a two egg or cup cake—this cake has about a thousand different names and as many variations—without any baking powder, letting the eggs, the steam generated in the oven, and also the good work done on the batter do the lightening of the mixture. The object in making the cake in this fashion has been to get one of as fine a texture as pound cake. It can be done, but there are many ifs in reference to it.

Now we can say that it has undoubtedly been a mistake to recommend this procedure, even though it is a possibility. There are too many strictures, or "ifs and ands." The formula is as brief as possible almost, but it is necessary, if the baking powder is omitted, to put many a phrase expressive of precaution or restriction into the statement of the method, and so the recipe will stretch out to too great length.

The product of this recipe, when the baking powder is omitted, is a delicate one. We might call it even a skilled product, and when a cake is so delicate a slight excess of flour added to the amount prescribed will make it a little too stiff and dry, while the other fault of leaving out a tablespoon or two may make all the difference between success to brag about and failure to be dismayed over. With experience there is little chance of using too much flour or too little, because the experienced one knows when a batter is just right. She can feel it through the spoon and sense it from the very bottom of the bowl.

Crumbly Cake.

The longer I live, the surer I am that many an amateur cake maker never gets her ingredients thoroughly together, or thoroughly amalgamated. For this reason her fruit cake will crumble instead of cutting in thin, almost transparent, sheets, though she uses the right recipe for making the latter sort of cake. And in other than her fruit cakes there will be a near crumbliness. Figuratively, the hand is the best binding element for cakes, and it does not have to get wet with the batter to be so.

This firm binding of a cake batter begins essentially with the right treatment of the butter. This should be creamed at a temperature that will allow it to become like a thick cream. It cannot be worked up thus if it is too cold. An old-fashioned way to get it just right was to scald out the cake bowl and wipe it dry, then put the butter in and let it stand for a few minutes. If the butter is not worked up to a thick creamy and pliable stage that will fairly dissolve the sugar, when these two ingredients are combined and wet ones added, there will instantly appear a great many small lumps all through the mixture. It is the butter that makes them, and when the butter melts with heat they will prevent a perfect texture. It does not matter so much when baking powder is used if this condition exists as it does when none is used.

We might go on telling how fine work in cake making must begin with the manipulation of the butter, and then everybody knows what a vast difference there can be when the eggs are not expertly beaten. After that flour can be added to the butter, sugar, eggs, and milk in such a way as practically to destroy the fine work that has gone before. We must say, however, that the one who can do the first part expertly is more than likely to be able to go on in the same way. The pity is that when the condition in a mixture is somewhat desperate any way, it is rendered quite so by the next piece of work done on it. The sure handed can do almost anything with a set of cake ingredients, even to lumping them all together without any previous work—butter not creamed; eggs not beaten first—and still not fail.

The Whole Cake Process.

Perhaps it is not worth while to talk about cake demanding exact proportions and that in the older days it was always considered best to weigh the ingredients. There are always people who will defy all the rules of exact measurements and still make a good cake. I have even seen an expert using unsifted flour satisfactorily, although it is almost a principle that the flour should be sifted once before measuring. There used to be a rule that a quart of unsifted flour would weigh a pound, but by experiment anybody can find that if she will measure flour after sifting it there is something else to consider. In order to keep it light and not let it sag down, the cup is filled by dipping the sifted flour into it spoonful by spoonful.

The baking of a cake requires care and attention that is a discipline in itself. A cake that is peaked and with that peak cracked is a poor cake in texture, but it is not the fault of the oven. A fault that will give a product usually better received than the stiff one is made with a batter that will give a crisp buttery edge with a center inclined to fall. This has too little flour, but even with a poor batter a cook who knows how to jockey a cake in the oven can get much better results than she can if she just puts unwarranted confidence in the oven without working with it much.

A Cup Cake Formula.

One-third to one-half cup butter, one cup sifted sugar, two eggs, one-half cup milk, one and one-half cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, from one-half teaspoon to a whole teaspoon vanilla, or other flavoring. Some people would use three level teaspoons baking powder with this amount of flour, but some makers of baking powder advise one teaspoon of baking powder per cup. We admitted above that we were wrong to think that it is easy to use this formula without any baking powder, nevertheless it can be done.

And, as to putting it together, we may try out a dozen fashions and we may vary it just as many times as we choose. With the batter quite correct a few floured raisins either whole or chopped can be used. We add a whole cup of fruit and nuts to this mixture, which must be baked slowly then to make the white fruit cake, and in this case we think it a bad thing to add more than one level teaspoon of baking powder, because we do not want our fruit cake as porous and spongy as the three teaspoons of baking powder would make it.

We can also add nuts to this mixture, either using the small amount or as many as a cup. A chocolate cake is also made with this formula. By scanting the flour and using the whites alone a white cake is made, and no matter what the variations we may always bake this cake in the cup cake shape, or in a small loaf or in layers, and when it is beautifully made and baked and iced fancifully, it has quality enough for the label birthday cake.

The Common Cup Cake Method.

Cream the butter thoroughly, work the sugar into the mixture gradually, beat the yolks of eggs and work them into the sugar and butter, stir the milk into this mixture, then sift the flour in small portions into this batter and work it in with good beating. Finally fold in with great care the whites of eggs beaten to a stiffness that will point. In making a fruit cake we may even fold in the whites of eggs after the fruit and nuts are added, and still get an excellent effect. The amount of baking powder is but scant.

Five Minute Cake.

We are accustomed to say that the expert cook can use her materials almost "any old way" and have no failures. For this reason she can, perhaps, put together a cake in five or ten minutes after she has assembled all her ingredients and pans and got her oven ready, which latter business she should start first of all.

With but a slight variation of the cup cake recipe she can get excellent effects. For this type of beating she may allow instead of the half cup of milk two-thirds, and she may scant the butter as little as a fourth of a cup, which scanting also helps in the beating. There is some method, however, even in doing this work. Put the sugar, flour, and butter into a mixing bowl, break the eggs into a measuring cup, and fill the cup up with the milk—the eggs will usually fill one-third of the cup, or a little more—and add the vanilla to this, then put them all together, beat five minutes, and bake the batter in tiny cup cakes. These when iced with a simple mixture of icing sugar and cream will make something as dainty as a bonbon.

The point is that the beating must be vigorous, and will, with a few trials, become expert. This putting of whole eggs into batters and then beating them with the rest of the ingredients is convenient and probably it could be done more often in making cake than we do, especially if we are vigorous beaters, or if we wish to work the batter with our hands. If a woman has not a strong wrist and has not learned to beat well, even in making this five minute cake she would do well to first cream her butter, then she may put all her ingredients with it at once and succeed. Of if she does not do this she can measure her butter and let it stand for an hour, where it will soften gradually and naturally, when but a few strokes will turn it into cream.

Layer Cake Method.

In making layer cakes with the butter batter or even with a sponge cake batter, some people cannot bake them so that they will be level and even. They get a layer that will have a great hump or something wrong with it. On that account we have thought that perhaps the best way to do in getting a layer cake, starting with the cup cake batter, was to put it together this way: Cream the butter, work in the sugar, drop into the butter and sugar one unbeaten egg yolk and cream it in, then the other and cream that in. Then add the milk and the flour gradually and finally fold in the whites beaten till they point. By beating the whites in this manner they are evenly textured and the working of egg yolks into batter, just as we do in making pound cake, also seems to make for even texture. Beating egg yolks with an egg beater and adding them to a batter is not likely to produce as uniform results in the hands of the amateur.

WORMS ---- ---- By Lionel Brown

time, and could not establish an alibi, the police were sent for. The sailor indignantly proclaimed his innocence and when warned by the sergeant that anything he said might be used against him he completely lost his temper. The sergeant ordered him to be handcuffed, but the two constables who attempted it were flung aside like thistledown; assisted by a third they closed on the accused while the sergeant brutally kneed him from behind.

A red mist rose before Merrick's eyes, he sprang on the sergeant sending a right hook crashing to the jaw—the man collapsed like an empty sack; his cap flying off, his head was laid open by a slab of rock as he fell. In the fight that followed the police used their batons with a will, and in the end the friends were dragged off bleeding and handcuffed to the nearest gaol.

BEFORE the tiral the charge of theft against the sailor was withdrawn—the two men who had informed against him had been caught trying to get away with the stolen money. Mr. Johns was discharged, but Merrick got "two months hard" for assaulting the police in discharge of their duty.

As 'Merrick Smith navvy' he appeared on the charge sheet, and as 'Smith' served his sentence.

When, one rainy morning in December, he was thrust outside the gaol the faithful Mr. Johns was there to meet him with the residue of his pay and an overcoat. They repaired to a convenient coffee house for breakfast and to review the situation.

Merrick was acutely homesick, his spell behind the bars had annulled all taste for further experiment. He ached to see Beatrice again, but the old loathing for "the crowd" was still strong.

"Look here, Dave," he said. "You're the best friend I've got. I want your advice."

And then he told his story.

When he finished the sailor sat gaping.

"'Struth, fancy your being a Sir and livin' in a castle! Struth!"

"Never mind about that," retorted his companion irritably. "What would you do if you were me?"

Mr. Johns leant his huge arms on the table and a slow grin widened his big mouth.

"Go 'ome an' be king, sonny, be king."

"But I can't start a rough house with my wife's relations," protested Merrick. "It isn't a navvy camp."

"Let them start it," corrected the sailor. "Then you sock 'em good and plenty. No woman respec's a man wot ain't master in his own 'ouse."

"I'm not sure of myself," complained Merrick. "Come and see me through, Dave."

The sailor shook his head.

"You've got to do this job on your ownyo—and if you're the man I think you, you damn well will do it."

"Well, come with me as far as the village?" begged Merrick. "You can stay at the pub there. I want to be sure you're somewhere handy in case I fail—for if I do I'll clear out for good."

Mr. Johns shook hands with great solemnity.

"Lead me to the pub."

In a secondhand overcoat split at the seams Sir Merrick Ponsonby unobstrusively entered the hall of Caereinion castle—to the disgust of Mr. Blundell Jr., who at that moment was kissing the second housemaid.

"Good Lord! Where have they dug you up?" demanded Norman ungraciously.

Merrick beamed, he was so pleased to be home again he was ready to beam at any one.

"O, tell you later. Where's Beatrice?"

Norman, who had put on flesh, eyed his erring brother-in-law with dyspeptic disapproval.

"You look like a bally tramp."

"Never mind that. Where is she?" persisted Merrick cheerfully.

"In the ballroom," admitted the other reluctantly. "We're rehearsing 'The Slave Girl' for Boxing day. All the company's with her—really you ought to . . ."

But Merrick was already striding across the hall. His wife, in the costume of a Persian slave, looked deliciously inviting . . . Before she knew what was happening, she was in her husband's arms being violently kissed.

"O, Merrick!" she clung passionately to him. "Where ever have you been?"

"Lots of places," he waved airily. "Tell you after dinner. I must change, I'm disgustingly grubby."

"But we've cut dinner," she explained. "We're rehearsing."

"O, hang rehearsing," he laughed. "Come along and talk to me while I feed—I'm famished."

A little worried pucker rose between Beatrice's eyes as she glanced round the room, then wistfully back at Merrick.

"I'd love to—but I can't leave them now," she whispered. "Things are in an awful mess. Really I can't. Come back when you've changed."

She was plucked away by an excited youth with a roll of music, and at once half a dozen clamorers engulfed her.

Once again Merrick felt the old chill, felt himself superfluous. He had come back ready to give "the crowd" another chance, probably there had been faults on both sides, perhaps he had been to finicking and precise; but again the whole atmosphere overpowered him sickeningly like a chloroformed cloth.

With a sigh he slipped away unnoticed.

Within three days of his return, Merrick's new personality had wilted, his "inferiority complex" was back again doing business at the old stand.

In the depths of dudgeon he sought out Mr. Johns, but that worthy's comments were so scathing that Merrick lost his temper and stamped back to the castle hating the whole human race. Before the steps stood Beatrice's two seater, Capt. Lord at the wheel; on the steps stood Beatrice engulfed by "The Slave Girl" company all talking at once.

Merrick edged his way to her side.

"Whither away, dear?"

She gave him a harassed look, and his gall rose as he noticed the tired lines about her eyes.

"Town. Half the costumes haven't come and the others are mouldy. I've phoned Dugards till I'm sick. Cyril says we can do the double run in twelve hours."

Merrick slid an arm through hers.

"I'd rather you didn't go," he said slowly.

Her eyes widened.

"But why? I must—or the whole show will fizzle out."

"Let it. I want you here."

She drew away frowning.

"You don't understand. There's hundreds of people coming to see it."

"She's got to go about my armor," proclaimed Norman loudly. "Don't butt in, Worms."

Merrick ignored the advice and crispfy addressed Capt. Lord.

"Take that car back to the garage."

Cyril gulped.

"Here—I say, who are you giving orders to?"

"You!" said Merrick in a voice that made them all jump.

The gallant captain hestitated just a fraction too long and found himself plucked ignominiously from the driving seat.

"I'll have you know I'm master here!" announced the unpleasant intruder. "And what I say goes, you understand Beatrice!"

Her eyes were a den of wild things.

"You're mad!" she gasped.

"Drunk," amended Norman, thrusting truculently forward. "How dare you insult my sister!," he foamed. "You've insulted all of us!"

"Yes," agreed Merrick. "I intended to. What are you going to do about it?"

In Mr. Blundell's breast the ancient incident of the broken rod still rankled. He fancied himself as a middleweight; joyfully he seized this heaven sent chance for vengeance.

"Apologize, or I'll thrash you silly."

Merrick laughed.

"You? You're much too fat to fight."

Mr. Blundell thought differently; he sent Worm's head abruptly backwards with a smashing jab. The next moment he was sprawling in a flower bed under the impression the sky had fallen. Whatever else Norman lacked it was not pugnacity; licking his lips he rose and rushed to victory, but unfortunately for him he had had no experience of fighting a windmill with sledge-hammers for sails, a windmill as impervious to punishment as an oak post.

At the end of two inglorious minutes he retired gracefully on the arm of the pallid Capt. Lord.

MERRICK wiped the blood from his mouth and surveyed the group of goggling men.

"Any one else like to argue?" he inquired softly. "Or all of you?" he added raising his eyebrows.

There were no takers.

Beatrice had vanished, and the assembly made silent way as he ascended the steps. At the door he turned and eyed them dispassionately.

"I'm closing this place tomorrow. You'll find timetables in the library."

He passed thoughtfully through the empty hall to the dining room and mixing a whisky and soda drank to the health of Mr. Johns. He had not long to wait—the ominous closing of the door behind told that his big scene had come.

"Merrick!" Lady Ponsonby's voice came straight off the ice. "What precisely does this display mean?"

He leaned lazily against the sideboard.

"I've turned—that's all."

"Turned?" her eyebrows rose the fraction of an inch.

"Yes," he nodded. "Worms do, you know."

"O,—I see," she apologized sweetly. "So sorry I missed the joke. Is this rot about closing the house a joke, too?"

"No!" his voice was grimly metallic. "I'm wintering in Algiers."

"Alone?" she challenged.

He smiled slowly.

"I don't think so."

Indignation sent the ice flying.

"Idiot! Do you suppose I'M coming?"

"No—O, no." He reached languidly for the decanter. "You see, I haven't asked you."

"O!" she choked. "O, you don't want me!"

The statement was lost in the noisy splutter of the siphon.

"Damn this soda—it's all gas. What did you say, Bee?"

For once Beatrice was without an answer; newborn fear had her by the throat. That Worms could convincingly play a part was unbelievable: this casual rudeness, this utter indifference was real: his love had gone. In three seconds she lived again the last three years and for the first time she saw them in true perspective, saw beyond them into a future that was strangely blank. In an agony of regret she knew she had thrown away the thing that, for all her selfish carelessness, she treasured most.

"Merrick!" her voice broke piteously. "For God's sake, tell me the truth—don't you want me any more?"

The strongest arms in Castle Caereinion crushed her breathless.

"Darling—come to Algiers and see."

In the county of Shropshire you will hear of the Ponsonbys as the perfect married couple—which is true.

In the village of Caereinion you will hear of a rotund person who walks with a nautical roll as the best landlord who has ever stood in the Ponsonby Arms—and that is also true.

"I have about 50 sheets of popular music which I would like to dispose of. I am sure some of your readers would like to have it. MRS. J."

If you want to keep on hand the latest popular music it amounts financially to no small item and when your funds are limited it becomes almost an extravagance. Here is an opportunity to secure some of your favorite pieces. Write me for them; please do not telephone.

Clothing and Bedding.

"I am writing for your help. Can some of your kind readers give me blankets, sheets and pillow cases? We also need a daybed for one of the children and clothing. I wear size 16, my husband size 40, shoes, size 7. The children are girls, 2 and 8 years of age, and boys, 6 and 10. My husband has been out of work for 7 months and we need these articles badly. We are cold at night because we haven't enough covers.

"MRS. F. R."

Without sufficient clothing, and probably in an undernourished condition, these people are not able to withstand the cold during the day, and by night it becomes even worse because they lack warm bedding. Will you help to alleviate their discomfort by donating the garments and blankets you are planning to dispose of?

Without House or Home.

"A family living about four miles from here in the country lost their home by fire recently. There are eleven little children and the father and mother and they were able to save no clothing except what they were wearing at the time.

"A woman's club is supplying them with bedding and furniture, but the children need clothing which I hope you will be able to get through your department. Baby things from 1 to 5 years and girls' apparel, 10, 11, and 12 year sizes, are especially needed. The boys are not in such bad shape, but any sweaters, shoes, stockings and underwear you can get will be greatly appreciated. MRS. E. R."

This is, indeed, a disastrous thing. The poor father and his family, left homeless and without funds, have no means of repairing the destruction or of replacing the clothing. Can you help them by sending the garments you are planning to discard? The family lives in Michigan.

Proud Mother!

Patsy Andrews, 4, of 7835 East End Ave., Chicago, is the picture of health. No wonder her mother says: "I'm proud as can be of my little girl. She's always bright, active, robust.

"I give California Fig Syrup a lot of credit for her wonderful condition. I have used it with her for every little upset or cold. It always has her back to normal in a few hours."

When a child shows by bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness or feverishness, that the little bowels are clogged, you know the system needs a prompt cleansing.

California Fig Syrup does the work quickly and gently. In addition, it helps tone and strengthen weak bowels and stomach. So it gives lasting help.

The word California marks the genuine; the pure vegetable product loved by children and pronounced safe and effective by doctors.

Clue: This picture represents one of the Want Ad classifications in today's Want Ad section. Decide which classification you think the artist had in mind and then run through the ads under that heading in the Want Ad section to find Wanda's first hidden Want Ad. The first hidden Want Ad will tell you where to look for the next one, and so on. Read the simple directions and start now!

What Want Ad Classification Does This Picture Represent?

CAN you follow a trail? Do you like games and puzzles that make you use your wits? Here's the game you've been waiting for! Here's a golden chance to beat Sherlock Holmes at his own game! Want-Ad Wanda challenges you to follow her through the Want Ad columns of today's Tribune. If you haven't played the game before, get in on the fun today! And if you played it last Sunday, try your skill at trailing Wanda again today.

Just Follow These Simple Directions

In today's Want Ad columns of the Tribune there has been inserted a number of mysterious Want Ads. These Want Ads look exactly like regular Want Ads except, of course, the wording is different. All together there are between 10 and 15 hidden Want Ads. You are invited to hunt for these hidden Want Ads and try for the $100.00 in cash prizes which the Tribune will pay.

The game starts with the picture on this page. This picture represents one of the main classifications of Tribune Want Ads. Decide which classification you think the artist had in mind and then turn to that classification in today's Want Ad section. Look through the Want Ads under that heading until you find Wanda's first hidden Want Ad. You can't possibly miss it.

All Clues Are in Sequence

After you have found this first hidden Want Ad, read it over carefully. EACH HIDDEN WANT AD GIVES A HINT OR CLUE TO THE HIDING PLACE OF THE NEXT ONE. It's just like a treasure hunt. You don't have to search through the entire Want Ad Section to find all the Hidden Want Ads if you keep your wits about you. The hidden Want Ads are all related in a certain definite sequence. The first one (the one which the picture helps you locate) helps you find the second one. The second one helps you find the third, and so on. Remember, there are no less than 10 hidden Want Ads and no more than 15. It's up to you to decide when you have found them all.

Awards will be made to the persons who send in the most nearly complete sets of hidden Want Ads arranged in the most nearly correct order in accordance with these rules. You may indicate what you believe to be their proper order or sequence by numbering them 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. You may clip the hidden Want Ads from the paper, using the handy blank at the right, or you may copy them down on a separate sheet. Neatness and ingenuity of presenting them will count. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be given.

This Offer Is Open to All

This offer is open to all—men and women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

Entries should be mailed to "HIDDEN WANT ADS 'D,'" the Chicago Tribune, Postoffice box 1539, Chicago, Illinois. All entries to today's game must be received in the office of the Tribune not later than 6:00 P. M. on Thursday, February 27, 1930.

You need not purchase the Tribune to compete. Copies of the Tribune may be examined at the Tribune office or at public libraries free of charge.

No entries will be returned. The Tribune cannot engage in correspondence on this subject. The prize winners of today's game will be announced two weeks from today.

Invitations and Their Acknowledgement

Different Days and Different Ways Have Barely Altered the Prescribed Form

By Helen Bartlett,

FEW social customs have withstood the ravages of time like that inheritance of a stateller day—the formal invitation. Its form has not altered, although its mode of delivery has. Less than half a century ago the formal invitation was carefully delivered by the host's footman and its prompt acknowledgement went to its destination in the same manner. Today even the most punctilious hostess takes her chance with the ordinary post.

The informal invitation is the product of the times and for many occasions it is the sensible choice. When a party is organized with great speed the telephone, a brief note or even a wire is called into use, and when a party is a casual one any other mode of invitation would be slightly silly.

All formal invitations, whether engraved or written out in longhand, are worded in the third person and so are their acceptances and regrets. If they are engraved one should consult a reliable and up to date stationer as to lettering and note paper. Wedding invitation and announcement paper has, in recent years, followed no strict rule; within the bounds of good taste one can find varying kinds.

All other formal invitations are engraved, never printed, on cards of thin white Bristol board, either plain or plate marked.

The Wedding Invitation.

The widding invitation form, under ordinary circumstances, presents no problem. The wording is nearly always the same; occasionally, when there has been a divorce or two in the bride's family, this must be slightly changed.

The usual form is this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Peck request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Marion Janet to Mr. James Horton Smith on Tuesday, the first of March, at four o'clock At Saint Peter's Church

In the event that the bride's parents are divorced the wording must follow the most discreet form. The invitation may be issued in the name of the parent with whom the daughter is most friendly or she can get permission to use the names of both. If the parent who issues it has remarried the invitation may follow the conventional form, making no point of the fact that one is a step-parent, or the wording may be thus:

Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Peck request the honor of your presence at the marriage of Mr. Peck's daughter, etc.

The Formal Dinner.

For a formal dinner the letter or card is written or engraved. If it is engraved it would have spaces left for the writing in of guests' names and the date, which, by the way, is always written out, not in figures. No abbreviations should be used and when the invitation is written out paper is of formal appearance. Invitations to formal dinners are usually sent out ten days or two weeks in advance.

Whether engraved or written, the formal dinner invitation is worded in the third person and spaced as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. James French request the pleasure of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fenton's company at dinner on Wednesday, the first of May at eight o'clock.

If the invitation is engraved the guests' names and the date are written in.

In acknowledging such an invitation the spacing must be just the same and the wording must follow the prescribed form in the third person. Dinner invitations should be acknowledged immediately, and in accepting, the date and hour must be repeated so that if there is an error it may be quickly rectified. This is not necessary if the invitation is declined.

The At Home Card.

The "At Home" card, used for other similar functions, merely states a fact and therefore does not absolutely demand an answer unless R. S. V. P. is added. If the card does not indicate that an answer is requested it need not be acknowledged if one expects to attend. If the invited guest cannot attend cards are sent.

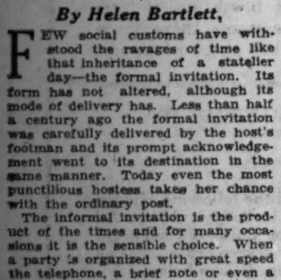
For teas the visiting card of the hostess with "Tea" written in a corner, with the hour at which guests are expected, is considered adequate. To such invitations no reply need be sent.

Engraved invitations are seldom used for luncheons. Informal notes or telephone communications are the present day rule.

Where three or four people are giving a party and the names of all appear on the invitation, one of the party should have been selected to receive the answers and the invitation should bear information as to where the answer is to be sent. If it does not the acknowledgment is sent to the person whose name heads the list.

All invitations, formal, telephonic, or verbal are considered sacred in good soicety. To ignore one, to be lax in acknowledging one or to be at all indifferent about one is extremely rude.

My Star



By Eleanor Jewett.

In my pail the other night
I caught a silver star;
It must have fallen gently,
Though it came from pretty far.

It had not splashed the water,
It lay quite quietly,
And when I stirred it with a stick
It seemed to laugh at me.

And all its laughter silver was
That glimmered in my pail.
I ran to get a hammer,
And I ran to get a nail—

I thought to make myself a crown
And wear the star on high,
But clouds came down and swept my star
Back to its place to dry

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

Master Bob's whole attention had been given to a beautiful tiger's skin in the richly furnished home of one of his mother's friends.

Amused with the many questions the 5 year old youngster asked, the hostess remarked:

"Bobby, I believe this is the first real tiger skin you ever saw."

"O no, it isn't," answered Bob. "I saw one at the zoo, but the tiger hadn't stopped wearing it!" I. F.

Harry and Ralph were in the first grade. Harry was absent from school one day and when Ralph came home at noon, I asked him if he had seen his little chum.

He answered: "No Harry is empty from school today." L. B.

DRINK WATER TO HELP WASH OUT KIDNEY POISON

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

The Glorious Field of Chalgrove Is Only a Memory.

CHALGROVE, Oxfordshire, England.—(Special Correspondence.) — "The Glorious Field of Chalgrove" is a cold and desolate scene on this winter day. The sun is low across the cornfields and the wind sighs through the tops of the tall bare trees that line the highway to Oxford. The road to the village half a mile away. Across the low thatched roofs of the village rises the square Norman tower of the church where John Hampden and the parliamentary troops stabled their horses.

There was a great turning point in Anglo-Saxon history. The men in opposition to the ambitions of the English king to become an absolute monarch set sail for the American wilderness. The "tapsters and serving men" who followed Hampden and Pym fought it out on English soil and molded the kingship to their desire. The emigrants to New England became Americans. They were through with kings forever. What of the spirit today?

Shame Is Mouldy.

The monument to Hampden is mouldy and neglected, the lettering on one side undecipherable. Tourists and Oxford undergraduates come there in summer but the villagers nearby have forgotten what it means. On one side is this legend:

"After an able and strenuous resistance in parliament and before the judges of the land, to the tyrannies of an arbitrary court, he first took arms and assembled the forces of the counties of Buckingham and Oxford, in 1642. Within a few yards of this spot he received the wound by which he died while fighting in defense of the free monarchy and the ancient liberties of England, June 18, 1643."

I asked two laborers on the road to the village what this inscription meant, and who Hampden was. They scratched their heads. They did not know, had never read it. Two farmers whom I met in the public house had read and weighed it, but could not understand the phrase "in defense of a free monarchy." They were clear enough about the main issue that was settled then, the supremacy of parliament in matters of their taxes. The king is no longer an appreciable menace to them.

There is a village that American tourists, motoring through the countryside the pleasant summertime, would describe as "cute" and "lovely." Such a peaceful place, even to look at. The houses belong to the soil, built of the native stone and mud and thatched with straw or slate roof, old and mellowed by sun and rain and frost. There is only one street, which meanders alongside a small stream where geese sail majestically and children play. Red cheeked, normal children. Cows and horses in the farmyards nibbling at great stacks of hay. Chickens and pigs in the back yards, and each house with its little vegetable garden. The fields beyond showing the first green of the coming crops. It is all a flat, neat, narrow countryside, with the Chiltern hills on the dim horizon.

London 45 Miles Away.

London is only 45 miles away, the sign at the cross roads says, but few of the dwellers here have ever seen the capital. They are away from the main road, and the modern world has scarcely touched them with its ways and change and great unrest. The birds scold and build in the thatches. From the meadows a song rises. The church across the field keeps the sleep of its 1,100 years amid the decaying tombstones and yawning graves.

This village has 350 inhabitants. Gone from its former glory of 700. Even and factory and the evil days that have come to the farmer have whittled away its population. Those who are farmers and their laborers, seeming to leave the land, close to the rhythm of the seasons, planting and harvesting, haying and lambing.

The bus comes through on the way to Oxford several times a day and there is a cinema in a village four miles away. Until a year or so ago many of the villagers had never seen the sea, and they could hardly believe that that vast expanse of blue was water and not the sky.

They Help Each Other.

Social distinctions in such a village are not sharp, for nearly every one is kin and they help each other. The squire, of course, are above the villagers and do not drink with them in the inn. They frequent different taprooms. The vicar is the only representative of the gentry. The wife of the gamekeeper, moving here, could hardly find no one to associate with." There are estates of noblemen nearby, with hunting preserves. During the season a party of lords and gentlemen ride through with the hounds, stopping for lunch at the largest tavern and bringing their own butlers along to serve it. A young gentleman in London complained recently that it cost about £15 ($75) to accept a week-end invitation for hunting. The laborer who gazes at them as they clatter down the road must work for six months or more for such a sum.

Most of the cottages here are owned by Magdalene college, the most aristocratic of the Oxford institutions. Beyond keeping the cottages in fair repair the college has no contact with these laborers. Its inspiration to culture and beauty does not reach this far among its own.

There are two or three autos in town owned by farmers and a public house keeper. The bicycle is the popular method of transportation. The English country roads are cluttered with them.

Pub Owned by Church.

There are five pubs in town, existing from the spare shillings of these laborers. One is owned by the church. Prohibition comes to them as something in far off America. And America is a wicked place. There is a legend of a boy who went from this town to Chicago thirty years ago. His name was Morris Brown. He came back once or twice to visit and had made lots of money. But his state aroused little envy. The peculiar content of the English laborer is hard to understand. He grumbles about small things, an extra shilling or so, but has no radical thought in him. The Socialist government has no supporters here. The farmers are Conservatives in politics, while the laborers are mostly Liberals. Some Liberal orator once promised to raise their wages.

"We can't alter things; we can only grumble and pay," said one farmer.

In many of the larger towns marked changes have come since the war and the auto and the cinema. There has been a moving out of the cities and a mingling of people, intermarriage and a wider outlook. But in towns like Chalford there is little change. They have intermarried until they are almost like one family.

Far from an institution of evil, the public house is the only bright spot in the lives of the laborers. "Beer and skittles" are their only amusements.

Enter the cheerful, homely public parlor of the Lamb, a charming old inn at the turn of the road, a house of solid English beams and stone that has stood for 400 years and shows no signs of decay.

No One Gets Drunk.

Mrs. S., the matronly proprietress, is ironing in the kitchen, and sets out the ale on the table near the stove so that she can chat and work at the same time.

It is her missionary society day at the church, she says, and she must hurry. She is of the type that at home would belong to the W. C. T. U., a woman of good works and neighborly. Her regular customers are farmers, and she thinks that three pints each is enough for them of an evening.

"No," she says, "I never heard of any one being drunk here. And we don't need a policeman. Can't remember any crime here."

She tells of the vicar's sermon and remarks that there was a stranger in church the day before.

"How do you know?" I asked her.

"The vicar told me there was a two shilling piece in the bag," she said.

She is concerned over families that are making 30 shillings a week and have three to six children to care for. The rates are about 13 shillings a week, and food is three times what it used to be. A woman next door is about to have a baby, and she expects to be called in. A very busy woman, what with ironing and her husband's supper to get and the ale to get out for the farmers and the work of her little circle.

Leave Benefactions.

Such a woman, when she dies, will leave a benefaction, such as are cut into the stone walls of the church now, dated one hundred years ago. Mrs. Smith, for one, leaves "twenty loaves of six pounds each to twenty poor people yearly," and two acres in a certain parish are set aside to give "10 shillings in wine and bread for the poor." Another woman gives "four gowns and four ells of linen to four poor widows or ancient spinsters" every year.

"What I say is that we must help each other and be content in the Lord's will," says the proprietress of the Lamb as she brings a fresh bottle of ale from the tap room and accepts a few extra pennies in change for her church missionary box.

"You make more money but you have to spend more to live, that is what I tell the boys," says a farmer sipping his ale.

"Yes, and you live in a wicked country," says Mrs. S.

"Well, I don't believe all I read in the papers," observes the farmer.

In the street one observes peculiar

England's Poorest

Of all the workers of England the farm laborer is the poorest paid and housed. The problem has been too much even for the Socialist government. The "dole" does not reach Chalgrove. The laborers are left without a protecting squire to give them ale and beef at Christmas time. They must get along on 23 to 30 shillings a week. Their homes are picturesque, but with no more sanitation than was found in the houses of Hampden's time. No sewers, no electric lights, no gas, not a bath in town, no street lights, no sidewalks, not a modern device to aid or comfort them, except an occasional radio where they hear the program that the British government decides is good for their souls.

VISIBLE and audible at cinema palaces in the loop this week are Norma Talmadge and Gilbert Roland in "New York Nights," at the United Artists; Charles King and Bessie Love in "Chasing Rainbows," at the Chicago, and Nancy Carroll and Richard Arlen in "Dangerous Paradise," at the Oriental.

Stars in the week's openings on the legitimate stage include Jane Cowl in "Jenny," by Margaret Ayer Barnes of Chicago and Edward Sheldon, formerly of Chicago, at the Selwyn tomorrow night, and Ilse Marvenga in "Naughty Marietta," the second of the operettas in Victor Herbert's "cycle," at the Majestic tonight.

Feature Films Get Grander and "Grandeur"

New Ones Twice as Big, in Size, as Old.

By Tom Pettey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—[Special:]—There are more "feature" films on Broadway this week than fire sales, and Cinema Alley is lighted up like a church lawn ice cream supper festival. The trouble, however, is that the brighter the lights shine the duller the shows grow. There are some good ones, but the bad ones are where your observer spent his evenings.

So, with the editor's permission, but with no intention of becoming a critic, we will tell you about the ones we saw. To begin with—we intended starting with it all the time—there is "Happy Days" at Roxy's, where everything is getting grander and "grandeur." It is, among other things, the first film expressly written, produced, and projected for Grandeur films and is twice as big as anything else in the picture line in town. That is twice as big in size—forty-two feet by twenty feet, as compared with twenty-four by eighteen feet of the old type of screen.

The sound track on the film is more than three times as wide as the standard size film. There are some more big figures, but they are on the screen, which is made out of cotton and ground glass.

Seads of Stars.

The cast takes in just about all the Fox stars and the story has something or other to do with a glorified minstrel show. The authors have not made it exactly clear, and I am afraid your critic is doing even worse. Anyhow, it took six weeks to install the new mechanism, and it is a grand idea, and we hope it amounts to something, some day. All we could think of when we saw the picture was shadows dancing on the wall of the Grand Central station.

"Happy Days" is made up of dull

Critic Answers Six Technical Questions on Musical Pitch

By Edward Moore.

REFERRING to something that everybody talks about and nobody does anything about, as Mark Twain used to say of the weather, William Davlin writes from the University of Wisconsin on the subject of musical pitch. His letter is the easier to answer because it consists of definite questions. These are they:

"1. What is the approximate number of vibrations per second of the A string of a violin tuned to the standard pitch?

"2. Of the same if tuned to the concert pitch?

"3. In what fields of music [orchestra, voice, piano] is each respective type of pitch used, and for what reasons may one pitch be preferred to another?

"4. If I were to hear the A string of two different violins struck simultaneously, one instrument being tuned to the standard pitch, the other to the concert pitch, would my ear be able to detect a discord?

"5. Is there any instrument upon which it is mechanically impossible to tune to either one or the other type of pitch; that is, may a clarinet, for example, be tuned to either standard or concert pitch?

"6. The difference of tone [as regards highness or lowness] of the same note struck on two instruments, one of standard pitch, the other of concert pitch, is not a matter of two or three steps, but only a fraction of one step. Am I right?

Answers to Queries.

Answers to most of these questions may be equally definite. At least, one is permitted to try.

1. The number is not approximate, but fixed. John Redfield in his book, "Music: A Science and an Art," states it thus: "Violin A in America is defined as a tone having 440 pulsations per second in air of ordinary moisture and at a temperature of 68 degrees Fahrenheit." The book has a lot of interesting material on the physics of tone, harmony, instrument, and cognate matters. In certain of Mr. Redfield's conclusions I am obliged to take leave of him, notably on what he thinks would make an ideal orchestra, but these cases are only a few. It is published by Alfred A. Knopf.

2. Concert pitch is not fixed but approximate. It means something higher than the standard. Before standard pitch was settled upon, there were various higher pitches, in one recorded case of an orchestra that made its A 458.

3. This can be best answered by giving the reasons first. A low pitch is easier on the human voice; a high pitch makes wind instruments in an orchestra or band sound more brilliant. Pianos are tuned as closely as may be to violin A—sometimes an old piano whose strings have been allowed to slip is difficult to get back to this point—and the voice necessarily follows its accompanying piano. The Chicago Symphony orchestra plays on a pitch slightly higher than the standard, but not as high as the case cited above.

Ear Can Be Accurate Judge.

4. It depends entirely on your own ear. Some people by nature and training become incredibly accurate, others are hardly able to keep to a simple tune. But referring to Redfield again: "A person of average intelligence can learn in half an hour to determine the

This Prison Play Filled with Thrills

'The Last Mile' Is Ghastly in Shuddery Realism.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — I remember no other experience in the theater as emotionally unsettling as was that of sitting through the first performance of a new prison play called "The Last Mile."

Even this old timer was so shaken that if it had not been his job to see it through I think he might have run from it. The urge to run was strong enough. Not because it was a bad play, which is the common excuse for such promptings, but because it was so brutally real, so pathetically true, so utterly without hope.

In this play you are facing, at the rise of the curtain, seven death cells in the Keystone state penitentiary at Keystone, Okla. From behind the bars of six solid steel cages, six prisoners who are "waiting to burn" look out at you. They cannot see each other. Their conversation is in low tones, and they address each other by their cell numbers.

It is the night of an execution. The appointed time draws near. Richard Walters, who had knocked his girl down when she resisted him and still insists she hit her head against a sharp rock, is to go through the little green door at 10 o'clock.

Now he is fighting the hysteria of complete panic, trying to go through bravely, fighting for the courage to take the last mile from cell to chair in his stride, like a man.

His fellow prisoners seek calmly to cheer him. One is a Negro who alternates prayer with bits of spirituals. One is a demented fellow who recites snatches of poetry. One is old in the ways of prisons and crooks and has won two stays for himself. He is hopeful. One is young and, even though he still has two weeks to live,

"THE LOVE PARADE."

Count Alfred	Maurice Chevalier
Queen Louise	Jeanette McDonald

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

"The Love Parade" has Maurice Chevalier with his smile, his song, his beguiling accent, his droll and alert sense of humor, and SO—you will love the picture! It has Jeannette McDonald with HER smile and song and gay, glancing comedy, and, as she declares through the lips of Queen Louise, "the most beautiful legs in Sylvania." So—you will love the film some more. It has gorgeous costumes, striking sets, charming music and rather a "different" story. It has been directed by the brilliant and resourceful Ernst Lubitsch. So far, so good.

You have gathered by now that "The Love Parade" is, in the main, a picture well worth seeing. Right! It is three-fourths of a loaf of excellent entertainment. It is not the full loaf it might have been because of too much low comedy that borders on the vulgar; because Mr. Lubitsch has preferred a persistent strong wind of the most obvious innuendo, to the faint May breeze of suggestion which would have served his purposes just as well and far more pleasantly. Superbly deft at some moments, this director can be surprisingly clumsy at others. And it is this clumsiness which casts a smudge on the shimmer of this really lovely comic opera.

Title Is a Burst of Song.

To what does the title refer? you ask.

To a girl and a song. M. Chevalier informs Miss McDonald in melodious outburst that she, combining, as she does, all the varied charms of the many maidens he has loved, is his "Love Parade."

Now—a glimpse at the story.

It opens in Paris where Count Alfred, military attaché from the court of Sylvania, has been conducting himself in a manner unbecoming a gentleman of his rank and prestige. He has been a gay and naughty butterfly sipping honey where he had no business to, and his amours have become so notorious that word of them has reached the Queen of Sylvania, who orders him recalled.

Right in here comes one of the most amusing episodes and charming songs of "The Love Parade."

From his balcony Count Alfred melodiously begs "Paris Stay the Same!" (That's the name of the song.) As he sings, casements all along the block are flung open, and the fair ones Alfred has made happy—and miserable—listen adoringly.

Then, Alfred's valet lifts up his voice and the ladies' maids with whom he has been fond and fickle hungrily drink in HIS words. After which Alfred's bull pup, a gay dog Lothario, if one is to judge by the canine femmes whose wistful mugs spring into view at the first yip, barks his lyric adjuration to the same tune. This is all very funny.

Alfred Charms the Queen.

Count Alfred returns to Sylvania and meets the virgin Queen Louise, who immediately succumbs (and here is where everything gets broad) to his charms.

To the delight of her court she marries him. She then tries to delegate him to the place of merely the little

Wm. Gillette Gives Sherlock His Last Bow

Famous Actor Comes to Say Hail and Farewell.

By Charles Collins.

SHERLOCK HOLMES would not stay dead although in a death grapple with that archfiend, Moriarity, he had plunged over the highest precipice in the Alps. He had to come to life to take "his last bow" before an admiring public. No more could William Gillette, his interpreter in the theater, remain in retirement, although rich, happy in completed achievement, and ripe in years. It was fated that he should follow Sherlock's example. Tomorrow, then, we shall greet him again, in the most famous character of modern fiction, and three weeks hence he will say farewell forever.

A tour of this nature, led by a man of such eminence, has a profound sentimental appeal. It digs deep into happy memories. It re-creates illusions. It tosses back the curtain of time for many thousands of playgoers, placing them again at the threshold of their youth. It even refreshes history—for Mr. Gillette's contribution to the annals of the American stage has been notable. So this premiere at the Erlanger—William Gillette in his play, "Sherlock Holmes"—will be an occasion.

A Clean Cut Farewell.

There have been many farewell tours of stage celebrities, accompanied by fanfare of trumpets and beat of drums, in the memory of this generation; and in certain cases the leave taking was prolonged into an ironic anti-climax. But for a parallel to this "Ave et Salve" of Mr. Gillette's, you will have to hark back nearly thirty years, to Joseph Jefferson's in "Rip Van Winkle."

The cases are similar; each a distinguished comedian, held in high and affectionate regard by the public, in a rôle with which his personality was most closely identified. But Mr. Gillette's good-by will be more clean cut than any other, if present omens are fulfilled. Like his style of acting, it will be crisp and sharply etched.

Here is the dean of American actors; the title passed to him at the death of John Drew. Here, also, is the dean of American dramatists; he has held that rank for more than twenty years, or since the death of Bronson Howard in 1908. The combination is unique. Major rating in the literary as well as the interpretative phase of the theater has been fairly earned by Mr. Gillette, and in both aspects his work has caused advancement in stage methods. He has never been called a genius, because he is too sane for the uses of that well worn epithet; but as one glances over the activities of his fifty year long career, a suspicion arises that he may have been a genius all the time without being labeled as such.

As a playwright, he was the original debunker of melodrama. He carved the ridiculousness of heroics down to the bone of action. He wrote plays for his own use, and in the terms of his period he was a realist. . . .

As a stage director, his technique was equally progressive. He was scornful of theatrical attitudes; he was scrupulous about the minutiæ of "business" [see the elaborate instructions in his printed plays], and he did new things with lights. . . . And as an actor, he added a brain to the Thespian anatomy. Before his time, acting was largely a matter of tongues and lungs. He gave it a nervous system.

Acting with the Brain.

In all departments of his profession, Mr. Gillette has been a lambent intelligence. He thought. And by the vivid quietness of his mental activity, which came across the footlights like an electric current, he led the stage toward realism. Some of his methods and mannerisms may seem old fashioned now—certainly the joints of "Sherlock Holmes" will creak a little—but he was a pioneer of the moderns.

Mr. Gillette's realistic point of view contains the secret of his much mentioned aloofness. He has always refused to be interviewed. Infallibly courteous and gracious in private life, he has consistently barred his door when the press came knocking. That custom was generally regarded as a method of old school ballyhoo—"man of mystery" stuff. But Mr. Gillette was innocent of any plan to create an aura for himself by seclusion. There is a story behind it, however, which is characteristic of the man, and now it can be told.

When his fame was fresh an interviewer asked him to talk about the wonder and the glory of the drama in general and out of the candor of his nature he said:

"I can't discourse eloquently about the art of acting and play writing. All the portentous phrases that seem appropriate for the subject in an interview are not in my line. Acting is my business; I know its tricks and I use them. I write plays, too; certain tricks of plot making and situation building are necessary, if the play is to hold the attention of an audience. I use them, too. So I would feel silly if I told you a lot of highfaluting nonsense."

Swearing Off Interviews.

Thus spake the incorrigible realist in the presence of Publicity—and it was a serious error of strategy for the pretentious period before the turn of the century. The interviewer went back to his newspaper office and wrote that William Gillette didn't take the stage seriously. The word went abroad, and business at the Gillette box office was bad that season. He had gone one step too far when he tried to debunk the institution of the dressing room interview. And Mr. Gillette is a Yankee; he believes that business is business. Thereafter he granted no more interviews.

Not long ago, on the current tour,

Critic Answers Questions on Musical Pitch

And States Some Ideas About Jazz.

By Edward Moore.

correctness of violin A on a musical instrument to within one-twentyfifth of a semitone, using nothing more than a tuning fork as apparatus. This would be equivalent to measuring the length of the pulsation for violin A to within .072 of an inch. To attain this degree of accuracy measuring the length of a pulsation directly would cost an able physicist weeks of work with elaborate and expensive apparatus."

5. Yes. The celesta is fixed, also the bells, the xylophone, the marimba, in fact instruments of percussion generally, always excepting the kettledrums, which can be and are tuned. Wind instruments are tunable by altering the length of their tubes. The clarinet, which you cite, can be lengthened at its joints, brass instruments by an adjustable crook.

6. You are right. With violin A at 440, violin B is 495. Even the high case of A 458 means only about .327 of the interval between A and B. The difference would be noticeable, naturally, but it is less than the difference between A and B flat.

For our better understanding of musical problems there really ought to be a musical laboratory where such things could be worked out. There are many things in music which we accept as fundamental facts without in the least understanding how and why. With the millions of dollars that are being spent on music every year, not a cent is going into research, unless, perhaps, it is research in the development of new musical phenomena, like the radio.

No Prejudice Against Jazz.

All of which leads to other items in the week's mail. It was probably my own inadequacy of expression, but I seem to have stirred up something in a few casual remarks upon radio last week. At any rate, Miss Celeste Robinson of Des Moines, Ia., desires to take exception, and the Misses Ina, Ruth, and Neva Reed of Polo, Ill., wish to voice their protest.

It seems that I spoke "caustically" of jazz. On this point I wish to voice a protest of my own. I have never been caustic about jazz. I realize vividly what an interesting manifestation it has been. I have heard jazz players whose equal could not be found in any symphony orchestra in the land. I have heard new orchestral colors in jazz bands, new ways of treating tunes, plenty of enjoyment in many ways. In point of fact, America has the best popular music in the world.

There is good popular music, however, and there is bad popular music, just as there is good and bad in music that takes the "classical" label. And while I have at times been greatly bored at certain symphonies and certain operas and greatly pleased at certain jazz manifestations, there have been other times when the reverse was true on all points.

Popular Music Must Stand Alone.

If there is any objection—and it was not stated as an objection but as a fact—it is in jazz masquerading under other names, "musical potpourri" and the like. Jazz, or popular music, if that is a better name, ought to be able to stand up under its own banner and give its own reason for existence, rather than intimate that it is something else. If it were not for the danger of falling into a pun, one might say that by such manifestations it tries to indicate that here one may touch pitch, not musical, and not be defiled. On the contrary, popular music has an honest purpose of its own.

It would be a person of queer tastes, indeed, as one of my letters tells me, who would want to listen to opera and the like, all of the time. In fact, it would be an appalling prospect. But for that matter it would be an appalling prospect to listen to jazz all of the time. These remarks of mine took pains to point out a time when some of the most entertaining music of the nonpopular type had been heard, also another time when there was not much more than one-half pennyworth of anything else to an intolerable deal of jazz. I could have preferred a slightly better balance.

Music Notes.

It is queer that no one ever thought of doing it before, but Guy Maier has evolved a system of showing people of any age how to play the piano at any age from 4 to 84. Perhaps the reason is because it was so obvious that no one could see it, but he starts his beginners playing melodies and using chords immediately. Sight reading, ear training, finger technic, all the weariesses that generations of pedagogues have evolved to make piano instruction one of the deadly arts, are left until a later stage. For the present Mr. Maier's instruction is one of the lively arts.

He will be recognized as one of the heavenly twins of the two-piano recitals, Lee Pattison being the other. When he is not touring, he maintains a residence in the music department of the University of Michigan, where his work is something in the nature of scientific research and his studio is a laboratory. Apparently his ideas on adult piano beginners have had some effect on what would seem at first glance to be a curiously unfruitful pianistic field, for it is told that about half the university faculty and most of the faculty wives, to say nothing of all the campus children, have entered his classes.

He is coming here to demonstrate his theories before the national conference of music supervisors late next month. He will justify his own pianistic existence by playing the Liszt E flat concerto with the National High school orchestra, but his principal service will be to show how ten fingers may be made to flourish on the keyboard where one functioned after a fashion before.

Wm. Gillette Gives Sherlock His Last Bow

By Charles Collins.

...career as a debunker achieved its masterpiece. He was in Baltimore, and expressed a wish to place a wreath on the grave of Edgar Allan Poe, founder of the detective story. Poe created the character of Chevalier C. Auguste Dupin, master of the science of deduction in solving the mysteries of crime, and Sherlock Holmes is his legitimate son. Conan Doyle, consulted by cablegram, joined Mr. Gillette in the idea. They would decorate the grave of the genius to whom they were indebted.

Mr. Gillette communicated his decision to the Baltimore Press club, which gives perpetual care to Poe's grave. A ceremony was promptly organized. There was a formal luncheon, with speeches. But when Mr. Gillette was ready to start for the cemetery a hitch came into the proceedings. The flashlight photographers had not arrived with their tools.

Mr. Gillette was aghast. Photographers! This was a private matter between himself and the spirit of Edgar Allan Poe, he told the clubmen. If they insisted upon photographers there would be no procession to the grave, no speeches, and no wreath, that day at least. He would slip out secretly some morning or midnight and place the floral offering unescorted.

The Baltimore journalists surrendered, and barred photographers. And all the way back to his hotel, when the manager was worrying for fear "the Governor" had caught pneumonia from standing bareheaded in the rain while the president of the Poe club made an oration, Mr. Gillette chuckled happily:

"Well, that's one wreath placing on a grave that hasn't been photographed!"

Born for the Part.

The identification of William Gillette with the character of Sherlock Holmes has been singularly felicitous. It seems to have been born for the part. The description of Sherlock, upon his entrance into the saga of crime and capture that has run through so many stories, might have been written with the actor as a model. Here is Holmes as Conan Doyle introduced him in "A Study in Scarlet" [1887]; here, too, is Mr. Gillette in the play, whether in 1899 (its first staging) or now:

"His very person and appearance were such as to strike the attention of the most casual observer. In height he was rather over six feet, and so excessively lean that he seemed considerably taller. His eyes were sharp and piercing, save for those intervals of torpor to which I have alluded; and his thin, hawklike nose gave his whole expression an air of alertness and decision. His chin, too, had the prominence and squareness which mark the man of determination. His hands . . . were possessed of extraordinary delicacy of touch."

William Gillette has been fortunate in this accident of literature. In the popular mind Sherlock Holmes exists in his likeness. The stories have the stamina of classics, and this merger of identity gives the actor a kind of immortality.

GOODMAN ACTRESS

ELLEN ROOT.

THE repertory company at the Goodman Theater has found an excellent actress for roles requiring worldly poise and modern flair in Ellen Root. She is decorative and alive in comedies of manners. In "Holiday," by Philip Barry, the current bill at the Goodman, Mrs. Root gives keen edge to the playwright's social satire.

Shaw's Latest for Manhattan; B'way Openings

BERNARD SHAW rules the theatrical roost in New York this week. The premiere of his new play, as staged by the Theater Guild, leads everything in interest. "The International Revue," postponed from last week, will also be a focus of attention because of the money that has been lavished on its production.

The list of new playbills is brief, and the first nighters will have a breathing spell after last week's deluge. Here is the Manhattan calendar:

"The Apple Cart"—Tomorrow night at the Martin Beck theater. This, of course, is Mr. Shaw's new play, his first since "Saint Joan." It deals with politics in an England of the future. Tom Powers will have its central rôle. Others in the cast will be Violet Kemble Cooper, Claude Raina, Helen Westley, Ernest Cossart, Frederick Truesdell, Eva Leonard-Boyne, Marjorie Marquis, and Rex O'Malley.

"The International Revue"—Tuesday night at the Majestic theater. This is the postponed opening of an elaborate revue. Harry Richman is a late addition to a cast which includes Gertrude Lawrence, Jack Pearl, Florence Moore, Moss Fontana, and others of the better known.

"Gala Night"—Wednesday night at Erlanger's theater. A comedy, with music, by Laurence Eyre, who has written plays before. This one is laid in Budapest and has something to do with the love affairs of an opera singer. James Rennie, Beverly Bayne, Desiree Tabor, and Adele Klaer will head the cast.

Other events:

"The Sea Gull"—Tuesday night at the Waldorf theater. A revival by the Bulgakov acting group of Tchekhov's play, which it presented at the Comedy last spring. "The Sea Gull" will remain in performance through Friday night; on Saturday Gorky's "At the Bottom" will be restored and the two plays will continue thereafter, in repertory.

"The Round Table"—Wednesday night at the Gansevoort theater. A comedy by Lennox Robinson, the Irishman who wrote "The White Headed Boy." Margaret Wycherly will head the cast.

Precisely So!

The critic leaves at curtain-fall
To find, in starting to review it,
He scarcely saw the play at all
For watching his reaction to it.

PLAYS IN "STREET SCENE"

MARY SERVOSS.

AN important figure in "Street Scene's" poignant picture of the seamy side of Manhattan life, at the Apollo, is Mary Servoss, who plays the unfortunate wife—a character headed blindly toward tragedy. Miss Servoss has appeared often in leading roles on the Chicago stage, always with distinction. She was, for example, the Portia to David Warfield's Shylock.

THEATER GOSSIP

LYNNE OVERMAN, a comedian popular in Chicago, will come to the Garrick theater Sunday night, March 2, in a new farce called "She's No Lady." This play, "She's No Lady," is programmed as having been written by Bruce Spaulding and Anthony Baird, but it is no longer a secret that the actual author is Mary Hay, a dancing girl in some of the Ziegfeld shows.

A point of local interest is that the producer is the son of a former Chicagoan, the late H. H. Frazee, who gave us "No, No, Nanette." He has succeeded to his father's interests in the Cort theater and other stage enterprises, but this is his first individual production.

In the cast supporting Mr. Overman will be found Walter N. Greaza, Robert Cummings, Mildred McLeod, Delores De Monde, Patricia Chapman, Louise White, Josephine Deffry, Bertha Greenhouse, Marjorie Pierce, Lora Hays, Lawrence Tuck, and Pauline Mason.

The imposing playhouse being built in New York by the Warner Brothers at 51st street and Broadway is more likely to be devoted to musical comedies than to talking pictures. It will be called the Hollywood; it will seat 1,600, and it is said to be the last word in everything that a theater ought to be. The Warners have a great stage success with "Fifty Million Frenchmen," and are said to be in the musical comedy business to stay.

The Marx Brothers will omit tonight's performance of "Animal Crackers" at the Grand Opera house and will give instead a special matinée next Wednesday. This is their last week in Chicago. The Grand will stay dark for two weeks after their departure and will reopen with George White's "Scandals" March 16.

New in Chicago

WILLIAM GILLETTE, Jane Cowl, and Ilse Marvenga are the stars of this week's premières on the Chicago stage. They represent a revival (in a farewell tour), a play fresh from an engagement in New York, and the second operetta in the Victor Herbert cycle.

Mr. Gillette will begin a three weeks' engagement at the Erlanger theater tomorrow night in "Sherlock Holmes." The famous actor has come out of retirement at the age of 74 for a season of leavetaking in the rôle with which his personality has been closely identified. The old play, based on several of Conan Doyle's stories, but representing the creative touch of Mr. Gillette as a dramatist, will be staged exactly as it was when it had its first vogue, thirty years ago. Mr. Gillette's company will include Wallis Clarke, Byron Russell, Alfred Ansel, John Miltern, Montague Shaw, Peg Entwistle, Dorothy Peabody Russell, Roberta Beatty, Kate Byron, Rose Kingston, and others.

"Jenny," which Jane Cowl will bring to the Selwyn theater tomorrow night for an engagement of three weeks, is a drama by Margaret Ayer Barnes and Edward Sheldon. It is said to give Miss Cowl the rôle of an audacious modern charmer and to tell a lively love story. Miss Cowl's company includes Guy Standing, Katherine Emmett, Joyce Carey, Helen Brooks, Ben Lackland, Robert Lowe, Coburn Goodwin, Lewis Martin, and Charles Brokaw.

"Naughty Marietta," an operetta by Victor Herbert which is rich with good tunes, will begin a two weeks' stay at the Majestic theater this evening. Ilse Marvenga will have the rôle first sung by Trentini. Others in the cast are Halfred Young, Herbert Waterous, Patricia Clarke, Clarence Harvey, Louis Templeman, Eulalie Young, Bob Capron, James S. Murray, Dene Dickens, and Bert Melrose. Miss Marvenga is remembered from her singing of the rôle of Kathie in "The Student Prince." She is a prima donna of grand opera background.

The Stratford-Upon-Avon Festival company, which begins its second and last week at the Garrick theater tonight, will stage two of Shakespeare's tragedies not included in last week's bills—"Julius Cæsar" and "Macbeth." Their schedule runs: Monday night, "Merry Wives of Windsor"; Tuesday night, "Romeo and Juliet"; Wednesday matinée, "Much Ado About Nothing"; Wednesday night, "Julius Cæsar"; Thursday night, "Midsummer Night's Dream"; Friday night, "Merry Wives of Windsor"; Saturday matinée, "Romeo and Juliet"; Saturday night, "Macbeth."

The novelty of a complete change of cast is offered by "Strange Interlude," as staged by the Theater guild at the Blackstone. Beginning tomorrow night, Elisabeth Risdon will be the Nina, Frank Conroy the doctor, George Gaul the novelist, Blaine Corder the husband, and Erskine Sandford the professor. This company has played "Strange Interlude" on the Pacific coast and in several eastern cities.

THE PENGUIN EXPERIMENTS IN SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY

Now Is Time for Animals to Get Examined

Illustrations by Gaar Williams

By Robert Benchley.

It would seem to be a good time for any animals who think themselves highly intelligent to drop into one of our larger colleges and see if there isn't a job there for them. At Columbia university they are crazy for cats who will take intelligence tests, and at Yale a good smart monkey can draw down anywhere from a dollar to three dollars a day, and the Cornell medical college is making very attractive offers for rats to submit themselves to noise tests. An animal with any brains at all is simply a fool not to cash in on the psychological experimenting craze which is sweeping the academic world.

It isn't as if the animals had to be hurt or even fed unpleasant mixtures. The worst that can happen is that you may be frightened by a Cornell professor smashing a paper bag behind your back. The rats who are being used to test the effect of noise on the nervous system may get awfully irritated, what with people selling things in their ears and blowing whistles, but it is nothing that a good rest over the week-end will not fix up. The cats at Columbia have really nothing to do except step on the disks and open up doors leading to bowls of milk. The life of Reilly was a tough one compared to this. And the Yale monkeys not only are treated just like the other Yale men, but are even taken to Florida during the winter and given a time at Miami. So much attention has not been paid to animals' personal comfort since the time when they were turned off and given that junket on an ark. I am trying to keep the newspaper accounts of these collegiate opportunities from our cat, or she will get dissatisfied with home life and be off to the university to see if some professor can make her jump when he says "Boo!"

Collegiate.

I cannot find out just what the college life of these animals is when they are not working in the "lab." Do they live in dormitories together or run around at houses in the town? I suppose that the Yale monkeys go rather heavily for secret societies and are pretty manly, but the Columbia cats probably go home at night. As the Columbia investigators have found out that alley cats are the smartest of all (one, named Miss Tabby, can practically work a combination on a dial in order to get at a bowl of milk) it would be pretty hard to keep them confined in a dormitory after classes. Now, when New Yorkers hear a great disturbance out in back of their apartments, they can go to a crowd of "those college cats" and write to the university authorities about it.

It seems, however, as if the academic investigators might find some kinds of animal which would approximate human beings a little more closely than cats and rats. (The Yale monkeys, of course, couldn't be better for the purpose.) I am taking it for granted that the experiments are for the ultimate purpose of applying the principles evolved to human beings and their mental problems. There wouldn't be all this trouble just to find out the smartest cat on 130th street or the Ithacan rat who could stand the most hooting in his ear, since human beings are to be the final beneficiaries of all these experiments, why not take an animal which has more human characteristics than any other next to the monkey—the penguin? I could never understand the almost deliberate ignoring of the penguin in psychological experiments. The penguins themselves, I understand, feel very upset about it.

Humanism?

Any one who has ever watched a penguin will know what I mean. Nowhere in the animal kingdom will you find more human behavior. Slightly drunken human behavior, it is true, but very refined drunkenness. No scenes. No vulgarity. Just the bearing of a rather old colonial in a dinner jacket who had found himself at his club overtaken with a slight giddiness from too much port and is making his way to his cab with all the dignity at his command. If spoken to, he will stop for a second, focus slowly on the obtruder, totter slightly, and then proceed, without so much as a word to indicate that he considers the interruption worthy of his notice. The penguin is the most patrician of all animals who resemble humans, and it would not be a bad idea to get his consent to a few experiments to be applied to correspondingly patrician members of the human race. Not everybody is going to react to given stimuli as monkeys react. There are still a few gentlemen left in the world, thank Heaven!

I have made a few preliminary experiments with the penguins in the Bronx park zoo, and if Harvard university wants to use them as a basis for a penguin research department it can make the departments of Yale, Columbia, and Cornell look pretty silly. I am afraid that Harvard is a little conservative for such advanced research work, however, and I am therefore making a simultaneous offer to the University of Wisconsin. I don't know how the Bronx penguins will feel about taking the trip to Wisconsin, but I should think that if we could get a private train with a club car on it and plenty of Scotch for the journey, they might feel that it was worth their while. They would, of course, be put up at the homes of the faculty during their stay at Madison and would not be expected to attend teas or receptions.

How It's Done.

My experiments with the penguins in Bronx park have been superficial but sympathetic. I have taken a book up to the pool around and in which they are accustomed to promenade and have simply engaged them in conversation, just as one gentleman to another. I would not say that they had met me half way, but several of them have accepted cigars (Corona-Coronas) and even a nip if proffered in a tall glass (no ice, please, and plain water) and have eventually condescended to answer a few questions after being assured that there were no reporters present.

One penguin in particular, a Colonel MacKenzie of the Twelfth Penguin guards, has been extremely gracious, and it is from him that I have collected most of my data. I do not dare take notes while he is talking and so perhaps I have not got the thing exactly as he has said it, but I am sure that I have caught the gist as well as the spirit. He would be furious if he ever knew of this violation of his confidence, but, as he reads nothing but the London Times, and occasionally the New York Herald-Tribune, there is little chance that he will see it. I hope that none of you will be cads enough to go and tell him.

My idea was to discover the scientific effect of prohibition Scotch on brain cells accustomed to the genteel degeneration of the pre-war product (penguins, in their own homes, drink nothing but pre-war liquor), to test the reactions on a highly cultivated and refined mind of vulgar and communistic political remarks and to see if penguins, and therefore members of the University or Union League clubs, have a sense of humor.

Speaking to a Stranger.

It took three conferences with Col. MacKenzie to effect my purpose. The first day I pretended to be reading by the pool and did not look up as he tottered by. This evidently intrigued him. I had deliberately taken along a copy of Burke's tirade against the French revolution and held it so that the colonel could see the title. He stopped in front of me on his third lurch past and stood weaving from side to side trying to catch the name. Very slowly and carefully he took out a pair of nose glasses attached to a long black ribbon which hung across his immaculate shirt front and frankly stared.

"Very sound philosophy this," I said, looking up.

The colonel started to say something, but gave it up to hiccough slightly behind his flapper. He was not accustomed to speaking to strangers. Finally he gave in.

"I see you are a gentleman of the old school," he said, very deliberately and distinctly. "No rubbish. No bolshevism."

"No rubbish, no bolshevism, is my motto, sir," I replied. "I don't know what the world is coming to."

The colonel started to come over and continue the conversation, but slipped ever so little on the wet stone and very nearly fell on his side. This distressed him terribly and he pretended that it was what he had intended to do all along.

"They keep this walk in shocking condition," he said, recovering himself with magnificent dignity. "Shocking condition. The board of governors shall hear of this."

Drug Store Scotch.

I took out a flask containing some Scotch which I had bought in a drug store on the way up (with a doctor's prescription, of course).

"Could I tempt you, sir?" I asked. Knowing that no penguin would ever drink from a flask I had also brought along two tall glasses and a thermos of plain water. The old gentleman's eyes sparkled as I mixed him a highball. He tucked his glasses away inside his dress waistcoat and came unsteadily nearer.

"An outrage that gentlemen have to drink on the sly like this," he mumbled. "I myself am planning to spend the rest of my life in London. Have relatives there, you know."

I nodded, as if to say that, of course, the whole world knew of the MacKenzies of London, and handed him his glass. He waited until I had made one for myself (very deftly leaving out the Scotch) and raised the glass in military fashion to a point just two inches below his eye.

"The queen, sir!" he said.

"And your very good health, sir," I added.

Col. MacKenzie got his glass to his beak, but no further. The drug store Scotch assailed his patrician nostrils and he could go no further. In order not to hurt my feelings he took a very slight sip and then placed his glass down on the stone beside him. The first part of my experiment had failed miserably. How could I note the effect of prohibition alcohol on a highly sensitized mind if the subject would not drink it?

"New York is not what it used to be," I said sadly, trying another tack.

There was a long silence. I thought that maybe the colonel was offended by my having offered him an inferior grade of liquor. He was weaving slowly in front of me and adjusting his dress tie. An outburst of rage was imminent, I feared. Perhaps an apoplexy. I tossed the contents of my glass into the pool to show him that I, too, had my standards.

"Vile stuff," I said. "I apologize for offering it to you. Now, in the old days, at the Café Martin or the Union club——"

A Film of Tears.

I caught his eye to see if he was mollified. But, instead of rage burning there, I saw a film of tears. The old gentleman had broken down at the thought of the dear, dead days, and was on the point of an alcoholic fit of crying. Obviously, I could proceed no further with my tests today.

"Well, I am afraid that I must be going," I said quickly, to cover up his embarrassment. And, bowing deeply, I turned my back to leave.

"Good-by, young man," said the colonel, thickly. "Will you have dinner with me at my club one day? I have some rare old Bourbon. . . . I am most sorry for this display of emotion. . . . The old days, you know . . . the old days." And with a hiccough and a bow deeper than mine which very nearly precipitated him on his head, Col. MacKenzie walked with military unsteadiness down the edge of the pool and joined his clubmates.

So you see I am in a position to get some very valuable scientific data from penguins if Harvard or Michigan is interested. The only trouble will be in keeping the colonel sober enough to react without crying.

The Very Rev. W. R. Inge, dean of St. Paul's, in writing about the rapid urbanization of England, quotes from a book by Christopher Dawson, as follows:

"He proceeds to point a moral from ancient Rome, as Flanders Petrie and others have done before. Rome killed the Roman empire by becoming a parasitic capital, draining the life blood of the provinces. 'The peasant-soldier-citizen, who created the mighty power of Rome, gave way to a vast urban proletariat living on government doles and the bribes of politicians.' That is indeed the fate which hangs over our heads."

The ninth of Mr. Kinsley's articles will be printed next Sunday.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

IN CHICAGO.

The arrival of William Gillette brings to armchair playgoers memories not only of another day in the theater, but of another day in the mystery story business. In 1887 a young doctor, 28 years old, living in Southsea, a part of Portsmouth, in southwestern England, published a book called "A Study in Scarlet." There was an imperturbable gentleman in it called Sherlock Holmes.

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE. [Pirie MacDonald Photo.]

Two years later Dr. Doyle wrote a book entirely about him called "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," which had a popularity so immediate and so widespread that the young doctor was almost forced to give up his practice and answer the pleas of his public for more. Sherlock Holmes became not only a character in literature, but a part of the English language. For years "to sherlock holmes" was a verb, transitive or intransitive [I don't think that fine point was ever settled].

William Gillette made, with the assistance of Conan Doyle, a play of assorted adventures of the detective, and his makeup as Sherlock Holmes became a standard detective makeup. Cartoons and caricatures always were drawn after Mr. Gillette's personification of the hero.

The Sherlock Holmes stories, in the history of English literature, were almost the first modern detective stories to be classed as literature. They were the grandparents of the present very successful, very gilded youths of the mystery and detective fiction families. Read the old Sherlock Holmes books—they're thrillers of the first water. The young doctor of Southsea is now Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and at the age of 71, a convinced spiritualist and a writer and lecturer on the subject. He wrote, you remember, a book called "Raymond," which was his record of the communication which he had with his son, Raymond, after the latter's death in the great war, a book which, because of the fact that it came from the pen of one of England's best known men, had an international audience.

IN NEW YORK.

"R. U. R.," of which we saw a revival a few weeks ago here, has been revived for New York. When it was produced in 1922 it was a terrific sensation. Published in 1923 it stirred armchair playgoers tremendously. Now, strangely, it has little terror for readers—they have become accustomed to the idea of a mechanical civilization.

"The Plutocrat" is a dramatization of Booth Tarkington's novel of that name, the Tarkington novel of January, 1927. You remember it, a gorgeous story of a successful American business man and his wife and daughter on a Mediterranean cruise.

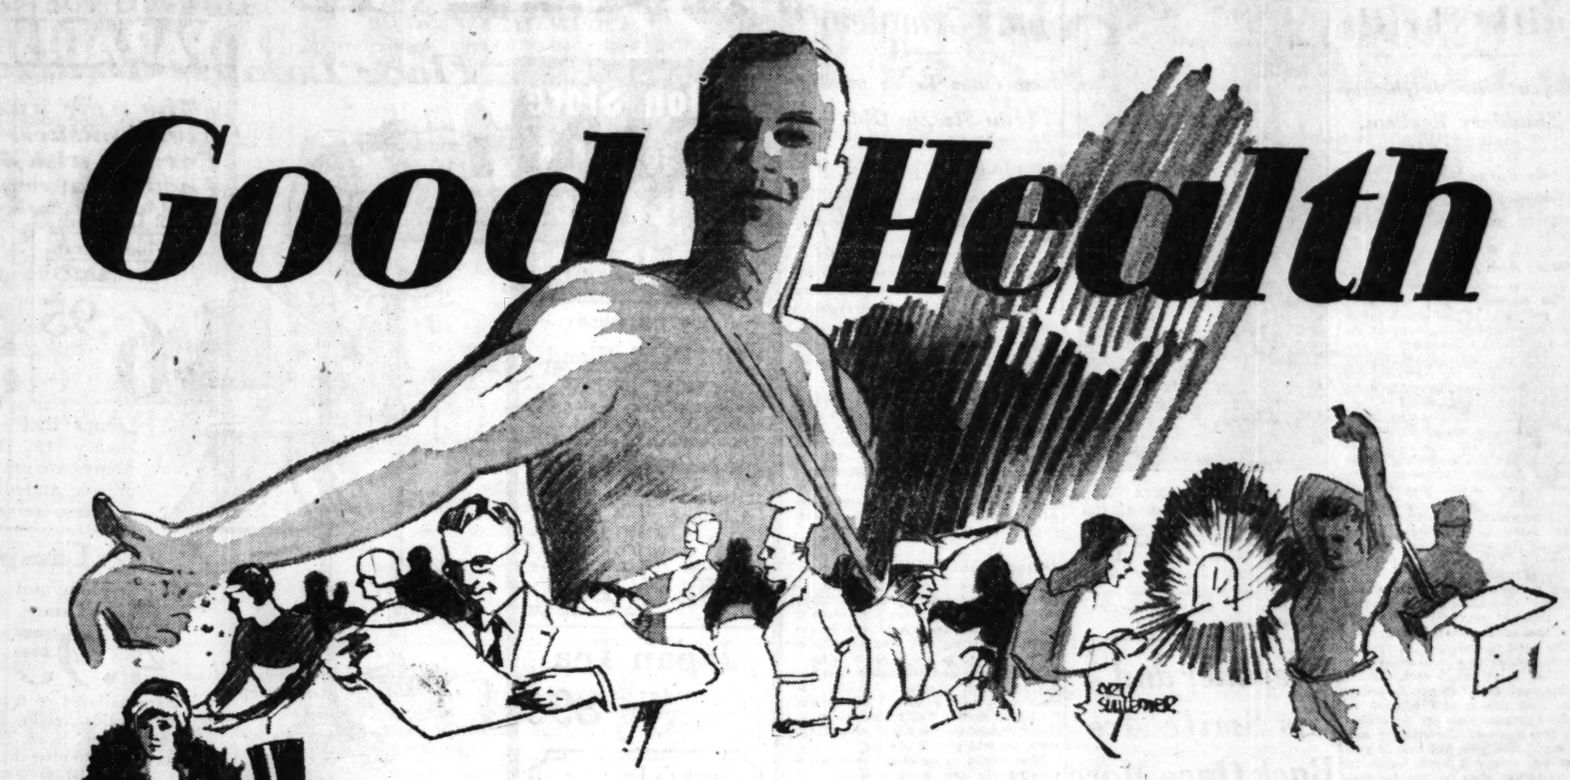
Good Health



Within the Income Reach of All

In considering the medical services afforded the community by the Public Health Institute in its effort to help other medical organizations and the doctors in combating the evils of social diseases it is particularly interesting to note the relation between its value and its actual cost. While the low cost is an important point to keep in mind, as it will enable you to get well and stay well within your ability to pay, of even greater importance, however, is the reason for this low cost and how it was achieved and steadily developed without any sacrifice of medical value. Though actuated by purely altruistic motives, the great need for the service rendered by the Institute has made it self-supporting from the beginning. Every patient shares the benefits derived from the great number who come for examinations and treatments—a number which has exceeded 2000 in a single day. The small surplus received above the cost of each treatment enables a constantly increasing value through further improvement of the facilities and organization that renders this service. Because of the Institute's war on social diseases, a lower cost medical service was brought within the reach of all the people.

Evidence of its success is found in the fact that since the Institute was established ten years ago more than 150,000 individual examinations have been made and over 3,000,000 treatments given.

The Institute was organized solely to assist in controlling the further spread of social diseases in Chicago.

In order to afford complete protection it was found necessary to provide facilities for diagnosing infection in any or all parts of the body—for social diseases appear under the guise of many ailments. As a result, the Institute developed and operates its own Laboratories, where as many as 300 Wassermann and 300 Kahn blood tests are a part of a single day's work.

For the same reason it developed and operates special X-ray and Cardiovascular equipment—special facilities for examining the eyes, and to further reduce the entire cost of treating a social disease and its complications, operates its own Drug Departments, buying in large quantities direct from manufacturers, compounding and manufacturing many of its own prescriptions and supplies. State registered physicians administer all treatments.

Because of these highly developed facilities the Institute's complete medical examination for social diseases constitutes a thorough general health examination. As a result an increasing number of people are using this low cost medical service regularly to protect themselves against possible social disease infection. If you cannot afford the service of a private physician come to the Public Health Institute.

Operated not for profit, the Institute's medical service is offered to everyone at low cost. In fact, treatments are available even to those without funds. This Prison Play Filled with Thrills

"The Last Mile" Is Ghastly in Shuddery Realism.

By Burns Mantle.

is terrifically torn. One is atheistic and hard.

Spectators Also Suffer.

No detail is missed. For half an hour you sit, tense and miserable, through the visits of the prison priest for the last prayers; the visit of reporters for the last messages of the condemned; the visits of the guards to cut the trousers leg, moisten the hair of the head and shave the temples of the man to go.

You hear the reading of the death warrant and finally you grip the arms of your seat as the march to the chair begins and the mumbling, shaken voice of Richard Walters is heard, assuring his cell mates that he will be game, that he will meet them he hopes, somewhere, sometime. And then, for awful seconds, there is the dimming of the lights as the current is switched into the chair—once, twice—and the curtain falls.

It may sound as though it were no more than a deliberately theatrical exhibit, cheaply done for the thrills it might create. But so perfectly written, with such restraint, it is, and so amazingly staged and cast with such power, that there is no escaping its lacerating realties. You are, in bodily fact, in that prison and witness to those final preparations for an execution in the name of Christianity and civilization. And you feel that if you can get out you will never come in again. And yet such is the fascination of a truthful drama, however tragic, you are drawn irresistibly back to your seat.

The second act, fortunately, soon breaks into absorbing action. The meanest of the guards is passing food to one prisoner. As he turns to go back to his station the man in cell No. 5, "Killer" Mears of Chicago, shoots an arm through the bars, encircles the neck of the guard and slowly strangles him into unconsciousness. Now he reaches through the bars, gets the guard's keys and gun, releases his cellmates, and organizes a break.

Recent History Re-enacted.

Thereafter, for two more acts, we are witness to such scenes as described in recent breaks for liberty in the prisons at Canon City, Colo., and Auburn, N. Y. The men rush the outside guards, take their guns, barricade the deathhouse and send their ultimatums to the warden.

When the first is not answered they shoot a guard and toss his body out a window with a note pinned to it. When their demand for clear passage is denied they kill the principal keeper and throw out his body. "Killer" Mears' next victim is to be the priest. But there his fellows balk.

In the end with but two bullets left, Mears gives his gun to "Red" Kirby and walks deliberately into a perforating hail of machine gun bullets.

There is no message in this terrific drama. There is no attempt at preaching reform or arousing sentiment. It is sheer drama, minutely photographic and terribly real. Seeing it once you never will forget it. And being normal, probably never want to see it again.

"The Last Mile" was written by John Wexley, an actor now playing in the Russian play, "At the Bottom." His inspiration came first from certain deathhouse confessions published a year ago by the American Mercury, to which he has added recent history in the way of jail breaks. It is as powerful and modest a piece of writing for the theater as I have ever come in contact with.

The all-male cast is so perfectly chosen that when next day I met some of the prisoners on Broadway I was prompted to run up and advise them to get away before they were recognized. Spencer Tracey plays the "Killer." James Bell, the boy who is electrocuted.

VIOLINIST.

JASCHA HEIFETZ.

Remember back when this young fiddler came over from Russia and set his audiences aflame with the marvels of his technic and the glory of his tone? He is just as good a violinist now as he was then. He will be at the Civic Opera house this afternoon.

Chevalier and His Smile Are Back Once More

husband at home. To which arrangement the count quite rightly takes exception. For awhile he humors the royal lady, THEN—but that is enough for you to know of the story at this sitting.

M. Chevalier and Miss McDonald make a fascinating pair. They are both good to look at, sing delightfully, have a flair for humorous presentation of the risque, and their work dovetails pleasingly and is done as if they thoroughly enjoyed doing it (M. Chevalier has much the appeal of a dear, mischievous little boy, don't you think? One yearns to both spank and kiss him.)

The supporting cast plays with sparkle and adroitness and ensemble numbers are magnificently staged and skillfully accomplished. No expense has been spared to make "The Love Parade" pictorially par excellente.

The first scenes of the film are snappier than some succeeding them in which Mr. Lubitsch appears to have been more bent on amusing himself than you. However, "The Love Parade" is not a picture to miss, that I assure you.

Bits aBOUTem.

MILTON SILLS, long absent from the screen because of illness, is coming back. He will appear in a Fox movietone production entitled "A Very Practical Joke." The film is an adaptation of a story by Ben Ames Williams.

STEPHEN FETCHIT, that slow-moving black cloud of filmdom, has been engaged by Hal Roach to make a series of comedies. His initial performance under this contract will be in an Our Gang piece in which he will play nursemaid to a mule.

"DISRAELI," with George Arliss, has carried off the honor of being named the best picture of 1929. This verdict was the result of a poll taken by the Film Daily among 331 daily newspaper reviewers, forty trade paper and fan magazine critics and three national news syndicates.

See you tomorrow.

Anent Movie Reviews.

My dear Mae Tinée: Anent one of your recent reviews—Can't you see that Vivian Duncan needs must make that hop, step and jump back from almost oblivion in order to partially slake the thirst of Duncan maniacs with one more bar of perfect harmony? [Sounds rather like a candy bar ad with sadly mixed metaphors, doesn't it?]

This is one of those rare instances when I do not agree with you—although heaven knows that it is no especial compliment to you that I should be in accordance with your opinions—and as you said in your last paragraph, it is really only a question of whether one prefers the Duncans.

About my agreeing with you—there is a constant similarity in opinion regarding movies [and I express my views before reading your criticisms too] which may be explained by the fact that as a highly impressionable kid I witnessed every picture from your viewpoint—due to being raised on THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and having a penchant for reading everything therein.

Several times I have almost written to you to express more than a slight appreciation for your existence—but you surely know Old Man Procrastination, too.

Most sincerely yours,

ALICE L. SMITH.

Editor's note: Awfully glad you wrote! Your opinion's every bit as good as mine, you know! Anent your last line which I have omitted—can't think of any plots.

Feature Films Get Grander and "Grandeur"

New Ones Twice as Big, in Size, as Old.

By Tom Pettey.

moments, but it has its "big" moments.

Now, we do not dare use stars in rating this picture, because there are too many stars in it, so we are going to adopt our own "celestial system" and give "Happy Days" a full moon, so far as the Grandeur screen is concerned and a total eclipse so far as the picture is concerned.

Then, there is a Warner brothers opus entitled "She Could Not Say No," featuring Winnie Lightner as a dramatic actress, at the Strand. Miss Lightner is cast as a night club entertainer, and it is her first departure from comedy. We will gladly stand in line at any theater to welcome her back. "She Could Not Say No" rates—well, we'll give it a half moon.

Distance Still Lending.

The weather being cold outside, we went to see Harry Richman in "Puttin' On the Ritz" at the Earl Carroll. This bit of ear and eye trouble is one of those talking and singing affairs. When you go to see it sit well back in the theater and remember that old saying about distance lending enchantment to the view. Under our "celestial system" of rating we must give "Puttin' On the Ritz" something. Well, we will give it the air.

That ought to be about enough reviewing for one week and for one amateur, so we will just tell you about the other talkies in town. Up at the 55th Street theater the first 100 per cent Spanish talkie is having its first American showing. It is called "Sombras De Gloria," and is the Spanish version of Eddie Dowling's picture called "Blaze o' Glory." Jose Bohr, who enjoys similar popularity in South America to Chevalier's in France, heads the cast. Dialogue is in Castillian Spanish and the picture was made in Hollywood.

Over at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse is a German talking film called "Why Cry at Parting." It has created little attention, however, for New York is getting used to seeing German dialogue pictures.

We would have liked to have told you about Dennis King in his screen ddebut as "The Vagabond King," but we couldn't get in at the preview and we were unable to buy a ticket for the opening [what we mean is that the tickets were all sold]. Anyhow, a fellow who saw it said it was a good show.

He Who Dances Must Pay—the Ballet Teacher

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 22.—[Special Correspondence.]—The number of dancing academies, studios, and schools that have sprung up in Hollywood since the advent of the talkies is something that is bound to impress the reader of the Sunday advertising department of a newspaper.

Dancing in Hollywood has gone forward literally by leaps and bounds, with the present rage for revues at its height. The generally poor season for shows in New York has made the pickings along Broadway pretty slim, and the teachers have folded up their tents and flown to Hollywood. A stroll down the main stem in Hollywood is more than likely to be the accompaniment of castinets, clicking and shivering in the second story studios, which abound along Hollywood boulevard, Sunset and Vine streets.

They're All Doing It.

You may be hearing the heels of Ramon Novarro and Renee Adoree as they pound out their rhythms under the tutelage of a Spanish dance specialist for their next picture, "The Singer of Seville"; again it may be Mary Eaton working tirelessly as she perfects her toe work for screen purposes; Bessie Love, working out a new tap number with her instructor; any of your favorites may be at it with heel and toe within a stone's throw of your favorite lunching place.

Every studio has its troupe of chorus girls under contract for training with expensive dance instructors, with dance directors to figure out effects and musicians to furnish the music at rehearsals. Warner Brothers have forty grand pianos in use since talkies brought its quota of song writers and dancers to their studios.

World famous ballet masters now in Hollywood include Ernest Belcher, Edourd Cansino, Mme. Albertinia Rasch, Norma Gould, Theodore Kosloff, Muriel Stuart [formerly with Anna Pavlova], Adolph Bolm, Fontaine-Dollini, and many others. Pavley and Oukrainsky have a school here.

Spanish Colony Growing.

The advent of talking pictures in Spanish has brought a most interesting group of Spanish speaking artists to Hollywood, who form a most colorful group here. Prominent among them are the José Bohrs, talented young Argentinians, who are entertaining at their Spanish home, Casa de Mama Neno, this week. José Bohr is the big bet at Sono-Art studios, since the release of his Spanish version of Eddie Dowling's English "Blaze o' Glory."

Among the guests at a colorful fiesta which José and Eva Bohr gave recently, one who excited interest was Bebe Daniels' grandmother, Mrs. Griffen, who is of Spanish blood. The old lady, with her white locks, evidently enjoyed the spectacle of the young girls and boys in glittering Spanish costume dancing the tango, la jotta, and the colorful dance called El Jarabe, in which the girl dances about the rim of a huge decorated sombrero thrown on the floor by her swain. Delia Magana a Mexican actress, now playing at Universal in a series of Spanish pictures, and who is to be José Bohr's leading lady in his next film, gave some comic impersonations.

Skating Carnival Is a Lark for Children

CHILDREN'S ANNUAL SKATING CARNIVAL AT THE WINTER CLUB IN LAKE FOREST.

Chicagoans Go to Meet Spring in Balmy Sun of California

By Mme. X.

SPRING is almost here. Of all the four seasons this is the most poetic in its meaning to mankind. In the spring "a young man's fancy"—and so forth. To be sure, it sometimes wears to us Chicagoans a far from friendly aspect. As an old resident here, Miss Mary Hastings, used to express it, "Spring is here again with its usual ferocity."

If I were to name over the people who have escaped this particular mood in our annual battle with the elements, it would use up a lot of valuable pulp. Suffice it to mention just a few. Mrs. Samuel Insull is spending ten days in New York. Mrs. Lawrence Ayer has gone to Boston for the opening of several weeks. Mrs. Medill Barnes has been in New York for some time overseeing the production of her new play, "Jennie." Mrs. Frederick H. Winterbotham is visiting her mother in Orange, N. J. Mrs. Harry Reynolds is visiting the George A. McCutcheons at Palm Beach. Mrs. Morris Rosenthal is spending a week with her mother in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard L. Ryerson are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheons at their retreat, Treasure Island, in the Virgin Islands.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Adams left Monday for Pasadena, Cal., Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Carpenter have gone to Santa Barbara, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reynolds accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds Jr., have departed for California.

Others Plan New House.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker have gone to Santa Barbara to see about the part of the new house there which they have had in mind for several years. It is on the Spring Valley road towards the eastern end of Montecito, that beautiful valley where so many of our fellow citizens have gone in recent years. Their son-in-law, Anderson Cramer, has made the plans for the house.

While studying architecture at the Beaux Arts in Paris, he made a specialty of the early Franco-Dutch architecture which still flourishes in South Africa in and around Cape Colony. Two hundred and more years ago a number of French refugees, escaping political conditions in France [those Bourbon kings were a trying lot] betook themselves to the south end of Africa, where they found a lovely country, delicious climate, and no royal Bourbons or other tyrants to molest them. There they settled down and built themselves charming houses, Dutch in style. Came along the British settlers a little later and built peaceably alongside, building houses in their national mode. The two expressions of national taste blended in the course of time and a charming architecture, one especially well adapted to the place and the climate was evolved.

This transplants especially well to southern California, as the landscape there, the foliage and the climate are all much like those of Cape Town and its environs. The gardens at Cape Town are as lovely as any I have ever seen. You may get some idea of the floral possibilities of that region when I tell you that on the steep sides of the mountains overlooking the city calla lillies grow as wild and as prolific as does goldenrod here. Also, the finest avenue of stone pines I've ever seen leads from the town out to its most fashionable suburb. You know the stone pine, that umbrella shaped tree that grows all over southern Europe.

Off to New York.

Mrs. Robert H. McCormick has gone to New York for a few weeks' outing. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank also went to Gotham lately to officiate as godmother to the youngest infant of the famous sculptor, Paul Manship.

The child's name will be Sarah Janet. The Fairbanks and Manships are great friends, the latter having frequently visited the Fairbanks here.

Apropos of sculpture, that slim, young, and charming wife of President Hutchins of the University of Chicago, is a "professional" sculptor [she dwells on the word "professional"], and has done some excellent work in portraiture in this medium. I have not seen it at this writing, but hear it is remarkable both in the likenesses she gets and the beautiful technique of her work. Up to now she has been too busy escorting her husband in his strenuous round of making the acquaintance of Chicago and all its manifestations of activity to settle herself to her own artistic career, but now has found a studio and intends to devote herself to her chosen calling.

She opened an exhibit of fifteen of her portrait busts at the Chester Johnson gallery last Friday afternoon. Alas, the X. family wasn't there, having set forth for California. It is safe to prophesy ahead of time as the writer is doing, that there was a goodly attendance at this exhibit, as both the Hutchinses have made many friends in the six months since they arrived in Chicago.

Civic Duties Entailed.

When Robert Maynard Hutchins accepted the important post of president of the University of Chicago I doubt if he had any idea of the many and widely different responsibilities which went with the office. It is far more of a civic job than it was when the university was founded in 1891; it is one that calls for contacts throughout the whole middle west. Mr. Hutchins has had over 250 invitations to speak before as many different organizations. To have accepted them all, or even half of them would have been impossible. That he was able to undertake between fifty and sixty was a proof of enormous energy and mental activity.

He and Mrs. Hutchins have also made a social hit in Chicago unprecedented in the annals of the university. It isn't possible to say how much this attractive couple has profited by this unexpected aspect of their new position, but Chicago society has profited enormously by having these two unusual additions to their luncheons, dinners and other social functions. The Hutchinses have been rather amazed by this recognition, coming from the source it does.

The university's president asked your scribe whether so much unprofessional and purely social entertaining had been the lot of previous occupants of the office. It was necessary to admit that it had not, as far as your scribe knew. It is for themselves as well as for their important new office that the Hutchinses are so much sought after by Chicago's many sided social life.

Early Chicago Culture.

Of never failing interest to this p. p. p. is the active, almost passionate interest in literature and the fine arts felt by members of our socially prominent set, the folk whose doings the society editors are supposed to be ever on the alert to chronicle. This tendency began far back in our social annals when Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor was a leader in our smartest set. He may be said to have set the fashion among this element to be patrons of art and its attendant handmaids, poetry, music, literature and so on. Other nonprofessionals wrote before his time, but did not make it a business to promote interest in these matters. He was our first genuine man of leisure, having inherited from an uncle a goodly fortune that put him beyond the necessity of earning his living, thereby freeing him and enabling him to dedicate his talents and energy to promoting Culture [with a big C].

Fortunately he was ready and able to do this instead of wanting to devote his leisure and money to sports and idle pursuits. It was a good thing for Chicago that he so decided, though at the time it was thought queer by a society devoted only to turning a wilderness into a civilized metropolis. From his time to today it has become more and more the custom for members of our social strata to develop an interest in these most important flowers of civilization. Cultivated men and women among us are growing more and more sophisticated and sapient in matters artistic and literary.

Leading the Field.

I think it is not too much to say that in one direction, that of knowledge and taste in interior decoration of clubs and residences, Chicagoans are ahead of their kind in eastern center. Neither in Boston nor in New York are they so up to date in this direction as is the intelligentsia of Chicago. Of course, in this direction we owe much to Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Arthur Heun, David Adler, who are recognized authorities in this form of art.

I think that the folk of the east are hampered by inheriting many lares and penates and, with them, well intrenched ideas of their historic or sentimental value, while here in Chicago our leaders in this expression of the esthetic are ruthless in casting out the past and its impedimenta to make place for the latest mode in furnishings.

We have developed much talent among our well-to-do classes in painting, music, writing, etc., but up to lately I've only known one sculptor among our gilded youth, namely Sylvia Shaw [Mrs. Clay Judson], whose charming clay and marble statues and statuettes adorn many of the gardens hereabouts.

But now I have discovered a new

KENT CLOW JR.

THE annual skating carnival for the children of members of the Winter club in Lake Forest took place the other day. The young participants included Kent Clow Jr., the 5½ year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Clow, garbed as a snow man; Adelaide McCreary, daughter of the Robert McCrearys, in Indian regalia; 4 year old Genevra Mitchell, daughter of the William H. Mitchells, and Nancy Buchanan, who is 3 years old.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

follower of Michael Angelo, Phidias and their ilk in Miss Adela Barrett, one of a well known old family long prominent in Chicago's social life. Her parents, the late Major and Mrs. S. E. Barrett, were among the social leaders of the last half of the last century and the first decade of this one. Miss Barrett has for many years been devoting herself to modeling and has today some charming examples of her art, fine heads in clay and marble that show a talent of no mean order.

She, like Mrs. Hutchins, prefers portraiture to imaginary subjects for her chisel, and at her apartment on Scott street she has several fine busts that catch the eye the minute one enters that charming suite of rooms.

Perhaps, along with sculpture, singing is today one of the rarest accomplishments of the modern woman. Whereas, among our immediate forebears many a young and lovely woman used to chant ballads and ditties—today it is most unusual to hear singing from any but well recognized professionals. Among the few who do sing is Mrs. Margaret Tagmose, member of the well known Winston family. She has a charming soprano voice, and recently gave a song program at the big entertainment at Gary, Ind., in honor of the Rumanian ambassador and his famous fellow citizen, Prof. Iorga. Mrs. Tagmose's voice is singularly pure and sweet.

Bissells Will Move.

An interesting change in domicile is that of a popular Chicago couple, the Arthur Bissells, who on the first of April will move from the greenstone house they have so long occupied on Schiller street, near Lake Shore drive, to an apartment at 49 Cedar street. For so many years have they occupied the three story and basement abode across the street from the Potter Palmer mansion that they seemed almost to have taken root there. Now they are to join that ever increasing throng of notable citizens who are fast abandoning the innumerable responsibilities of the old fashioned house with its three flights of stairs, coquettish basement furnace, cluttered attic, snow laden roof, and other drawbacks] for the greater freedom and luxury of an apartment.

The Bissells will be under the same roof as Mrs. Winterbotham Buchanan and the William Van Doren Wrights. Modern life tends more and more to the advanced kind of socialism which is developed by living under the same roof with other families, all enjoying the same freedom from ancient problems that the intricate mechanism of our present day housekeeping gives us. By the way, the English call this form of residence a flat.

Apartment with them means rooms in a rooming house, a favorite form of living over there, where a married couple, often a retired butler and cook, will own the house and rent rooms and serve meals provided by these well trained former domestics. It is a popular way of life in London, but not so luxurious as that considered necessary by up to date Americans.

Crime Laboratory Founded.

Not since I dined, a year ago, with the Frank Loeschs, when the David Stansburys were the other guests, have I had such a thrilling evening as last week when I was a guest of the Burt Massees. On the former occasion I heard much of the local underworld and its ill-smelling doings which have never yet been published and probably now never will be.

A second chapter was the description given me on this second occasion when I had a glimpse of what is being done here in the way of developing a scientific handling of the important business of the discovery of criminals and their connections with their evil deeds. The founding of a crime laboratory here is one of the most necessary undertakings ever tried out in this or any other American city. For some not to be understood reason we in this country are far behind the rest of the civilized world in our methods of handling this form of police service.

We have, up to now, never made a science of this matter of crime detection. England, France, Germany, and other European countries have regular laboratories where they make a profound study of the workings, traces, and other evidences of crimes so excellent in its resulting capture and punishment of the perpetrators of murders and other evil deeds over there that such crimes are far below the terrible and constantly mounting records made in this country. My host of the other evening has made possible the establishing of this most important of any enterprise recently established here.

At his own expense last summer he sent abroad Col. Calvin Goddard, well recognized expert in ballistics, to make a close and extensive study of crime laboratories in the various countries where they flourish. On his return to Chicago a beginning was made in establishing a similar enterprise here. So interested were a group of citizens in the project that one of them, Dean Wigmore of Northwestern university, arranged that this enterprise should be affiliated with that university.

Unravels the Snarls.

It now exists on East Ontario street under the name of the Scientific Crime Detection laboratory, and under the direction of Col. Goddard it carries on its invaluable work. To it are brought most of the up to now unsolvable problems of the police departments. At this laboratory they discovered the unmistakable connection of the murderer of the motor traffic policeman recently at St. Joseph, Mich., with the St. Valentine's day murders a year ago.

Henceforth, if this laboratory is well established here [and this depends on the adequate financial support of Chicago's well to do citizens] from the instant a murder is discovered this scientific workshop will be placed in charge of the scene, the body and everything connected with it to handle methodically the business of discovering the criminals. Heretofore crowds of untrained men have hurried to the scene of a crime and erased every significant bit of evidence.

A description of what can be important evidence sounds like an excerpt from our old friend Sherlock Holmes' memoirs. There are seventy-five kinds of evidence to be studied by these would be experts. They include so many different phases of the records left by a criminal, from fingertips up, that it would seem impossible for even the cleverest evildoer to escape an expert in this line. This kind of evidence does not depend on the hearsay or stories of onlookers, always of doubtful value, but furnishes irrefutable proof when presented to a court and jury.

The great thing now is to get an adequate support for this important undertaking so that the community can emerge from its present brooding peril from evildoers. What Scotland Yard has done to make London one of the safest big cities in the world for the average decent, God-fearing citizen, this crime laboratory may do for crime ridden Chicago. Go to it, fellow Chicagoans!

Court Costumes Add Gay Sparkle to Miami Party

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special.] Like the lavish jewels adorning the dress of the proud and haughty Venetians during the golden age, the setting for the committee of 100 costume ball Friday night at the Nautilus hotel sparkled reminiscently with the reds, yellows, and blues of precious and semi-precious stones worn by the fifteenth century élite.

Yachts were dressed and at anchor in a half circle around the palm garden. Hanging lights from the campanile and doge's palace on St. John's island painted Venetian poles in colorful reflection in the bay. Within the confines of the garden society turned its attention to playful interpretation of rôles played by men and women of Venice when they were making history.

With this pageantry for inspiration, Alexis Kosloff's Metropolitan Grand Opera company ballet danced for almost two hours, providing a new height in entertainment in greater Miami midwinter reveiries. The 1,500 guests, all of whom were attired in costumes of the doge's court or were representing less presumptuous rôles, were seated at tables in the garden or occupied boxes around the horseshoe which faced the canal and the doge's palace on the island.

Supper Served on Island.

The grand march at the conclusion of the ballet program ended on St. John's island, where supper was served.

Regal court dress distinguished the members of the reception committee, who met the guests in the palm garden at the beginning of the ball and joined the court scene immediately afterward. These men, attended by their wives, are the guiding stars of the committee this year as its executive group. They include Clayton S. Cooper, as president; Webb Jay, Harvey S. Firestone, I. C. Elston, and Robert Law, as vice presidents; David Huyler, as treasurer, and F. Lowry Wall, as secretary and assistant treasurer.

Mrs. H. R. Kurris of Chicago arrived in Miami Beach recently to spend three weeks and registered at the Blackstone. She was accompanied by Mrs. David D. Colbert, also of Chicago.

Party at the Deauville.

One of the most interesting social assemblages of the season was at the Deauville, when C. Stanley Mitchell of New York entertained a large group. Among his guests were Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Baylor of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. George Olds of Youngstown, O.; Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Lohman and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Mendenhall of Johnstown, Pa.; Mrs. A. Harding of New York; Ralph Bush, Mrs. Louise Eyles Philpott, Mrs. Carl Stuckrath, and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene N. Strom of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. W. G. McCullouch of Stamford, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Mark Newman, Mrs. E. M. Meder of Chicago, and R. B. Taylor of Louisville.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Whitney and their son, Janson F. Jr., have arrived in Miami for a brief visit. They plan to go to Havana before returning to Chicago.

H. Earle Hoover and his brother, Ray, arrived at Miami Beach this week and are planning to make a brief visit to Havana and then return here for the balance of the season.

Lent Won't Start, Easter Is Late; Elite Overtaken by Doldrums

By Mildred Jaklon.

THE poor society column! It depends on an active state of social affairs for its well being, and at present, it bids fair to fade away for lack of nourishment.

The quietude that has settled upon the local beau monde is nothing unusual for this time of year, but usually it is attributable to Lent, and the dearth of happenings is endurable because Easter promises a revivification of news with the return of the winter and early spring vacationers. This year, Lent has not yet begun, and Easter, away off in late April, seems a far beacon of hope.

Informal Parties.

The only consolation in a late Easter is that the possibilities of cold and bad weather are less, and the probability of a good representation of smart new spring clothes is greater.

Naturally, there is not an absolute stoppage of social amenities, but the dinners and parties are so small and informal that prospective hostesses cry, "O, it's nothing at all. Don't tell any one, or a lot of people I'm indebted to will be offended."

Thornton Wilder's coming here to give some lectures this term at the University of Chicago offers an opportunity for the lionizers to get into action during March, if he can be induced to submit to being féted.

Benefit Performance.

The Drama league is to give one of its distinguished guest luncheons for him, and there will doubtless be other opportunities to see the author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," and the newly published "Woman of Andros."

The two evenings this week when society will "turn out in force" are the Women's City club benefit performance of William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes" at the Erlanger theater on Tuesday evening, and the Arts club dance program on Friday evening.

The music committee of the latter has arranged for the appearance of Martha Graham of the Dance Repertory theater. Dinner will be served before the recital.

The Second International Antiques Exposition will be held in the Grand Central Palace
46th St. and Lexington Ave., New York
March 3 to 8—10 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.
Opens March 3 at 8 p.m.
WELL worth a trip to New York. The greatest collection of authentic antiques ever assembled—a veritable treasure trove of ideas for home decoration. The visitor will view an array of hundreds of magnificent, historical, romantic objets d'art—a beautiful and costly Exposition.

More Notables Flock to Dogs Than to Horses

Show of Canines Proves Social Success.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Don't let any one tell you that there has been anything startling about things social, this winter. New York hasn't been exactly dull, but there has been far from a gay whirl of events. In fact, one of the huge successes of the season was, of all things, the recent dog show! Every one, from Mrs. Sigourney Thayer and her almost elfin Alsatian, to Jocelyn Lucas of London turned out to view the canines. There was much more interest displayed than in the last horse show—all of which causes the social powers to look forward in fear and trembling to the next horse show at the Garden.

However, society will never desert the horses. In a little while now, the spring meeting of the United Hunts club will usher in the racing season in New York with a show of beauty and fashion that is almost impossible to equal this side of the Atlantic. Given about two days and the spring meeting of the Hunts is always the most brilliant gathering in the world—with the exception of Meadowbrook during the international polo. Nothing, either this or the other side of the Atlantic can compare to Meadowbrook in fête.

Grand National Draws Us.

But before the United Hunts and the Belmont society is concerned with the annual running of the Grand National steeplechase at Aintree, which is close to Liverpool, in England. Always run on the 28th of March, the National has become somewhat of an American interest since the time, several years ago when Stephen Sanford, better known as Laddie, managed to win the gruelling race with his famous horse, Sergeant Murphy.

Prior to that time society in America had not paid much attention to the Grand National. One went, naturally to the Derby and to Ascot. But Aintree was irresistible only to dyed in the wool horse lovers. Laddie Sanford, however, more interested in polo than in racing his horses, entered Sergeant Murphy without much hope of his winning. The unexpected victory gave America its first Grand National win and stimulated interest here to a high pitch. It was the precedent set by Laddie that caused A. C. Schwartz to set out and gain the second American victory some four years later, when his Jack Horner carried the Schwartz colors to the fore.

Since then there has been a group of notables who make an annual pilgrimage to England in order to be at Aintree when the Grand National is run. Most of the Aiken enthusiasts manage to get over, including the Geraldyn Redmonds, some of the Hitchcocks, Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Towne Kirby, and of course Mr. Schwartz and his wife, the erstwhile Craigie McKay of Pittsburgh. The Ambrose Clarks are, as you know, at Melton Mowbray with their Bostwick nephews, as are the Robert Strawbridges of Philadelphia and Viscountess Furness.

There will undoubtedly be a large American contingent on hand to view the steeplechase, even if there be no American entries. I hear, too, that almost every one is interested in the sweepstakes that the Bombay Yacht club has gotten up for the Grand National. It won't be as huge a lottery as the famous Calcutta sweep which is based on the Derby, but the lucky winners will get huge sums. No end of New York notables are paying out rupees in American money to take a chance of winning a fortune.

Theatrical Benefits Popular.

Having gone, as it were, "to the dogs," society has also gone in wholeheartedly for the theater. Since everything the notables do is linked with sweet charity, all the recent charitable fêtes have taken the form of theatrical performances, with the entire orchestra stalls of a new show being bought up by New York's elect.

The important theatrical party of the week was a performance of "Ripples," the Fred Stone opus, in aid of the Metropolitan hospital. That indefatigable grande dame, Mrs. F. Meredith Blagden, was chairman of the occasion with a junior committee headed by Alice Babet to hound one with programs, flowers and fags. With Allen were allied Louise Plater, Mary French, Georgia Hencken, Esther Bird, Cornelia Blagden, Marjorie James, Allen Stevens, Louise St. John, Marsha Allen, Louise Boone, Sylvia Beinecke, Eleanor Waters, Eleanor Kingsbury, Ruth Quackenbush and Barbara Scudder. All of them, lovely in trailing frocks, made themselves more or less popular by trying to sell hundreds of copies of the shop, hotel and cafe guide that was inaugurated last year.

Among those who were present at the performance were Mrs. Robert F. Adams, Mrs. Frederick S. Armstrong, Mrs. George P. Baldwin, Mrs. Raymond Brooks, Mrs. Russell A. Cowles, Mrs. William Henry Hays, Mrs. Ector O. Muan, Mrs. Elgood C. Lufkin, Mrs. Paul Plunkett, Mrs. Carroll J. Post, Mrs. Ray Parker Stevens and Mrs. Albert H. Wiggin.

Included in the patronesses were Mrs. L. Havemeyer Butt, Mrs. Amory S. Carhart, Mrs. Samuel Sloane Colt, Mrs. E. Roland Harriman, Mrs. Seth Milliken, Mrs. Hunter Marston, Mrs. Lewis Morris, Mrs. John D. Ryan, Mrs. George B. St. George, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and Mrs. Benjamin B. Thayer.

Ash Wednesday Approaches.

Lent is close upon us and with Ash Wednesday falling on the 5th, society will welcome the excuse to go into semi-seclusion. Not, you understand that the true lenten abstention from all frivolity will be observed, but in place of the weary round of duty parties, the leaders of society in New York will once more resume their private gatherings, of which little word is permitted to escape the chosen circle.

From now on the sailings for Europe will be on the increase. As I had feared would be the case, hardly half the usual number of social stars visited Palm Beach this winter. Even Dr. Tony Biddles Jr. did not put in an appearance. Those who went spent much of their time in Havana. I believe, however, that we shall have, as a direct result, a brilliant spring in New York, with a perfect meet at Belmont Park.

First Families of Palm Beach Will Attend Miami Prize Fight

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—If Phil Scott, the heavyweight champion of Great Britain, and Jack Sharkey, the Boston contender for the heavyweight crown, are at all socially inclined, they will be delighted to know when they climb through the ropes at Miami on Thursday that all the first families in Palm Beach's winter colony are represented at the ringside.

By land, sea and air, the swank population of this resort will wend its way to Miami to witness the Sharkey-Scott bout. This colony, including men, women and children, is so fight mad that it attends Miami's midwinter fisticuffs carnival en masse. Last year on the day of the Sharkey-Stribling bout, the town was all but denuded of its population.

Yachts, special trains, motors and buses will convey the population seventy miles southward to Miami. Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, who is now visiting in Palm Beach as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche, is going to Miami for the fight.

Musicale Is Counter-Attraction.

Considering that the majority of colonists would rather see a fight than eat when hungry, it took true courage on the part of Mr. and Mrs. George Luke Mesker to offer the fashionables a counter attraction in Palm Beach on the night of the big fight in Miami. Even if there is a general exodus from town on Thursday, at least eighty social satellites will remain to attend the dinner and musicale arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Mesker at the Villa La Fontana on Ocean boulevard.

As an attraction guaranteed to offset the fight, Mr. and Mrs. Mesker are offering their guests the most novel musical treat ever brought to Palm Beach. Any number of wealthy hostesses, including Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, Mrs. James P. Donahue, Mrs. Hugh Dillman, and Mrs. Henry Seligman have imported Metropolitan Opera stars, including Gigli and Rethberg, to entertain their guests, but the Meskers are introducing Andres Segovia, the Spanish guitarist, to the colony.

This is Segovia's first appearance in Palm Beach. His début and subsequent recitals in New York last winter created a musical sensation, and he was for a time the season's eighth wonder. Palm Beachers are not only willing to forego the fight to hear Segovia, but are not above begging invitations for the Mesker dinner and recital.

Stage Show Aids Charity.

The Mecca of the social colony on Tuesday night will be the Paramount theater, where the fifth annual Underprivileged Child benefit will begin at 9 p. m. and conclude only when the talent has been exhausted. A year ago the point of exhaustion was not reached until 1 a. m.

Mrs. H. H. Windsor Jr. of Chicago, the former Louise Hunter of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, is one of the celebrities now in Palm Beach whose talents have been drafted for this affair. Mrs. Edward S. Larsen, formerly Carol Dempster of the movies; John Emerson, author and playwright; Anita Loos, wife and author of "You Know What"; Sam H. Harris and Mrs. Flo Ziegfeld, the former Billie Burke, who is production manager, all are to have a hand in the performance. Anatole Friedland will be master of ceremonies.

Seats for the benefit sell for from $10 to $25, and boxes from $250 to $1,000 each. The box holders include Mr. and Mrs. George Rasmussen of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. James P. Donahue, Col. E. R. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Van Riper, Mr. and Mrs. Mesker, Mr. and Mrs. J. Leonard Replogle, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley R. Reynolds, Mrs. Alfred G. Kay, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Simon, Mr. and Mrs. David H. McCullough, Miss Nellie Cluett, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Mosbacher, Mrs. Henry R. Rea, Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. David A. Schulte, and Mr. and Mrs. John Shepard Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seligman are giving a large dinner party at their home, Casa Mia, before the benefit, which is always arranged by the Kiwanis club.

John Charles Thomas in Concert.

The Palm Beach Society of Arts presents John Charles Thomas in its fifth concert of the season at the Everglades club on Monday night. Mr. Thomas is part and parcel of this colony, as well as a baritone of international repute. He spends part of each season here as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Dobyne at Casa Beata. Mrs. Dobyne is Mrs. Thomas' mother.

On Wednesday night of this week Mr. Thomas is to sing at a musical given by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vernon Skiff at Casa Marcheta.

Mrs. Joseph B. Long of Chicago entertained at a musical and supper at her home on Friday night. Stewart Baird of New York, baritone diseur, appeared in a series of songs and sketches of his own composition. Mr. Baird has been a member of Mrs. Long's house party since her arrival here on Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Durbin of Chicago are joining this house party on Tuesday.

Among the guests at Mrs. Long's musical, which was held in the patio of her home, were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harrington Chadwick, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Thompson, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. John Dietz, and Mrs. Elden C. De Witt.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hayes of Chicago entertained at their home on the same night with one of the series of dinner dances they have been giving this season.

Mrs. Orville Thompson Entertains

Mrs. Orville Thompson is entertaining tomorrow afternoon at a tea for fifty guests at the Everglades club. Mr. Thompson has joined her at the Everglades club, where they have an apartment.

Mrs. Dorothy Hoover, who is a guest at the Everglades club, is entertaining at dinner there tomorrow night. The Sunday night dinner dances at the Everglades are among the most popular entertainments in the colony.

Charles Harrington Chadwick joined Mrs. Chadwick at Whitehall during the week, and Franklin P. Smith has joined Mrs. Smith at their cottage.

The annual society baseball game, always one of the features of the season, is to be played on the Poinciana diamond Sunday afternoon. The teams are recruited from society's athletic gallants with Lawrence C. Buller captain of the Philadelphia nine and Larry Doyle captain of the New York stellar aggregation. It is always the privilege and duty of Edward T. Stotesbury to throw out the first ball. Society inevitably fills the stands for this game.

Victim of Women's Whims.

Connie Lewis, who is a victim of women's whims, if ever there was one, has umpired this game since the mind of man runneth not to the contrary. Once upon a time Connie was the most familiar figure on the Breakers beach, where he acted as a combination police officer and beach censor. It was then Connie's duty to see that all women wore stockings with their bathing suits, and that such suits were of modest color, material and length.

But last season even the Breakers gave up the attempt to censor bathing apparel worn on its beach, and Connie got a job taking tickets at a dance hall.

ENGAGED..

MISS CATHERINE M. SEITER.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. Seiter of Logansport, Ind., announce the engagement of their daughter, Catherine Martha, to James Murray Royer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Royer of North Woods, River Forest. Both Miss Seiter and Mr. Royer were graduated last June from the University of Illinois. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and he of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha F. Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Feb. 3, 1867.

DEAR JULIA:

Will is out this evening and I will begin a letter to to you, which I may have to finish later.

Do you ever read anything of our Chicago doings in the New York papers? If so, perhaps you may have heard of the lottery by which our Crosby Opera house was sold. Mr. Crosby, being in difficulties, I suppose, and desiring to make a sale of the property, disposed of 210,000 tickets at $5 each. A man named A. H. Lee of Prairie du Roche, Ill., drew the lucky number, 58,600, and was apprised of his good fortune by a man sent there on horseback. Quite a spectacular ride!

Mr. Lee came to Chicago, resold the property to Mr. Crosby for $200,000, and returned to his native heath. Mr. Crosby made about $650,000 on the undertaking, it is said. Whether this will be the end of it, I don't know, for some of the disappointed ticket holders, since they failed to get anything for their five dollars, have wakened to the enormity of lotteries, and are threatening lawsuits. While it is probably true that the entire business was illegal, one cannot feel much sympathy for the losers of five dollar bills, who might have known in the first place, how little chance they stood of receiving the grand prize.

There is a good deal of agitation about conditions in Chicago. People say that vice of all kinds is rampant, and feel that our city is another Sodom or Gomorrah, or, as our cleaning woman adds, speaking of Sodom and Gomorrah, "some of those other wicked people mentioned in the Bible." I gather she thinks Sodom and Gomorrah are husband and wife. Col. C. G. Hammond, our eminent railway man and such a clever and interesting person, says: "In Chicago there is an everlasting emergency, a perpetual crisis."

Don't you dread the return of trained dresses, predicted in the fashion magazines? They may be very regal looking on her imperial majesty of France, but her case isn't like that of her American sisters, for people keep at a respectful distance from her appendage. With us common folks, parlor and drawing room accommodations are limited and 150 trains cannot occupy 18 to 25 feet of floor space. Even if one adopts the expedient of carrying the train on the arm, it is not very satisfactory, for it neutralizes the very end and object of it. If one must lose the fine effect of a long sweeping skirt, one may as well get rid of the superfluous length entirely and enjoy the comfort of a skirt cut an ordinary length.

We went over last evening to the dedication exercises of the New England Congregational church on the corner of North Dearborn and White streets, opposite Washington park. This new building is pronounced by many the most beautiful church west of New York. On each side of the doorway is a beautiful pillar of Scotch marble, highly polished, and above are three niches. The first of these contains a piece of stone from the place in Scotland where the Congregational polity was first adopted. The second contains a fragment of the rock from the pavement of the spot where the Puritans last worshiped, just as they sailed for the New World, and is inscribed: "Delft Haven, July, 1620." The third is marked "Plymouth Rock, December 22, 1620," and contains a fragment of the stone on which the Pilgrims first stepped, when they landed from the Mayflower.

The church will seat about 1,000 people. We saw a number of Congregational friends. Mr. and Mrs. Max Hjortsburg were there. Mrs. Hjortsburg was a widow, Mrs. Hubbard, before her marriage to Mr. Hjortsburg, who is chief engineer for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad. He has been giving much time to superintending the construction of the building, a wonderful thing for the church. He is a member and wanted to give this help. Col. Hammond is Mrs. Hjortsburg's father. The Blatchfords, of whom I often speak in my letters, are devoted members of the New England church, too, and it is due to Mr. Blatchford's efforts that these interesting stones have been obtained for the front of the church.

The E. S. Chesboroughs are active in this church, too. Mr. C. is an accomplished man of science, a pioneer in some of the important engineering work of the country. He gave Boston a water system, I believe, and Chicago will never forget his work in initiating her sewerage system. The O. B. Greens, the William H. Bradleys, and the Lyman Bairds are other Congregational friends we saw last night.

I must tell you to be on the look out for a photograph of little Martha. I have just had her picture taken by S. M. Fassett, our best photographer, and expect to send you a copy. Mr. Fassett is really quite a personage here. He recently gave a reception, which was attended by fully a thousand people, with the Light Guard band playing throughout the evening. He has brought home from Paris a fine collection of views of the most interesting objects in the French capital, and showed these at his reception.

I must tell you, before I close, of a most embarrassing experience I had last week. If I have laughed at Will about his noble steed, "Dexter the Second," he has quite as good a joke on me now. You will remember I wrote you I had bought some false hair to supplement my own, and was wearing a waterfall at the back of my head. Will and I were out sleigh riding last Thursday and as we sped [?] down Michigan avenue, Dexter stopped quite short, a playful habit he has. Just behind us, a young couple were driving in a sleigh with a spirited horse. This horse, being brought up suddenly, owing to our stopping so quickly, opened his mouth wide, and as his head was right over our heads, it is not to be wondered at that he caught my cherished waterfall in his mouth.

Dexter, after a moment of reflection decided to move onward, my hairpins were scattered to the four winds, and in a moment we were horrified to see the other turnout passing us, my chignon in the horse's teeth, while I tried to cover my embarrassment with a veil I had brought with me as a protection from the wind. Will laughs until the tears run down his cheeks, as he recalls the spectacle. I foresee it will be "argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest forever," as Shakespeare says.

I was interested to see in today's paper an announcement of Whittier's new volume, "The Tent on the Beach." I want to get it, for I do love Whittier. Do you like Rebecca Harding Davis' new story in the Atlantic? I find it very interesting.

Love to you and yours.
Ever your friend,
MARTHA S. ESMOND.

It asked that roads be made smooth and drivers be taught how to care for cars.

Recital Will Benefit Child Study Groups

Educators and Parents to Hold Meeting Here

First Week in March Is Set Aside.

By Roberta Nangle.

THE education and development of children is one of those eternally debatable subjects which seemingly never reaches a satisfactory conclusion. There are those who have high hopes and high sounding theories regarding the coming generations and there are others who, despite statistics conducive to a more optimistic view, believe that human nature will continue to register in the old familiar way and that tomorrow's citizens will be like unto those of today and yesterday.

The Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education belongs in the former category. As its name indicates, the organization advocates a thorough study of every phase of child life and of the relation of the child to the parent. Since it was organized, in 1925, it has linked together the scattered child study groups throughout the city with the aim of enlightening parents about the upbringing of their children.

In the few years of its existence the association has organized numerous child study classes throughout the middle west, coöperated with all other child welfare groups, published several books and pamphlets on parenthood and held annual conferences and other lectures by noted authorities in education and psychology.

Busy Days Ahead.

Week after next is to be one of the busiest and brightest of the association's career. On Monday, March 3, Giovanni Martinelli, tenor of the Metropolitan and Ravinia Opera companies, is to be presented in a benefit recital at Orchestra hall. Proceeds of the affair will be devoted to the association's work.

On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of the same week the annual Midwest conference will be held at the Palmer house. The subject will be "The Emotional Life of the Child." The conference will consist of three morning sessions of two addresses each, two luncheon sessions divided into six round-table discussions each, two afternoon sessions of two addresses each and one dinner meeting. The impressive list of speakers indicates that the subject will be covered with thoroughness and skill and includes such authorities as Horace Kallen of the New School for Social Research in New York, Augusta Bronner of the Judge Baker foundation of Boston, Jessie Taft of the Children's Aid society of Pennsylvania, Mary Cover Jones of the University of California, and Otto Rank, author and psychoanalyst of Paris.

President Hutchins to Preside.

Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, is to preside at the dinner meteing on Friday evening in the red lacquer room of the Palmer house. Other speakers at this session will be Edward Lindeman of the New York School of Social Work, and M. C. Winternitz, dean of the medical school of Yale university.

All previous conferences sponsored by the association have met with enthusiastic approval and have been attended by thousands of interested parents, teachers and social workers from Chicago and the middle west. This one, no doubt, will attract all parents who realize that emotional influences, as well as physical and intellectual ones, determine a child's general development.

The association now employs a field worker who addresses groups wherever needed and conducts classes three days a week at the downtown office at 535 South La Salle street. The officers are Mrs. S. T. Lawton, chairman; Miss Lydia Roberts, Dr. J. J. B. Morgan and Mrs. Alfred S. Alschuler, vice chairmen; Mrs. L. L. Thorstone, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles P. Schwartz, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Adolph Schaar, treasurer. A number of women's clubs and other organizations coöperate with the work of the association and will be represented at the conference.

CLUB ETHICS . . . .

By Maude Swalm Evans

"WE'RE going to have a big time at our club tomorrow," the Parko club delegate told some of her friends during the recess of the welfare conference. "One group of our members is determined to have another department added to our club, another group is just as determined that nothing of the kind shall be done."

"I wish I were a member of that club," voiced the East End delegate. "I love scraps!"

"I don't," put in the Valley club delegate. "They're too apt to get personal and result in hard feelings."

"Not so much, any more," denied the Parko delegate. "Clubwomen have learned control, and besides, we're copying after the men, now. We can have our differences and be the best of friends afterwards."

"A chairman can always rule personalities out of order," observed the East End delegate. "Personally, I get a real thrill out of the wit and maneuvering of the opposing sides. And others like it, too, for no matter what you say, there's nothing like a good scrap to bring out the club members.

"That's true," concurred the Lakeside delegate. "A couple of years ago we had a practically unknown author wished on us by one of our members—you know, friendship stuff. We didn't expect much of an audience, but a few days before the program much heated discussion was coming up for action some time during the meeting."

"And your house was packed from platform to door," guessed the East End delegate.

"Indeed, it was. The matter didn't come up, of course, as the meeting wasn't a business meeting, but the funny part of the affair was that the poor little author thought it was to hear her that so many had come, and she was touchingly appreciative—mentioned it several times during her talk. Yes, a promise of a lively debate certainly brings out the members."

Question.

"It is hard for me to talk before the club except when the members ask me questions. How can I train myself to give a straight talk?

Delegates in London Quicken Social Life

Dinners and Tea Parties Relieve Dullness.

LONDON.—[Special.]—The arrival of delegates to the naval conference has quickened social activities in what would otherwise prove one of the duller periods of the year.

There was a big attendance at the government reception at Lancaster house to meet the delegates to the naval conference. The prime minister and Miss Ishbel MacDonald received the guests, Miss Ishbel in a gown of moire green satin. A distinguished figure was Lady Londonderry in a black velvet gown with diamond ornaments. Lady Chamberlain in a turquoise blue satin, with horn rim spectacles of the same shade, was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Chamberlain, in a picture frock of pale pink tulle.

A dinner party was held beforehand at the Savoy hotel. Among those invited were the archbishop of York and Mrs. Temple, the Italian ambassador, Lord Balfour, Lord and Lady Bridgeman, Lord and Lady Lee of Fareham, Lord Passfield and his wife, Mrs. Sidney Webb.

Another pleasant function was the tea party given at Admiralty house by Mrs. Alexander for the women accompanying the American delegates. The American guests included Mrs. Dawes, Mrs. Stimson, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Reed, Mrs. and Miss Morrow, and Mrs. Gibson.

This was followed by a dinner to the same women given by Mrs. Dawes at the American embassy. Mrs. Dawes impressed every one by her simple charm and the homelike atmosphere she has created in the somewhat austere precincts of the embassy.

Metcalfes to America.

Maj. Metcalfe and Lady Alexandra Metcalfe are sailing this week for America, to be gone several months. New York and Palm Beach will see much of them, but whether they intend to push further west is not known to me. Lady Alexandra has had a strenuous winter, organizing the Christmas ball at the Mansion house for the "Save the Children Fund" as well as a series of dinners to occur through the spring for the benefit of the same organization.

Her sister, Baroness Ravensdale, has been hunting steadily at Melton Mowbray, and comes up to London only for the briefest periods.

Lady Curzon of Kedleston, who is on the committees of innumerable charitable organizations, has arrived in London for the month of February, with only occasional week-ends at Hackwood Park. She has been giving several bridge parties at her town house in Carlton House terrace.

Lord Wimborne's Party.

Lord Wimborne gave a pleasant fillip to the quiet social life of London with an amusing and highly prolonged birthday party. One unexpected feature was the fact that all of the women showed up in all black or all white frocks with the exception of three, one of whom was Lady Alexandra Metcalfe, who wore pale pink georgette. It made a novel and striking effect.

Among those in white were Miss "Baby" Jungman, Lady Castlerosse, Mrs. Archie Campbell and Mrs. Wilson Filmer; in black appeared Lady Curzon of Kedleston, Lady Milbanke, and Lady Gwendolen Churchill. Among the men in the party were Maj. "Fruity" Metcalfe, Lord Brownlow, Lord Molyneaux, Prince Ali Khan, Lord Glenconner, and the Hon. Evelyn Fitzgerald.

The Perfect Girl.

Hunt balls are in full swing, of course, and as popular as ever. At a recent one in Leicestershire Lady Londonderry brought a large party, including her eldest daughter, who wore a blue evening dress—forsaking the decorative and original picture frocks she usually wears.

Perhaps the prettiest person at the ball was Miss "Baby" Jungman, the daughter of Mrs. Richard Guinness. She came over with a house party from Grimsthorpe. She seems the perfect answer to the old and hackneyed criticisms of the "modern" girl. She is most attractive, interested in all modern movements and in everything that is going on, but carries herself with a quiet poise, with almost a touch of shyness, which is entrancing.

Lady Betty Butler, who was also there, is of the same sweet type—both of them miles removed from the hard faced, hard voiced protagonists of youth we see in the comedies of Frederick Lonsdale.

Miss Jungman's sister, Mrs. Arthur James, has much the same coloring and is a clever and amusing girl. One expected to see her at that ball, but she was spending the week-end with the Sitwells in Northamptonshire.

Dancing Floors From London.

Lord and Lady Beatty brought a party to the Fernie Hunt ball at the assembly rooms of Market Harborough, the famous hunting town. As all the dancing world knows, the floors of these ancient village halls are not the best in the country for dancing; too many stout boots have worn them uneven, so that it is now the custom to order special dancing floors brought up from London and laid for the occasion.

This was done at the Fernie Hunt ball, and the stern old walls of the assembly room were covered with green and gold hangings. The improvised grandeur did not, however, dampen the liveliness of the occasion. A hunt ball, with its mixture of old fashioned formality and modern informality, has a flavor not to be captured anywhere else in these British Isles.

Mrs. Ian Hay, who was Miss Kate Lewis of Springfield, Ill., is now settled in her English home, "The Firs," at Fleet, in Hampshire. Lieut. Col. Hay is a retired English army officer and has chosen a quiet village as close as possible to Aldershot, the military training camp.

Their home is on the edge of Fleet pond, which is famous in English ecclesiastical history for having furnished for several hundred years the fish for the table of the monks of Windsor—an honor which has now passed, alas, to prosaic Billingsgate! Mrs. Hay has one son—a perfect Anglo-Saxon type—who is 2 years old. The Hays do considerable entertaining of the military set around Aldershot.

Brilliant Functions Honor Candidates in Beauty Contest

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Public functions in the last fortnight here and on the Riviera have been devoted largely to fêtes for candidates for a European beauty contest. The Union Interallied gave the season's most brilliant affair, enabling its members to see and vote for candidates at a dinner ball. Judging from photographs, the selection committee did well to choose finally the first Spartan maid for this European prize.

It will be remembered that the much advertised Helen, later of Troy, also hailed from the identical Peloponnesus. Although the present beauty, Mlle. Diplakarou, is rather a delicate, graceful type, the Spartan women of the days when Laconia, the capital, was the most powerful city in Greece, were notable for their severe, imposing style for pulchritude, fitter, it was said, to pose for Minerva for Phidias than for statues of Aphrodite.

Two Types of Greeks.

In those days Spartan girls who took part in the vigorous games appeared unveiled in public until marriage. In Athens in the same period women of the upper classes wore white draperies, used much perfume, went in heartily for cosmetics to combine tints of rose and lily, darkened and enlarged their eyebrows, had a profusion of jewelry, earrings, and pearls on their neck and arms, and gems on their fingers.

Within the last week the Riviera season has been picking up rapidly. Many British are now going there. Also, Americans residing here. Among the latest departures are Mrs. Gustave Baumann with her sister, Mrs. Charles Lawrence Hutchinson of Chicago. The latter had planned to sail for America and spend the winter at Palm Beach, but changed her mind and is now makig a trip to the Cote d'Azur, spending a month at Hyeres and visiting Cannes.

Chicagoans on the Riviera.

Other Chicagoans now on the Riviera are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon C. Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McKay, who are spending a few weeks at Cannes; Mrs. C. J. Head, who just arrived on an Italian liner and is visiting the Riviera before coming to Paris, and Elizabeth Avery. Halford J. Morland, accompanied by his wife, who is known as a painter of animals, having studied in Paris, just arrived after a world tour covering 130,000 miles in twenty-three months, and is planning to be here a month. Mr. Morland is a short story writer.

Mrs. George P. Fisher returned to Paris after a visit to Switzerland, while Mrs. W. B. Erskine left recently after spending some weeks in Florence. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Newman are spending a fortnight here after a trip to Italy and Switzerland.

Swimmers and Golfers Gather at St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—St. Augustine will entertain nationally known women golfers and swimmers the first week in March. The two day swimming meet will be staged in the famous Alcazar Casino pool.

At the same time the girl swimmers are in action the leading women golfers will be here competing in the annual Florida east coast championship for the Mrs. William R. Kenan Jr. cup. The Misses Glenna Collett, four times United States champion; Maureen Orcutt, and Virginia Van Wie are the nationally known golfers who have won the Florida east coast title in recent years.

Mrs. P. W. Hinckley and her daughter, Mrs. E. Hinckley Mayo of Chicago, have returned to the Ponce de Leon after a motor trip through southern Florida. They were luncheon guests at the St. Augustine links clubhouse today.

Clubhouse Scene of Parties.

Among other parties given at the links were one by Mrs. P. T. Barber of Eau Claire, Wis., and one by Mrs. John E. Emery. Their tea guests numbered twenty. Among them were Mrs. Florence B. Paulson and her daughter, Miss Louise B. Paulson of Lockport, Ill.; Mrs. W. H. Smith, and Mrs. E. B. Ingram of Eau Claire.

Alfred H. Granger of Chicago had for luncheon guests at the Alcazar Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Granger of Ormond Beach, and Mrs. M. M. Granger of Zanesville, O.

C. A. Winningham of Chicago has arrived for a visit with his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Winningham.

Many guests from the Hotels Ponce de Leon and Alcazar attended services by Dr. Cleland B. McAfee of Chicago, guest speaker in the Memorial Presbyterian church, last week. Dr. McAfee is moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States, and is also a professor of theology at the Presbyterian Theological seminary in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arnold of Sandwich, Ill., were among the guests who attended a bridge and buffet supper given by Mrs. William C. Ort of Pittsburgh.

Contract Bridge Party.

The Ponce de Leon entertained their guests with a contract bridge party on Tuesday. Twenty tables were in play. Among prize winners were Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hollingshead of Evanston, and Mrs. H. G. Merrill of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Janney of Chicago, who are at the Ponce de Leon, were joined by William F. Rust, S. Murray Rust, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Brooks Jr., Kenneth Seaver, and R. E. To make your ironing easier—choose from these—

3 New full automatic EASY IRONERS all priced amazingly low

No experience needed to operate—the simplest ironer ever made. There is one on display at your EASY dealer's store. Go in and try it—iron several pieces yourself. Without obligating yourself in any way see how easy it is to iron this modern way.

THREE marvelous new EASY Ironers now bring full automatic ironing within everybody's means. They do away forever with the back-breaking slavery over an ironing board. All three models will do anything that the most expensive ironer will do.

Everything can be ironed on them—most of it without much practice. The operation is entirely automatic. A touch of the finger applies or releases 100 pound pressure. This constant pressure insures a uniform finish that cannot be duplicated by hand.

An ironing speed of 100 inches per minute—much faster than the average rotary ironer—enables you to do a complete ironing in a third of the time required by hand.

Yet, you sit comfortably throughout the entire ironing. There is no nerve-racking standing hour after hour on aching feet.

Pressing can be more easily done than ever before. A new, handy, quick-action roll stop device permits you to stop or start ironing roll under full pressure. Ideal for pressing pleats, drying out wet spots and pressing men's trousers. Another EASY feature is the throwback shoe on which you can quickly and easily steam velvets.

Among the numerous advantages are the instantly detachable shoe that reduces the lifting weight of the Portable and Wringer Post Ironers 13 pounds. These two models require less space than a vacuum cleaner when put away. 1200 watt heat element—full open end roll—non-rusting chromium plated shoe that needs no wax.

In every way these new EASY Ironers measure up to the high mechanical efficiency and labor-saving utility established by the famous no-wringer EASY Washers.

Now anyone can do rotary ironing

It's easy to iron with the new EASY Ironers. You can see and try for yourself without obligation.

Step into the nearest EASY dealer's store listed below and iron with the new EASY Ironers. See how easy it is to operate them. See the ironers of other makes, too. Compare them with the full automatic operation—the trim appearance—and the sensationally low prices of the new EASY Ironers. Then you decide.

See the safe no-wringer EASY WASHER that has revolutionized washing

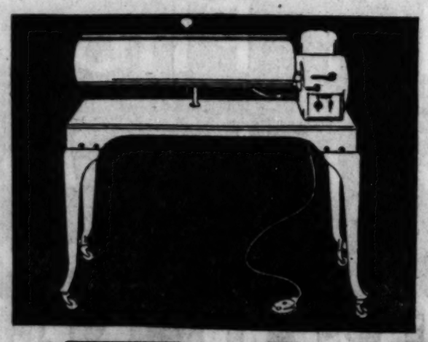
EASY Portable Ironer (above)
May be operated on any table. Light weight—easily stood on end out of the way. Occupies less space than a vacuum cleaner.



EASY Wringer Post Ironer
Attaches to wringer post of wringer type washers. Its extra light weight can be further reduced by detaching shoe. So far the lowest priced full automatic ironer made.
By combining this model with wringer type EASY you have complete laundry equipment at unusually low cost.

EASY Roll-About Ironer
Has both hand foot automatic controls. Foot control permits use of both hands continuously in ironing. Has 26 inch roll and all other features of EASY Ironers.

EASY FINGERTIP CONTROL IRONERS

Ministers Meet to Talk Over Church Problem

Sunday Schools Up for Discussion.

By the Rev. John Evans.

WHY is there such a great loss in Protestant church membership in the transition from Sunday school to church? Why do so many young people drop out of church life entirely after they arrive at some point in Sunday school experience? These questions are giving religious education leaders great concern. They state that although the Sunday school is expected to be the agency that brings young people into church membership, yet there are some observers who argue that it almost seems that much of the current Sunday school teaching actually trains the young people away from the church.

It takes little more than casual observation to note that a great majority of people who never go to church were for many years, in their younger days, faithful Sunday school members. The canvass of the Greater Chicago visitation evangelism campaign presents similar evidence. Many reasons may account for individual losses as the change from Sunday school to church is made, but in view of the fact that one of the prime objects of Sunday school is to train for church membership, it is reasonable to propose, in face of great general losses, that there is something wrong in the present day Sunday school methods.

It is frequently observed that Sunday schools are large, and well attended, whereas, in the same church, the attendance is pathetically small. It is said that this condition is most prevalent in small communities.

This problem will be discussed in a special all day meeting tomorrow under the sponsorship of the Chicago Council of Religious Education, affiliated with the Chicago Church federation. The Rev. Dr. Phillips B. Osgood of Minneapolis will be one of the principal speakers, and will relate how he has developed a simultaneous service of church school and church worship. It is pointed out, in Dr. Osgood's successful experiments in one of Minneapolis' leading churches, that children and parents participate in the same service and thus avoid the separation which seems to persist between church and Sunday schools.

Prof. W. C. Brower, chairman of the council of religious education, will state the problem as it pertains to Chicago churches. In the evening the session will be held in the Central Y. M. C. A. auditorium, when Dr. Osgood will be the principal speaker. His subject in the evening will be "Bridging the Gap Between the Church and the Church School."

Rush C. Butler will preside at the Sunday Evening club meeting in Orchestra hall tonight. R. Floyd Clinch, also a trustee of the club, will be on the program. Clifford W. Barnes is in California. Dr. Ernest Bournier Allen of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Oak Park, will give the informal Bible talk usually given by Mr. Barnes.

Dr. Hugh Black, Union Theological seminary, New York, and formerly of Free St. George's church, Edinburgh, will be the speaker of the evening. His subject will be, "The Outlook of Religion."

The Irving Park Y. M. C. A. chorus of forty voices, under the direction of W. Russell Evans, will present a program of sacred and secular music at the Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian church, Fullerton avenue and Geneva terrace, this evening at 8 o'clock. The soloists of the evening will be Miss Helene Grossenbacher, Robert J. Aiken, C. Victor Shults, and C. Paul McCaffree.

Five hundred students of Coyne Electric school will attend People's church, Lawrence avenue and Sheridan road, this morning. Dr. Preston Bradley will address the students on "Thomas Edison and His Religion."

"Christ in the World," an entirely new composition probably given for the first time in Chicago, will be the feature of the second monthly musical service at New England church tonight. The services of minister, quartet and organist are required for this new composition.

The Rev. John Rushton Heyworth, pastor of the church, in making this announcement stated that the thousands of residents of the near north side are being given a great opportunity to hear good music. The New England church thoroughly believes in the importance of music in worship.

Andres Segovia of Spain, whom Edward Moore, music critic of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, calls the greatest guitarist in the world, will provide the program this evening at the River Forest Sunday Evening club in the auditorium at Jackson and Quick avenues. Grace Nelson will give a piano recital from 7:15 to 7:30. The Rev. Walter C. Bihler will offer the invocation and benediction.

QUESTION BOX

The Rev. John Evans, religious editor, will suggest answers to questions of general religious interest in this column. Anonymous questions will not be considered. Contributors are requested to confine their questions to fifty words.

E. B. T. asks: "Why do Jewish worshipers wear head coverings in their religious services?" Rabbi Solomon Goldman, spiritual leader of the Orthodox congregation of Anshe Emeth stated that the custom of wearing head coverings is the continuation of the customs of the orient, where the religion was founded. The same courtesy is extended in oriental homes, where guests leave their heads covered. Following the same custom, it is still regarded as a discourtesy in some Christian churches for women to remove their hats. There is no religious reason for such habits other than the hearty desire to be courteous in divine presence as in the presence of human hosts. Younger occidental peoples have not had time to develop as definite forms in social amenities as have the orientals.

Thousand Churches to Pray for Primary

THE congregations of at least 1,000 churches in Chicago will pray on March 9 for the beneficent outcome of the primary elections. This was announced at a recent meeting of the Chicago Church federation in the Hotel La Salle.

"Chicago has got to a place where some one must take a hand in the proceedings," said Dean Shailer Mathews, chairman of the meeting. "The prayers of 500,000 Christians will do more than simply turn the attention of the people upon the election; it will stimulate the civic sense of responsibility in every right thinking individual in the city."

The church federation plans an extensive educational campaign in connection with the day of prayer. Efforts will be made to instruct churchgoers in civic problems, so that they can vote intelligently.

The annual festival of the Episcopal Diocesan Choir association will be held at St. James' cathedral, Cass and Huron streets, this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The mixed choirs of St. James' cathedral, St. Chrysostom's church, St. Luke's church, Evanston, and the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest, will participate.

The Rev. Dr. Charles N. Lathrop, secretary of the department of Christian social service of the national council of the Episcopal church, will be the special preacher at the 11 a. m. service of St. Luke's church, Evanston, this morning.

The list of Lenten noonday speakers for the annual services sponsored by the Church Club of Chicago, Episcopal laymen's organization, and held in the Garrick theater from March 5 to April 18, has been announced by Courtenay Barber, chairman of the committee in charge. The Rt. Rev. Campbell Gray, bishop of Indiana, will open the services on March 5, remaining until March 8. Other speakers and their dates include the Rt. Rev. Frank E. Leslie Glen, New York, March 31-April 4; Dr. Phillips E. Osgood, Minneapolis, April 7-11, and the Rev. John Henry Hopkins, D. D., rector emeritus of the Church of the Redeemer, Chicago, April 14-18. The services are held between 12:10 and 12:30, and include the singing of opening and closing hymns, prayers, and brief inspirational addresses.

The Rev. Alfred James Wilder, field representative of the Washington cathedral, will be the special preacher at St. Paul's Church-by-the-Lake, 7000 North Ashland boulevard, at the morning service today.

The Rev. Walton E. Cole, pastor of the Third Unitarian church, 5521 West Lake street, announces a series of Sunday evening lectures on the great figures of religious history. The course will cover all principal religions. The series began a month ago and has been arousing considerable interest. Tonight it continues with a lecture on "Zoroaster, the First Fundamentalist." The final talk will be given March 16 on the subject, "Mohammed, Prophet of Islam."

The Western Theological seminary chorus, Evanston, will sing evensong at Chrysostom's church, 1424 North Dearborn street, this afternoon at 4:15 o'clock.

Enlisting for life service as a nurse under the American board of commissioners for foreign missions (Congregational), Anna Lucile Lee, 509 South Honoré street, has just received appointment for work in the American hospital for women and children, Madura, India, founded in 1885 by the American board, and now treating over 2,000 in-patients annually, and nearly 14,000 new dispensary patients.

Miss Lee was born in Fostoria, O., and is at present taking a post-graduate work in Cook county hospital.

Pope Condemns Modern System of Education

His Encyclical Causes Much Debate.

VATICAN CITY.—(AP)—All Italy is debating the extent and force of Pope Pius's recent encylical on education, with particular reference to modern "natural" education.

This is taking place at the moment when Dr. Maria Montessori, founder of individualistic education, has begun in Rome her fifteenth international course for teachers and the fascist government has opened the first Montessori high school. She asserts, however, that the strictures of the encyclical do not apply to her work.

Teacher Must Rule.

Naturalism in education, or progressive education, as it is called in America — which means that the child's personality is not to be subordinated to that of the teacher and that the teacher must suggest and guide, but not rule — the Pope denounced as based upon a false foundation. He said:

"Every naturalist system of pedagogy which in any manner excludes the supernatural Christian foundation in the institution of youth is false. And every method of education which is founded, in whole or in part, on the negation or forgetfulness of original sin and of grace, and therefore on the sole force of human nature, is erroneous.

"Such are generally those systems of today of various names, which appeal to a pretended autonomy and unconfined liberty in the child, and which diminish or suppress the authority and work of the educator, attributing to the child an exclusive primacy of initiative and activity, independent of every superior nature and divine law, in the work of his education."

The pontiff concluded, yet more sharply, that these systems ruin the child.

Widespread Reaction.

"Those who pretent, to 'liberate the child,' as they say, are miserably deluded," he declared. "Instead, they render the child rather the slave of his own blind pride and of his disordered passions. These passions, by logical result of those false systems, come to be justified by the demands of a nature permitted to govern without check."

The pope's remarks have had a widespread reaction, because there are in the world tens of thousands of schools based on the systems he denounced. The Osservatore Romano, the Vatican daily newspaper, has had its columns filled with objections and replies from all quarters of the globe.

Dr. Montessori, interviewed by this correspondent, declared that the pope's encyclical did not apply to her method. She said:

"His holiness referred to systems of education wherein the child is left to work out his own destiny in education, The Montessori system demands enough supervision of the teacher to place it outside the pope's objections. In the Montessori system the child is not left so alone that he is without formative influence."

Dr. Montessori Praised.

Dr. Montessori has just received the pope's blessing on her work and the Osservatore Romano published a long account of the inauguration of her course.

The church itself, the pope said, makes judicious use of the development of individuality in the child through her schools.

"But if you speak of the necessity of active coöperation on the part of the pupil in his own education," he said, "this coöperation being gradual and ever more knowing, and if you intend to remove from the pupil despotism and violence, which is not, moreover, the just correction, you do rightly; but you do nothing new. The church has taught this principle and put it into practice on a foundation of Christian tradition, in imitation of the method adopted by God himself."

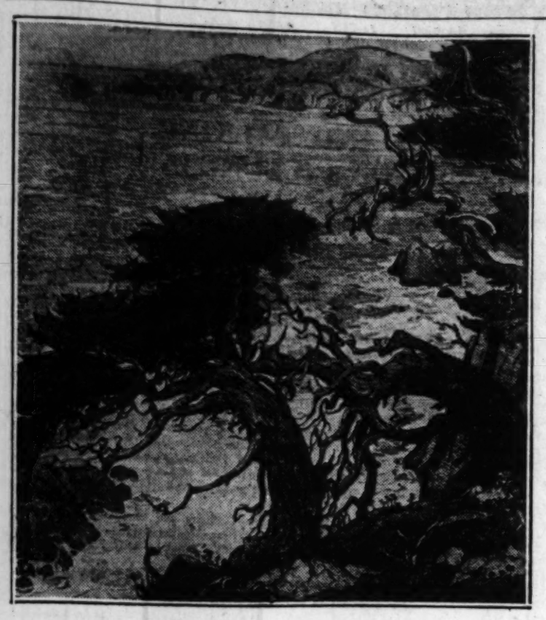
Etchings Arouse Keen Interest

Varied Works Pleasing to Every Taste

Include Fine Prints of Chicago Towers.

By Eleanor Jewett.



"FOAM AND CYPRESS," by Cornelius Botke, winner of the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal carrying with it $50, in the current exhibition of etchings under the auspices of the Chicago Society of Etchers, in the print rooms of the Art institute. The exhibition is fine and will be continued through March 9.

...exhibition of etchings given ...each year under the auspices of ...the Chicago Society of Etchers ...is one of interest to a great many ...people. This year, perhaps, that in...terest is keener than ever. The ex...hibition is varied and inclusive; there are ...styles and manners to please every ...taste.

...number of the prints deal with ...towers of Chicago. The Tribune ...tower is seen in various aspects, and ...also the Wrigley tower, the Palm...olive building, 333, and a number of ...others. Chicago, with its developing ...structure, is becoming more and ...more a city of magnificent flights and ...the full beauty of its shafts and col...umns is never more exquisitely re...vealed than by the etcher's art.

...The beautiful rendering of the ..."Sydney Opera House" by P. T. Jensen ...fires the imagination. Mr. Insull ...has had the plate for this and all the ...other editions so, except at his bid...ding. The etching will not be found in ...the print market. "Skyline of Chi..." by Anton Schutz is lovely; Wer...ner Schmidt has a brilliant piece ...of work in "Tribune Tower;" Alfred ...Hutty shows an imaginative "Flo...ods Chicago" in which the towers ...of many aspiring points in the ...city of the Windy City.

...Jules R. Pescheret continues the ...towers of Chicago in his "Rainy Night" ...and "311 North Michigan Avenue," ...two particularly fine etchings. Charles ...Morgan, a young architect whose ...training is an important factor in ...the developing of the plans for the ...new exposition buildings, takes us ...to Chicago in his "Jungle of Nets," ...a delicate and delicate business of ...tangled strands of rope that leaves ...one startled by its excellence.

Bird Etching.

...Emerson Tuttle, whose one-man ...show of etchings will be remembered ...as one of the high-lights of the season ...at the Anderson galleries, is responsi...ble for the "Ducks in a Dark Sky," ...one of the best of the bird etchings. ...The outward bodies — a duck loses ...much of its gracefulness as soon as it ...leaves the water—cutting through the ...air in slow and ponderous flight.

...Hibbard Winter shows a charming fairy ...subject, "Elves Picking Blackber...ries." Vernon Thomas offers two ...etchings which go straight to a child...heart, "Adventure" and "Sunny ...Day." George Soper has vivid ac...tion in "A Gallop in the Surf." Lee ...Townsend offers four etchings of western ...scenes. The "Sperry Glacier" is ...very beautiful and "Beaver Pond" ...is a fashion for dreams to congregate. ...It is still and peaceful and wonder...fully away from the rush and noise of ...the world.

...The first runs us across a continent ...and with his delightfully amusing ..."Corral." Elizabeth Telling is ...quieter and reserved in both her ..."Cousin Bert," and the fine portrait ..."Mr. and Mrs. C." Bertha E. ...Jones continues to please the many ...who are interested in her work with ...a group of magnificently executed ...color prints.

Number of Diverting Pieces.

...Among the exhibition of paintings ...and sculpture by artists of Chicago ...currently continues to attract atten...tion. The division of sculpture is ...smaller than it has been in former ...years, but a number of diverting pieces ...may be found. "The Cat That Walked ...by Herself" by Elizabeth Haseltine is ...delightful. The "Lily" by William S. ...Rice is graceful. Ruth Sherwood ...has a brilliant piece of work in her ...group of Dean Shailer Mathews." ...Grace Thaw Judson submits an inter...esting composition in "Life Study." ...The "Masque of Dionysos" by Oskar ...Hansen is excellent.

..."The Rabbit" by Maurice Bardin is ...so smooth and so eminently made to ...appear that it is all one can do to ...keep from stroking its intriguing ...fur. There is laughter in the air ...as one looks at "The Soapbox Philos...opher" by Carl Hallsthammar. Mr. ...Hallsthammar is a genius at wood ...cutting. He is the best delineator of ...wood and the cleverest interpreter ...of wood with a knife and a block ...that we have. The "Bronco" ...by J. Staton is a clever piece in ...silver coloring, a cowboy riding a pony ...hell-for-leather.

Among the paintings one that is apt to hide from you, though it is among the loveliest in the show, is "From My Balcony," by Charles A. Willimovsky. It is a tiny gem, perfect in color and atmosphere, and makes one heartsick with longing to see the Italian shoreline again. Another charming, though different, painting is "Emily," the portrait of a little girl, by Norman B. Wright, in which blue predominates and a suspicion of the Italian primitive prevails.

Trebilcock's Work Exquisite.

Paul Trebilcock offers "Mia Sposa," a delightful portrait of his wife, simple, sincere, and captivating. His "Antonietta" is rather lovely. The details are exquisite. The flesh glows; a certain hardness through the cheek bones is all that keeps the painting from being a creation of sheer beauty. One is checked in one's enthusiasm, however, by the heightened red of the cheeks and the wooden impression conveyed by the moulding of the cheek bones.

James Topping shows a lovely landscape, "With the Summer Breeze." The "Regatta Day," by Florence White Williams, is summery and gay and colorful, a charming incident. "Pont Neuf," by Frederic Tellander, is stunning. His "Chartres" is mellow and hauntingly beautiful. Karl Plath gives us a gorgeously decorative canvas in his brilliant "Cockatoos," four eager eyed birds, yellow against a green background.

Harry Pink offers a carefully painted canvas of a great deal of charm —"Reflection." A girl is at her mirror, slender, semi-nude, hair and beads and back beautifully done, a purple impression carrying the dominant color note; the painting is quite worth while. Tunis Ponsen has hard, bright color and a sense of animation in the "Yacht Club Pier." He is an advocate of sunshine and his summery canvases are warranted to dispel any attack of the blues.

Gregory Prusheck shows an exquisite "Still Life"; George Oberteuffer offers an atmospheric, tranquil gray street, "Church at Locronnon"; Pauline Palmer has a richly beautiful interior in "The Studio, Provincetown"; A. Lou Matthews offers the portrait of a young girl with a duck in her arms, "A Girl of the Catskills." The duck is a masterpiece, but there is something about the coloring of the girl's face and the quality of the flesh that is a bit unpleasant. Perhaps she is too sallow.

Picturesque Canvases.

Edward W. Mathews continues to fascinate one with his two simple and picturesque little canvases, "Pierrot's Morning," enchanting, and "Plant." Irma Rene Koen has sparkling color in her "Old Port of Monterey." The "Coon Hunters," by Marquis E. Reltzel is an effective canvas. There is blue moonlight and there are black trees; black figures of men and dogs and the yellow flare of lanterns. It is alive, real, and well done.

"Spring Flowers," by Kathleen Buehr Granger is lovely. The "Portrait," by F. R. Harper is charming. "Laughing Ladies," by Hallie Clarkson Frazer, is another fascinating canvas. The red mouths, the charming faces, the delightful costumes, the unaffected joy of the whole proceeding make it stand among the most attractive paintings in the show.

In THE TRIBUNE rotogravure section of Feb. 9 there appeared a reproduction of the Lincoln statue in Garfield park. The sculptor was wrongly given as George Mulligan. A note brought the error to our attention. George Mulligan is the son of the sculptor, Charles J. Mulligan, who is now dead. A Chicago book of reference gave the inaccurate statement which we now withdraw. Charles J. Mulligan designed the Lincoln monument in Garfield park.

At the Anderson Galleries.

At the Anderson galleries there is an exhibition of paintings by A. G. Warshawsky. The artist has lived in Paris for many years and has painted the streets of Paris in a beautiful and sympathetic manner. The "Notre Dame, Paris" is superb. The "Pont St. Michel—Rain" is lovely, and lovely, too, is "The Crossroads of Montparnasse." The "Café de la Paix" and "Avenue Champs Elysees" are two other canvases which make one's heart beat faster. Movement, color, atmosphere, romance, all these Warshawsky weaves into his unforgettable paintings.

Away from Paris he is equally at home. His studies of Breton peasants are interesting. The "Springtime in the Midi" is beautiful. "Village on the Mediterranean," "Rocks—Outgoing Tide, Brittany," "Evening Sun," and "Fishing Fleet" are unusually well conceived and executed with a knowledge of color and design that plays the one into the other for a resulting magnificent canvas.

At the Anderson galleries there are also lithographs and woodblocks by Rockwell Kent, which are intriguing and bear close inspection well. The two exhibits are worth seeing.

Exhibitions at Arts Club.

The Arts club closed three interesting exhibitions Friday. The silhouette work by Ugo Mochi was unique. It was exquisitely lovely, stimulating, and informative. His designs for the gates for the new zoölogical park in Chicago were extremely decorative and suitable. Silhouettes are not new, but done by the master hand of this Italian sculptor they are something to dream of.

Norman Jacobson showed a number of paintings, vigorous, human, amusing, bold. He is original, a modernist one supposes, but not messy. His work rings true. The second painter, Emile-Othon Friesz, does not come out so well. Fulfilling himself, he presents many points of attack to those not in sympathy with his ambitions. He paints water well. Perhaps one can mention "The Wake; Toulon, 1929" and the "Garden, 22" as being stimulating and beautiful, and leave it there, the exhibit being already a thing of yesterday.

The Palette and Chisel club announces an exhibit of paintings by Karl Ouren to continue to March 10.

An exhibition of paintings by Emile Zoir, a Swedish artist, will open Feb. 27 at the Swedish club of Chicago, 1258 North La Salle street, and continue to March 9.

The South Side Art association opened last Monday an exhibit of paintings by members. It will continue through the week.

The All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts is sponsoring the exhibit of 38 canvases by Adam Emory Albright at Revell's, which started Feb. 15 and will continue through the month.

Italians Declare Scots Owe Bagpipes to Roman Soldiers

AQUILA DEGLI ABRUZZI, Italy. —(AP)—Roman soldiers from this mountainous region of the Abruzzi first taught the Scots to skirl bagpipes and cook haggis, local historians admit.

The commanders of ancient legions always sent mountaineers to clean up mountain tribes and annex their lands. Hence the Abruzzi historians argue their ancestors imposed both their music and their cookery on the Highlanders.

To this day the natives make "boiled bagpipe," as the poet Henley called haggis, by filling the stomach of a freshly killed sheep or goat with vegetables, corn meal, liver, onions and garlic, sewing it up and boiling it.

Abruzzi bagpipers' latest appearance was when they squeaked their mightiest in the costume parade in Rome before Prince Humbert of Piedmont and his Belgian bride.

Chinese Strife Fails to Affect Shanghai Spirit

SHANGHAI.—(AP)—Shanghai, commercial capital of Asia, continues to trade, prosper and expand despite the deluge of revolutions, famines or what have you which have inflicted China for four years.

The city carries on with the same "what-of-it" attitude that characterized the place decades ago when it was little better than a mud flat.

Even the bogie of abolition of extra-territoriality has failed to scare away foreign capital. Money continues to pour into the city, new buildings go up and new enterprises are launched.

New Buildings Modern.

The annual report of the combined city governments—the French municipality, the International Settlement, and the Chinese city—show that 25,554 new buildings were constructed in 1929. Most of these were modern type Chinese houses, but in the International Settlement there were eight new apartment buildings, four new banks and 33 new business blocks.

The settlement list also includes 58 factories of varying sizes and types, three large cotton mills and 380 new foreign residences.

City Refuses to Worry.

Prospects for 1930 are not so bright, but the city as a whole refuses to worry. The sudden drop of silver and subsequent deflation of the Mexican dollar and the tael, monetary units of the port, has thrown cold water on several new enterprises.

Foreign importers and other firms engaged in overseas trade have encountered much difficulty in meeting their foreign currency contracts, with the result that business was brought to a virtual standstill. But optimism survives even in the face of this situation.

Vatican Restores Famous Painting

VATICAN CITY.—(AP)—The marks which four centuries have left on Michael Angelo's "The Last Judgment" are to be erased soon by experts working under Prof. Biagetti, art director of the Vatican galleries.

The famous painting, one of the outstanding works of the Italian master, occupies a space 66x33 feet on the altar wall of the Sistine chapel. It was painted from 1534 to 1541, in the pontificate of Paul III., and has undergone several changes.

Paul IV. at one time thought of having the masterpiece destroyed because of the nudity of the figures. He compromised by having the artist Da Volterra drape some of them. Pope Clement XII. had the remainder of the figures draped in the same way.

Restoration of the painting is part of a general undertaking whereby frescoes and other murals by Michael Angelo in the same chapel have been brought back to near their original state. The whole job is under supervision of an international commission headed by Commendatore Nogara, director general of the Vatican galleries and museums.

IN CO-OPERATION WITH THE DOLLAR STEAMSHIP LINE AND THOS. COOK & SON

SAILING FROM SAN FRANCISCO MARCH 14, 1930, VIA SS. PRESIDENT GRANT. RETURNING NEW YORK AUG. 5TH —144 DAYS OF GLORIOUS ADVENTURE AND THRILLING EXPERIENCES.

Jules Verne lives again! This time in immortal talking and motion pictures. Take part in them—see and help make recordings of strange lands and odd things on the other side of the earth.

Romance again sounds a clear clarion. It calls to you to see and to hear—to take part in recording the doings of the land of the Hula dancers, Hawaiian guitars and shark fighters.

We arrive in Japan in that most enchanting season of their year—Cherry Blossom Time. We film its little trains, little women and toy villages. Ponderous China, the land of Confucius and rickshas, mandarins and coolies. Singapore, and memories of Kipling—where East is East—where the hint of adventure peeps out of every corner; we make another glorious sound picture with the tour party prominently featured.

Egypt and shades of Alexander the Great—Anthony and Cleopatra—King Tut and the Pharoahs. The Riviera and the Blue Mediterranean; Italy's sunny shores; Naples and her overwhelming beauty; what a setting for motion pictures and romance.

First class accommodations throughout. Price $2890 inclusive.
